WORST STORM IN 26 YEARS PARALYZES WIDE AREA

Grim destruction rode upon the wings of the icy gale, which all of yesterday, last night and in the early hours of today swept New Jersey and the entire eastern section of the country. It was a battle of the elements. The might of the titanic forces of the storm gods—the wind, the snow and hail—contended for supremacy with the handiwork of man and won the far from equal struggle. Statewide the spoils of triumph of the storm gods can be viewed today.

The snow was swirled into huge drifts by an 80-mile gale which raged almost continuously for many hours. The low temperature of last night and the icy sleet which froze upon telephone and telegraph wires, added to the rigors of the night.

All public utilities, the telegraph, telephones and electric light wires and trolleys were paralyzed by the great storm. It was, in the opinion of railroad men worse even than the famous blizzard of March 12, 1888. The havoc is far greater. For the most part all of the telegraph poles along the line of the Central Railroad of New Jersey are prostrate. Wires are a tangled mass of wreckage. Poles were blown down, in some cases actually uprooted by the force of the gale and others were snapped in two. The wires curved sinuously about railroad cars, and twisted in every conceivable shape for miles, were encrusted with ice. In many cases the ice coated wires caused the breaking of the poles. There are about 2,000 telephones out of service in Plainfield today. The entire electric lighting system here and hereabouts is out of commission. No coal can be moved. Milk is at a premium among householders. Train schedules are a thing of the past. Plainfield, for the most part, is isolated from the rest of the world so far as transportation and other communication is concerned. The Western Union is forwarding its messages by train service which is irregular. The first train to reach the city from New York arrived about noon today. It was the first sent out since 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

The storm, it is feared, will cause great suffering among the poor. No trolley cars moved a wheel in Plainfield today, nor will for several days. It will be fully as long before lighting service will be restored. Lamps and candles are in great demand. Some streets are impassable.

The street department is utterly unable to cope with the task of clearing the streets today.

Two slight fires have occurred. The home of Robert Kenney, on West Third street, caught fire last night through the crossing of electric wires. The other was a chimney fire today, at 321 East Front street. Both were extinguished with little trouble by the firemen.

Every telegraph, telephone and electric light pole is down on South avenue, between Berkman street and Woodland avenue. Traffic is impossible on many thoroughfares because of tangled wires and fallen poles. Many windows of stores and houses have been broken.

Scores of Plainfield people were marooned in the railroad station in Jersey City all night. The food supplies of the lunch room were soon exhausted. It was a hungry crowd that reached home at about noon today.

Mary Elizabeth, wife of Rev. Levi U. Moyer, died yesterday She was 63 years old

Inability to get power to drive linotypes or press made it impossible to publish a regular edition of the Daily Press today. The Public Service Corporation give no assurance that power will be available before Wednesday or Thursday and until such time the local papers will have to be much condensed.

Arrangements have been made by which we can procure type to set a larger paper by hand tomorrow night, in case the power is not available by that time.

MRS. ISRAEL GODHUE

Mrs. Israel Goddue, aged about 65 years, formerly of West Fourth Street and Grant Avenne, died yesterday near Flemington, where she had been living for a few years.

FUNERAL OF SYLVANUS B. KEEN

Fnneral services over the remains of the late Sylvanus B. Keen were held this afternoon at his late residence, at 414 New Street. Rev. F. L. Green, of Hope Chapel, conducted the services

CITY SHROUDED IN DARKNESS

Aftermath of Great Storm is Told in Terse and Graphic Way.

DAMAGE IS GREAT

Telephone and Telegraph Service is Crippled — No Electric Light or Power—Trolley System Disabled—Streets Piled Deep in Snow—Railroad Traffic Impeded.

Fast bound still in icy fetters, which hamper the movement of railroad trains, block all efforts to operate trolley cars, make excursions about the city, for those who are compelled to be out-of-doors venturesome essays and dangerous withal, Plainfield is still today suffering from the effect of the terrific storm. Tons of watersodden snow are piled high on city streets and avenues. Crosswalks, in spite of heroic efforts made by householders and city employes to keep them clear, are ankle deep in snow and slush. Walking is dangerous, even where walks have been cleared, and conditions generally are disagreeable.

Masses of snow preclude regular deliveries of meats, groceries and other vitally necessary household supplies. Coal Coal dealers, try as they have to fill the orders given them through telephonic communications and personal visits of householders are in despair. It is impossible for teams to get to central points of the community as yet, although every effort has been, and will be, made to cater to the wants of those who are in dire need of fuel. So with the milkmen and bakers; the laundrymen, and all others who are usual and familiar visitors to Plainfield homes.

The storm, fierce and wanton in its intensity, gigantic in its strength has made man's efforts futile and impotent for the time. The elements have conspired to force the usual activities of the city to halt. The city is helpless in its icy grasp. Serious conditions, as regards the purveying of food supplies, are likely to confront some Plainfield families before another day is gone. Those who were so fortunate as to heed the danger of the community being isolated owing to the heavy snow, the wind and sleety hail, and who ordered sufficient household supplies for their larders, are envied by their less thoughtful friends and neighbors.

Plainfield was again in darkness all last night. No cheery gleam of street light welcomed those few persons who, of necessity, were abroad. The wind was keen and blew with violence at street corners. Frozen snow cut faces of pedestrians. The crystals were almost knifelife in their sharpness.

Passersby along the residential streets of Plainfield, smiled grimly when they saw the flickering light of some oil lamp, or mayhap candle gleams, from some half shuttered window, primitive conditions which he well knew would be found in his own home, because of the failure of the city's electric lighting facilities. To many the darkness of the last two nights brought discomfort, if not terror. Always there was the fear of fire. Unusual precautions were taken by Fire Chief Doane to prevent the spread of any conflagration. The firemen ot this city have kept watchful vigil over lives and property since the storm first broke. Fortunately but two fires have occurred thus far and those were but incipient ones.

The fire alarm system is useless. To place it in condition will take some time. Warning should be sent Fire Headquarters in case of an outbreak of fire immediately. Telephonic communication can be had.

Train schedules were far more regular today than yesterday. In consequence the several thousand commuters, who sleep in this city and go daily to New York to work, were enabled to reach their places of employment at something like a seasonable hour. There was some delay experienced in crossing the ferry to the New York side and once upon Manhattan Island there was more delay if the Plainfielder had to seek passage on trolley car or elevated train. But, taken as a whole, conditions as regards transportation facilities were materially improved. Tomorrow it is expected that there will be a still further improvement noted. By the end of the week, if not before, traffic will once again be normal, it is hoped.

Far flung battlements of ice and snow are piled high above the right of way of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, from Jersey City to Somerville, and far beyond that point. Thousands of miles of copper wire, wrenched from supports and poles by the wind and weight of ice, in which each strand is encased, are strewn along the line. In coils and spirals, in single strands, in a multifarious assortment of geometrical figures and intricate designs, these torn and twisted wires are to be met with, by passengers on railroad trains, on every hand.

The broad expanse of snowy landscape, from Plainfield to the Hudson, with the crystal covered, dangling wires, and the frosted cars, and buildings that one sees en route, make the scene seem to the beholder like a fairy garden in some enchanted, ice-bound land in a far northern latitude. Triangles, circles, broken segments of telegraph wire, all glossed with ice, sparkle crystallinely and with the cold brilliance and beauty of diamond ornaments when the sun strikes the ice-covered wires which glint with gorgeous and prismatic colorings.

Never, in all the history of great storms that have raged in this section of the State and country, say local railroad men, has such great havoc and devastation been wrought as followed in the wake of this elemental pillage of the wind and snow. From Somerville to Jersey City not more than 24 telegraph poles remain upstanding. Some have been snapped short, seemingly with the ease with which a human being would snap a slender pipe stem. Others have been uprooted from the frozen ground in which they were so deeply imbedded. Still others have splintered with the force of the icy gale that blew so long and hard, unable to withstand the forcible attack and the heavy weight of the pendulous wires, laden with the encrustations of ice and snow.

The big snow storm in the winter of 1893 caused great damage to property of the railroads, the telegraph, telephone and other great public utilities hereabouts, as did the fateful blizzard of the year 1888. But the damage wrought by these storms was, it was said today by men whose training gives them a true understanding of the situation, as nothing when compared with the results left as the awful aftermath of the last great storm.

Untold damage has been done. It will take many weeks to adequately repair the lines of telegraph, telephone and power companies in this section of the State. The cost will, it is said, run into many hundreds of thousands of dollars. It has been a catastrophe the like of which has, quite fortunately, never before been known. Chaos still reigns all along the pathway of the storm which mowed a swath Statewide, leaving wreck, destruction, devastation and an immensely heavy money loss in its awful wake.

Over a week must elapse, according to local railroad officials, before the signal system and telegraph lines of the Central Railroad of New Jersey are temporarily placed in fit condition to allow of the regular and successful operation of the road. The mass of torn wires, twisted, broken and hopelessly enmeshed and entangled, beyond all hope of straightening and repairing, will be allowed to lie where they were cast by the gale. Starting at the terminal of the system at Jersey City a little army of linemen, all experts in their particular calling, will load huge drums of okonite on cable flat cars and the cable, in which will be a score of copper strands, will be laid out from that point to the ends of the great transportation system.

The laying of this insulated cable will provide the necessary telegraphic facilities, without which it will be utterly impossible to move trains with the maximum degree of safety and on regular schedule time. Following this, and after six or eight weeks of the hardest kind of work, new telegraph poles will be planted along the right of way, cross pieces fastened and new copper wire strung upon the insulators along the entire route. The work will not take only a great deal of time but it will cost much money. Linemen are allowed $5 for each and every pole they raise, equik and set. The poles, with crosspieces and insulators, cost the railroad company, it was learned today, approximately $10 each. There are about eighty of such poles to the mile on the line of the Central Railroad of New Jersey. They are set more closely than is customary on other lines. This adds greatly to the expense.

Failure of the Public Service Corporation to furnish light and power to the manufacturing plants of Plainfield caused much trouble yesterday. Some of the plants found it impossible to operate in consequence. Such a state of affairs was noticeable in the case of The Plainfield Daily Press. Denied power to operate its battery of linotypes, and move its powerful printing press, it was only with the greatest difficulty that even as small a newspaper as was finally issued was set up by hand and printed. The little newspaper of yesterday was in great demand. Many of those who were so fortunate as to receive a copy of it said they intended to preserve it as a souvenir of the worst storm that Plainfielders have ever experienced. Owing to the storm it was impossible to circulate the issue to all subscribers. It was too great a task for the corps of newsboys to cover their routes.

Some manufacturing and business establishments in this city were so fortunate as to have their own electric plants. These were the Rushmore Dynamo Works, the Spicer Manufacturing Company, the Scott Printing Press Company, the Pond Machine Tool Company, Thompson's Garage, and others. But there was a scarcity of workmen yesterday morning at almost all of these establishments. Because of this scarcely one of these concerns worked full time. The Y. M. C. A. also owns its own electric plant.

Just when electricity for light and power will be obtainable is as yet uncertain. Officials of the Public Service Corporation said today that they were doing everything possible to repair the many breaks in their lines. If possible to do so, with the large force of men at work power will be turned on sometime.

Lack of power prevented Proctor's Theatre from giving a performance last night and the same will continue to be the case until power is restored.

Not one of the city churches held services on Sunday evening. The special meetings which were to have been held in Hope chapel this week have been postponed on account of the unfavorable weather conditions. The only service will be on Friday night, preparatory to communion which will be given on Sunday evening next. School children have been kept at home, the blowing of the fire whistle at 8 o'clock on in the morning notifying them that there would be no sessions of the public schools.

Mails were late in reaching Plainfield again today. Outgoing mail was also slower in its passage than is usual, the bad walking interfering greatly with the delivery of mail here and elsewhere by carriers. It is impossible to say when trolley service hereabouts will be re-instituted. Superintendent George Luhr is doing everything possible to permit of a resumption of traffic. All of the high tension wires are down between Plainfield and Perth Amboy.

To repair them will take some time, and too, the linemen are working under adverse weather conditions. It is hoped trolley service will be to some extent resumed by tomorrow. Just when is problematical.

Street Commissioner Gavett has scores of men at work endeavoring, although he realizes the task is Herculean and a superhuman one, to clear the streets and avenues of the piled up masses of snow. Snow plows are also at work in various sections of the city. Over in North Plainfield the Street Commissioner is doing all in his power to open up streets and avenues that are deep with snow and laborers are clearing crosswalks. Property owners both here and in the borough are to be censured if they do not have their walks cleared, and quickly.

It is considered little short of miraculous by persons who on Sunday and Monday saw the many poles, tree limbs and "live" wires that were scattered about the the streets, that no one was killed or injured through coming in contact with them, in one way or another. A falling tree damaged the veranda of Dr. P. J. Zeglio's house on Somerset St., also crushing in a portion of the roof of the dwelling. The heavy gale blew down many signs about the city and numerous windows were shattered by falling poles and the great force of the window.

The local telephone company is doing its best, according to its officials, to keep the lines open in this city and vicinity. Many telephone instruments are out of commission. But there are a host that are giving fairly good service considering present conditions. While the company has a large force of linemen and repair gangs at work about Plainfield it is in need of at least fifteen more men. Application for employment may be made at the local office of the company.

Owing to the few people who were abroad yesterday, and the utter impossibility of delivering goods ordered by customers, many of the stores in Plainfield were closed.

Part of the roof of the Scott Press Works was carried off by the gale. It also tore down the big twenty foot sign over the photographic store of Paul R. Collier, on East Front street. Snowdrifts still block traffic on the road to South Plainfield. Numerous chimneys in this city and in the borough were blown down by the heavy wind. During the storm the large windows in the rear of the lecture room of the Park Avenue Baptist church were shattered. Drifts five feet in height, and a mass of wreckage, consisting of uprooted and broken telegraph poles and hundreds of feet of wire, make impassable that stretch of the valley road between Watchung and Warrenville. It will be several days, it is said, before the road will be opened to traffic. Telegraph poles, which fell between cars of a freight train at Dunellen, stalled it and enchained it in a mesh of coiled wires.

Early Monday morning a telegraph pole fell across the roof of the North Avenue railroad station. The roof was partly crushed and the impact was so great that the wall within the building was badly cracked. Persons who were in the telegraph office at the time, which was directly beneath the fallen pole, were badly frightened.

The greatest difficulty is experienced by the Western Union and the Postal Telegraph Companies in getting enough competent linemen to repair the local lines. Street Commissioner Gavett notified one of the companies today that wires were down on Richmond street. He was informed that no men were just now available to repair the damage and that the fallen wires would be cared for at the earliest possible moment.

The high power tension cable of the Public Service Corporation, which runs from Metuchen to Plainfield, and supplies light and power to people in this vicinity is still down. Because of the danger, owing to the unusually high voltage this cable carries, employees of the company have been guarding it at Liberty street, in this city, and at other points, during the last two days.

Estimates made today placed the damage to telephone lines in New Jersey at fully $200,000. The lowest temperature for today is 15. It is believed that the storm has done its worst for Plainfield and vicinity. It will take a long time to recover from its effects. New Jersey is the neck of the bottle, through which all southern and western telegraph lines reach New York. With the bottle's neck broken the situation is dire.

All of the conductors and motormen of the Public Service Corporation have been pressed into service as snow shovelers in clearing tracks in this city of snow.

One of the worst sufferers from the effects of the storm was Muhlenberg Hospital. Lamps and candles are the only illuminants in that institution and because of the lack of electric power the laundry cannot be washed. There are 57 patients in the hospital.

Some local trolleys, which had been stalled for two days, were moved this afternoon through the use of a small storage battery equipment, at the Second street plant of the Public Service Corporation. No passengers were carried, however.

STORM AT FANWOOD.

Fanwood is cut off from communication with the outside world owing to the storm. Train service is irregular even today. All telegraph poles are down. There is no electric light and the telephone service has been discontined. Fallen poles blocked a train near Westfield. Its 150 passengers remained on board all night. Park avenue is blocked by two main line trolleys. Tradesmen report a shortage of food supplies. No freight has been received at the local railroad station since Friday night.

The Board of Governors of the Lincoln Social Club met at the home of Anthony Hophan last night. There will be no meeting of the club tonight.

No meeting of the Board of Health was held last night.

The Fanwood Council will meet at the fire house tomorrow night, at 8 o'clock.

CITY PRESENTED WITH LIGHT BILLS BY P. S. C.

For the first time since the Public Service Corporation was granted a street lighting fanchise here heads of local civic departments today received bills for lighting. The bills are for electricity in the City Council Chambers, the police court and in other quarters used by the city officials, which has been considered free service.

When seen by a Daily Press reporter this morning Corporation Counsel Charles Reed stated that no action would be taken in the matter pending the decision of the Public Utilities Commission in the protest which was heard by that body recently. It has been the custom for the Public Service Corporation to furnish a certain amount of free lighting to the city.

DR. SYMONDS TO LECTURE.

Owing to the fact that Rev. Dr. H. P. Nichols, of New York, has been taken ill and his physician refuses to allow him to keep any engagements, he will not give the last three lectures in the Lenten course at Grace church, March 23, 24 and 25. Rev. Dr. Herbert Symonds, vicar of Christ Church Cathedral, Montreal, Can., will take his place. He will speak on the topic assigned to Dr. Nichols.

MISS WETHERELL TO SPEAK.

The Bryant-Lincoln Parent Teacher Association will meet at the Bryant School, tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. Miss Wetherell, of the Y. W. C. A., will speak on "The Value of Physical Training for Girls." Teachers will be in their various class-rooms between 3 and 3:30 o'clock to meet mothers of the school children.

To the Public.

The storm of Sunday and Sunday night consisting of a [illegible] fall of wet snow and sleet, accompanied by extremely high winds, was the most severe experienced by the wire using companies in the State of New Jersey, dnring the last fifteen years. Repairs are now under way, and will be completed as promptly as conditions will permit. In the mean time, we ask the indulgence of those subscribers whose service has been affected.

The New York Telephone Company.

—There will be no meeting of the Board of Trade tonight.

MRS. EDITH FISK CHURCH A BRIDE

Becomes the Wife of Lloyd Ryder Stark, of Brooklyn.

Mrs. Chapman Fisk, of West Seventh street, announces the marriage of her eldest daughter, Mrs. Edith Fisk Church, to Lloyd Ryder Stark, of Brooklyn. The ceremony took place yesterday afternoon in the apartments of Mr. and Mrs. B. Arrowsmith Hegeman, Jr., at the Marie Antoinette Hotel, New York, in the presence of a few relatives and intimate friends. Rev. Peter Milliken, of New York, officiated.

The bride was given in marriage by her mother and her sister, Miss Dorothy Fisk, was the maid of honor. Arthur B. Collins, of New York, was the best man. A small reception and dance followed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Stark will spend their honeymoon in Bermuda and upon their return will reside at 105 East 54th street, New York city.

DISGUSTED WITH QUALITY OF GAS

Some good may come to Plainfield people as a result of the discomforts attendant upon the storm. President George S. Clay, of the Common Council, was so disgusted with the poor quality of gas which shed but a fitful light over the councilmanic assemblage, last night, that he declared his intention of seeking means of improvement. He intends to present the matter to the attention of the Public Utilities Commission. An investigation of Mr. Clay's complaint will undoubtedly be ordered by that body.

Ever since the price of gas was voluntarily reduced, owing to public demands, by the officials of the Public Service Gas Corporation, the quality of gas furnished consumers in Plainfield has, according to Mr. Clay, been getting poorer and poorer.

GIVE CONFIRMATION DINNER FOR HENRY MORTIMER

In honor of their son, Henry Mortimer, a confirmation dinner wos given by Mr. and Mrs. Harry Dreier on Sunday evening at Abram's Hall, on West Front street. Fifty guests were present. The dinner was elabate. Samuel Rothberg was toastmaster. He addressed the guest of honor, who, he said, at the age of 13, had been confirmed in the Jewish faith.

Young Mr. Dreier thanked his parents for their unfailing love and for the many things which they had done for him. Brief responses were made by all the guests. H. A. Abbrams spoke interestingly of the ceremonies attendant upon his friend's confirmation and paid a high tribute to the lad's friendship.

Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Louis Drellich, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob A. Fass, Jacob Abrams, Miss Lillian Cohen, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Sandberg, Mr. and Mrs. Hyman Adelberg, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Moses, Miss Rosie Cowan, Hyman Fass Morris Arbrams, H. A. Abrams, Miss Annie Schlitz, Kenneth Stewart and Andrew Carpenter.

Dancing followed the supper.

MRS. GEORGE LA MONTE.

The funeral service of Mrs. George La Monte, mother of George M. La Monte, State Banking and Insurance Commissioner, was held at her late home, "The Evergreens," Bound Brook, at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon. She died Sunday morning after a long illness. Her husband passed away several months ago.

FRACTURED HIS TOE.

Through accidentally striking the little toe of his left foot against a bathroom door, at his home, at 112 Richmond street, Joseph P. Burd discovered on Friday that his toe was broken. Dr. Charles B. Lufburrow is attending him. It will be at least three weeks before the fracture mends, it is said.

NO SUFFRAGE MEEETING.

Failure of lighting facilities will prevent the meeting of the Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield, at Columbus Auditorium tonight, at which meeting Miss Fola La Follette was to speak on "The Democracy of Suffrage."

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Glaentzer have removed from West Front street to Lafayette place.

MEET UNDER DIFFICULTIES

ROUTINE BUSINESS

Policemen and Firemen Ask for Raise in Pay—Bids for Stone and Feed Received—Reports on Various Petitions—Adjourn to Meet March 9.

Owing to the extreme weather conditions, it was just possible to secure a quorum at the March meeting of the Common Council, last night, and the session was held under difficulties. It being impossible to light the gas in the regular Council chamber, the members gathered in the committee room, where three gas jets, aided by an old-fashioned oil lamp and two automobile lamps, sufficient illumination was secured. The members present included President George S. Clay, Councilman Leighton Calkins, Theodore Martin, John H. Cose, F. J. Blatz and Charles C. Graves.

After a public hearing was granted on the ordinance to open Emerson and Sumner avenues, between Front and George streets, it was adopted on third reading. Bids were received from the Plainfield Trap Rock Company and the Watchung Stone Company for furnishing crushed stone, culverts, crosswalks, etc., and referred to the street committee, and the bids from the Union Grain Company and Joseph Harrigan for furnishing oats, hay and straw for the city departments, were referred to the fire and building committee.

Communications were received from both the patrolmen and firemen of the city, asking ror an increase in pay, the increase to average about $8.34 a month, with the exception of the class E men. This was referred. An auctioneer's license was granted to William Schorb on request.

William A. Coddington, attorney, representing property-owners residing in the vicinity of the Darling farm in Piscataway township, protested against the location of a sewage disposal works there. This was referred to Corporation Counsel C. A. Reed. Residents of Monroe avenue and West Eighth street asked for a fire box at the corner and that was referred to the fire committee.

The oaths of office of Armstrong Mulford, D. J. Courain and F. J. Hubbard, commissioners of assessment in sewer matters, were filed. A resolution from the Board of Trade expressing appreciation for the proposed better street lighting system for the city was filed. Jacob Sachar petitioned for sewer connection on Sachar place and this was referred to the sewer committee. The Playground Commission asked for an appropriation of $3,500 for the coming year and that was referred to the finance committee.

A communication was received from the State Board of Taxation, making suggestions for the improvement of the city tax map sent to that body several weeks ago. Among these was one that the key map be revised to definitely show the block numbers. This was referred to the finance committee.

The report of Overseer of the Poor Garret T. Dunham showed expenditures of $722.53 during the past month. Horace G. Adams, clerk of the District Court, reported receipts of $182.46, and a balance of $135.70 for the past month. Street Commissioner A. J. Gavett reported the granting of five sewer permits and Building Inspector T. O. Doane reported the granting of three building permits.

A resolution offered by Mr. Calkins, and adopted, authorized the transfer of $2,000 from the general fund to the fire fund and $1,000 from the general fund to the poor fund, and the appropriation of $400 for the care of the city dump for the coming year.

Francis J. Blatz reported back the claims of the J. D. Loizeaux Lumber Company on account of a sewer contract which has been taken care of and they were filed; also the petition of the Mutual Land Improvement Company, asking for the acceptance of certain streets, with instructions in the matter. The petition of citizens in reference to the improvement of Cedar brook was also reported back with an opinion from Corporation Counsel C. A. Reed to the effect that the matter is not within the jurisdiction of the Council. A similar report concerning the requests in reference to complaints being made by Jefferson avenue.

PATIENTS BEATEN IN STATE HOSPITAL

Plainfield Inmates Give Corroborative Testimony to Authorities.

Trenton, March 3.—Facts of an assault on two inmates brought to the attention of the hospital authorities upon examination of Samuel R. Manning and Leslie Lines, two patients from Plainfield, resulted in the arrest of Charles M. Brown, an attendant at the State Hospital, this city. Their accounts of the attack was corroborated by other employes of the institution.

Brown is charged with beating and choking two inmates last Thursday. He has been held in $400 bail. The charge was made against him by Dr. Henry A. Cotton, medical director of the hospital.

U. S. EXPRESS TO QUIT BUSINESS, IS REPORT

Cannot Compete With Parcel Post, Is Cause.

New York, March 3.—It was learned that the United States Express company would shortly wind up its affairs. The statement was made by Dow, James & Co. that there "were excellent reasons for believing that the recent strength and activity of United States Express stock are significant of a determination on the part of the largest stockholders to put the company into liquidation."

Charles C. Tegethoff, one of the directors of the company, representing the Harriman interests, when asked concerning the report of liquidation said:

"The directors have taken no such action, and I know of none that will be taken."

Joseph W. Harriman, another director, denied knowledge of any liquidation movement. Frank H. Platt, counsel for the company and one of its directors, refused to discuss the rumor without permission from D. I. Roberts, the president. Mr Roberts refused either to confirm or deny the report.

DR. HURLBUT'S BOOK REACHES 300,000 SALES

"The Story of the Bible," by Rev. Dr. Jesse Lyman Hurlburt, has just passed the 300,000 sales mark. Reports from the publishers indicate that the book of this former Plainfield clergyman attains a larger sale each year. Dr. Hurlburt has no royalty on the book. It would have made him rich had he one.

BOTH EDUCATION BOARDS POSTPONE THEIR MEETINGS

The regular monthly meeting of the Plainfield Board of Education and the special session of the North Plainfield Board, scheduled to be held last night, were postponed owing to the lack of lights in the school buildings.

Notices were issued to the various members yesterday and a postponed meeting of each body will be held as soon as the Public Service Corporation turns on the electric current in this city.

MAYOR PERCY H. STEWART FAILED TO APPOINT CAPTAIN

Mayor Percy H. Stewart did not name a captain for the fire department last night, as expected. He did not attend the meeting, being detained elsewhere and Councilman A. D. Edgar, chairman of the fire committee was also absent and nothing was said about the matter.

It is expected that the appointment will be made at the meeting Monday night to which time Council adjourned.

BOARD OF ASSESSORS BUSY.

Thomas J. Hughes, DeWitt C. Ivins, John G. McLaughlin and Henry Liefke, comprising the new Board of Assessors, have been holding frequent meetings of late with a view of planning the work of assessment throughout the city. All of the board except Mr. Hughes are members of Mayor Percy H. Stewart's special commission for the equalization of taxes and they should be pretty well informed on property matters.

Series Postponed.

The Elks' League contests scheduled to be rolled tonight at Rahway, between the locals and the quintet of that place has been indefinitely postponed.

STORM CRIPPLES TRAFFIC IN STATE

Commuters Suffer by Blizzard; Towns In Darkness.

FIRE PERIL IS MENACING.

Volunteers Go Around Looking For Blazes—Wires Down—Schools, Stores and Factories In Newark Closed Yesterday—Condition In Oranges Acute. Penn Trains Running on Time.

Newark, N. J., March 3.—Factories, department stores and public schools were closed here because of the storm. The city was in darkness because of fallen wires and poles. Only Broad and Market streets and Springfield avenue were lighted.

Most of the factories were closed because not enough employees reported for work to keep them going. In other instances it was lack of power where electricity is used.

Jersey City, Hoboken and Bayonne and the seven smaller municipalities in the northern part of Hudson county are still digging themselves out.

Bayonne was cut off from Jersey City from midnight Sunday until noon yesterday, the Greenville and Jackson avenue trolley lines being blocked. Over one-half the Montgomery street line in Jersey City did no business for nearly the same period. No cars have run on the Turnpike line between Jersey City and Newark since Sunday afternoon.

In West New York the officials of the Public Service railway did not attempt to run a snowplow, and the town had no trolley service. Two weeks ago the crew of a sweeper was arrested by order of the town's street superintendent because the snow was whirled on to cross walks, and the company did not care to subject its employees to the danger of arrest again.

The West Hudson county towns of Harrison, Kearny, East Newark and Arlington were still without electric lights last night. Nearly 300 telephones were crippled. The fire alarm systems were not working, and volunteer firemen patrolled the streets to look for fires.

With the municipal lighting plant out of order, telephone and electric light poles down and trolleys tied up, the Oranges are in a desperate condition.

Residents depending on the farmers of the Orange mountains for their milk supply for the most part had to go without cream in their coffee. The roads over the First mountain are in such a condition as to prevent travel, and it will be several days before the farmers will venture away from their homes.

The coal shortage is more acute than ever. The small supply on hand is spoken for and deliveries difficult.

Hackensack, N. J., March 3.—Few trains were run yesterday on the Erie branches, the Susquehanna and Western and the New Jersey and New York. Hundreds of commuters refused to take a chance on being stalled between here and New York and remained at home. All the schools were closed, and six lectures and entertainments were postponed.

New Brunswick, N. J., March 3.—Vice President Thomas R. Marshall was stalled here from 11:20 Sunday night until 3:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon on a Pennsylvania express which was held up opposite the depot. The track was blocked by fallen poles and a tangle of wires. The vice president remained in his car and accepted the situation philosophically. He received several callers. The balance of his trip to Washington was made without special incident.

It was announced that the Pennsylvania trains are now running on schedule time.

COMING EVENTS.

Tonight—Lecture Grace church. Women's Association Meeting, Congregational church. Parent-Teacher Association meeting, Bryant School.

Tomorrow night—Lecture Grace church. Joint Sewage Committee, Common Council.

Thursday night—Young People's Branch meets, W. C. T. U. Bowling, Elks' Club League.

Sunday night—State Elks meeting here.

AUTO TRUCK STALLED.

A larger Sauer auto truck, belonging to H. Clifford Smith, of Dunellen, became stalled in the snow at Grant avenue and West Front street, on Monday night. In attempting to run the car out under its own power, all of the gears on the big machine were stripped. The car still remains in the street and will probably have to be removed by horses.

LECTURE RECITAL OFF.

Mrs. Nellie Strong Stevenson was unable to give a lecture-recital before the art department of the Monday Afternoon Club yesterday afternoon on "Strauss-Debussy" on account of the storm.

WALD. CHRISTOFFERSON DEAD IN 70TH YEAR

Waldemar Christofferson, one of the best known landscape gardeners in this vicinity, died yesterday morning at his home on Sherman avenue, where he had resided for many years. He had been ill for several months but the end was unexpected. Mr. Christofferson was about 70 years old.

He leaves surviving him two sons and two daughters. One of the daughters is Mrs. William Heeren, with whom he lived, and one of his sons, Victor Christofferson, is an electrical contractor, at Perth Amboy. Funeral arrangements will be made later.

YOUNG PEOPLE ENJOY STRAWRIDE AND DANCE

A number of young people enjoyed a strawride and dance on Saturday evening, the affair being arranged by Dr. and Mrs. Edwin I. Smalley, of Central avenue. The party left Plainfield at 7:30 o'clock in the evening for Union Village, where they engaged the rooms at a local clubhouse, enjoying a dance until a late hour. The young people reached home ahead of the storm.

Those in the party were the Misses Myrtle Reynolds, Nell Merrill, Isabelle Randolph, Anna Boss and Howard Boss, Charles Harvey, Mr. and Mrs. Wendell Mosher, Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Randolph and Dr. and Mrs. Edwin I. Smalley.

WELL-KNOWN HOTEL MAN PASSES AWAY

Charles F. Wildey, long proprietor of the Herald Square and the old Cosmopolitan hotels in New York, died suddenly on Sunday night. He was found dead when one of his family went to his room to summon him for breakfast. Mr. Wildey, with his family, lived in Plainfield for many years. The family home was the old Stelle homestead on Central avenue.

Mr. Wildey leaves two sons and three daughters. The daughters are Mrs. Morris J. Dumont and Mrs. Hart Farlee, both of this city, and Mrs. Richard Waring, whose home is in Texas. Another daughter, Mrs. Vaughn McGee, died about a year ago, shortly after her return to this country from China.

One of Mr. Wildey's sons, Charles F. Wildey, Jr., has long been associated with him in the management of the two New York hotels mentioned. The other son is an actor.

C. H. HUXLEY, PIONEER TROLLEYMAN, DEAD

Charles F. Huxley, one of the pioneer trolley car conductors on the local line when it was first installed twenty-two years ago, died this morning at his home at 717 South avenue, following a long illness from the infirmities of age. He had been ill for a long time and for the past week had been unconscious. Mr. Huxley was born in England 86 years ago. He came to Plainfield from Albany, N. Y., in 1890. When the Plainfield Street Railway was first operated he was one of the few conductors and he remained with the company for ten years, leaving finally o naccount of his advanced age. He was a member of St. Stephen's church and was well known and liked throughout the city. He leaves surviving him a wife and one son, the whereabouts of the latter being unknown.

Funeral arrangements have not yet been made.

OPENING HOTEL NELSON.

Many Plainfielders attended the opening of the newly renovated Hotel Nelson, at New Market, of which Rudolph Kampf, is the propietor, last Saturday night. Auto busses carried the persons who were present from this city. The opening was considered highly successful, from the viewpoint of both the host and his guests and believed to augur well for the success of the hostelry.

A NARROW ESCAPE.

Charles Sheelen, of Fanwood, had a narrow escape from death or serious injury yesterday when a large telephone pole near his home toppled over and struck a barn in which he was doing some chores. Mr. Sheelen heard the pole crack and rushed out just in time to escape being hit by flying splinters of wood as the pole struck the barn.

PASTOR'S AID ELECTS.

The Pastor's Aid Society of the First Presbyterian church has elected these officers for the coming year: President, Mrs. J. M. Bettman; vice-presidents, Mrs. C. E. Bond, Mrs. Alvin E. Hoagland and Mrs. W. J. Bell; treasurer, Mrs. Freeman J. Shotwell; secretary, Mrs. H. W. Satterfield. The society will give a thimble party March 10.

Leal School basketball players will play North Plainfield High School in Saengerbund Hall, tomorrow afternoon. This is one of the regular games of the Interscholastic League schedule.

An assortment of gold medals arrived in town today and are now on exhibition in Paul Collier's store. From this array the N. P. H. S. league champions will choose their prizes.

Christy Mathewson today signed with the New York Giants. He received a Federal League offer of $65,000, but turned it down cold.

Columbia Grammar School beat Berkeley Hall 27 to 11 on the latter's court yesterday. Both teams were defeated by Leal School this season.

Despite the storm of yesterday the National Indoor Championships were run off in Madison Square Garden, last night. Many champions competed and old records were smashed to smithereens.

Lester Mann, centrefielder for the Boston Nationals, in a statement to a Daily Press correspondent, stated today that Jack Martin would not have a chance to make the shortstop position on the Hub team with Maranville as a rival this season. Mann says that Jack will be farmed out before the spring training season is over.

Both the girls' basketball teams of the North Plainfield High School will be banqueted in the Somerset School by the faculty Thursday night.

Charlie Holman, Dan Michealson and Bill Currie, who played against N. P. H. S. in a Towsend Harris uniform, have been selected as first and second string men on the All New York Scholastic team.

Frank Bruggy, a Plainfield baseball player who has been a member of the Gloversville basketball team of the New York State League during the winter months, has dropped to tenth place in the individual score standing. In 48 games he has scored 303 points. He has tallied 137 field goals and 29 fouls.

MRS. GILBERT RETURNS.

Mrs. Anna S. Gilbert, wife of Joseph Gilbert, a lawyer, of Brooklyn, has returned home after a stay of several weeks at the home of Dr. Berhard Levinson, of West Front street. Mrs. Gilbert suffered a nervous breakdown several months ago, and after undergoing various treatments she determined to visit Dr. Levinson, a former neighbor of the Gilberts. Under his treatment she improved to such an extent that she has been able to return home.

MARRIED.

STARK—CHURCH—On March 2nd, at New York city, N. Y., by the Rev. Peter H. Milliken, Edith Fisk Church, daughter of Mrs. Chapman Fisk to Lloyd Ryder Stark.

IN CHANCERY OF NEW JERSEY.

To Charles D. Robinson, Receiver, Etc., and The Mercantile Co-Operative Bank: By virtue of an order of the Court of Chancery of New Jersey, made on the day of the date hereof, in a cause wherein Catherine Dezendorf is complainant, and you Charles D. Robinson, Receiver, Etc., and The Mercantile Co-Operative Bank, are defendants, you are required to appear, plead, answer or demur to the bill of said complainant, on or before the 20th day of March next, or the said bill will be taken as confessed against you.

The said bill is filed for the purpose of quieting title to certain lands in the City of Plainfield, in the County of Union, and State of New Jersey, bounded and described as follows, to wit:

Known as Lots Nos. 30 and 31, Block D, on a map of 264 lots, owned by Watson Whittlesey, at Netherwood Station, in the City of Plainfield, Union County, N. J., surveyed Sept., 1891, by F. A. Dunham, C. E., and Surveyor of Plainfield, N. J., and filed for record in the Register's Office of Union county, N. J., Sept., 1891. Beginning at a point on the west line of George Street 154 75-100 feet northerly from the northwest corner of George Street and Jackson Avenue; running thence northwesterly in a line parallel with the north line of Jackson Avenue 110 feet; thence northeasterly in a line parallel with the west line of George Street, 50 feet; thence southeasterly to the west line of George Street, 110 feet; thence southwesterly along the west line of George Street, 50 feet, to the place of beginning.

Also, All of Lots 32 and 33, in Block D, on a Map of 261 lots owned by Watson Whittlesey, located at Netherwood Station, in the City of Plainfield, County of Union, State of New Jersey, surveyed August, 1891, by F. A. Dunham, Engineer of Plainfield, N. J., and filed for record in the Register's Office of Union County, N. J., Sept., 1891, these tracts or parcels of land and premises, hereinafter particularly described. Beginning at a point on the west line of George Street, one hundred and fifty-four and seventy-five hundredths (154 75-100) feet southwesterly from the southwest corner of George Street and Netherwood Avenue; running thence northwesterly in a line parallel with the southerly line of Netherwood Avenue, one hundred and ten (110) feet; thence southwesterly in a line parallel with the west line of George Street, fifty (50) feet, thence southeasterly to the west line of George Street, one hundred and ten (110) feet; thence northeasterly along the west line of George Street, fifty (50) feet, to the place of beginning.

And you, Charles D. Robinson, Receiver, Etc., are made a defendant because deed made by you as Sole Permanent Ancillary Receiver of the aforesaid Mercantile Co-Operative Bank to Catherine Dezendorf and her husband, July 21, 1902, was a quit-claim deed and intended to convey the title, this action being brought to quiet the title to the property and to have the said deed declared to be a sufficient conveyance. And you, The Mercantile Co-Operative Bank, are made a defendant because your receiver aforesaid failed to use a deed with the proper words of conveyance as aforesaid, this action being brought to give validity to such deed to pass title.

Dated January 29, A. D. 1914.

CITY FACES A COAL SHORTAGE

FILLING SMALL ORDERS

Not More Than One Ton to a Family Being Delivered Today—Depending on Railroad for Shipments Which Have Been Delayed.

Danger of a coal famine confronts Plainfield. Dealers in this city, for the most part, have but little coal on hand. Efforts are being made today by some coal firms to secure sufficient coal from rival concerns with which to fill a part of the many orders that they have on hand. The recent storm has made the need of additional fuel felt by householders. Many bins are almost empty in Plainfield homes. The demand for fuel today is far in excess of the visible supply, some local dealers declared.

While there is every reason to believe that coal will shortly be received by dealers here it is known that freight shipments will not be allowed, in all likelihood, to take precedence over the movement of passenger traffic, by railroad heads.

Dealers here were reluctant to enter into any discussion of the matter of a possible shortage. It was freely admitted, however, that there was a dearth of coal in the various city yards. One dealer declared the last he had heard, the shipment of coal which he had ordered was reported on February 24. Those local coal merchants who have some fuel still on hand which they are able to sell to customers in small lots are out of some sizes, and these are, it is said, as a general thing, just the sizes that customers desire. Egg, stove, nut and pea coal are most in demand here.

Relief will be afforded as soon as freight is moved with any degree of celerity on the Central Railroad of New Jersey: Some local factories in Plainfield will, it is said, experience difficulty in operating on full time, unless their supply of coal is soon replenished. Without sufficient fuel manufacturing plants are helpless.

Comparatively few residents have, as yet, suffered to any considerable extent because of the shortage of fuel. What orders are taken and filled, however, are reduced in quantity and deliveries are slow.

It is not wholly due to the recent storm that this city faces a possible coal famine. The unseasonably mild weather of four weeks ago, is held to be primarily the cause of the present condition. At that time many wholesale dealers began to deplete their supply of coal which they had in storage in their yards and elsewhere, in anticipation of the fifty cents a ton drop in the price of the commodity, which is due, as usual, on April 1. They had, it is said, fairly well accomplished their purpose when the weather changed, and this city and State was held in the grip of zero weather, with ice and snow. Plainfield residents, too, were misled by the mildness of the weather a few weeks since. Many allowed their fuel supply to run low. Too late, they awakened to the fact that their bins were nearly empty. They rushed orders for a fresh supply to the local dealers and hence the dealers have, in some cases, been swamped with orders that as yet cannot all be filled.

Up in the coal regions the mines are said to have been worked on only half time for weeks. Difficulty has been experienced in getting men to load the cars and handle them owing to the extreme weather. Few, if any, dealers in Plainfield, will agree to deliver more than one load of coal today to a family. Orders are being taken subject to delays of from three days to a week, it is said. One local dealer declared that present conditions were especially hard on the sellers of coal because of all the difficulty and expense of cartage. Because of icy streets one team can do less than one-half its normal work. Extra teams are hard to secure, at any price. Dealers here are not, it is said, attempting to make any profit, but are simply trying to be accommodating in order to hold their trade.

CONFERENCE AND ROUND TABLE.

A church conference and round table will be held at the Park Avenue Baptist church tonight, under the direction of Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire, the pastor. The general topic will be "Church Efficiency," or "How Can I Help to Make My Church More Efficient." It is hoped that there will be a large attendance of members.

PLANS FOR CHURCH SOCIAL.

The Woman's Association of the Congregational church held a sewing and business meeting at the church, yesterday afternoon, when further arrangements were made for the birthday social to be held on Friday night, March 13.

NEW ENGINE IS GIVEN A TRYOUT

Automobile Apparatus Works Satisfactorily on First Run.

Ploughing through drifts of snow, slush and ice and climbing hills which is difficult for the ordinary auto truck under ideal conditions, the new Nott fire engine was given a thorough tryout on the streets of the city yesterday afternoon and proved most satisfactory in every way. Fire Chief Doane had as his guests on the preliminary run members of the councilmanic fire committee, several of the firemen and a number of those directly interested in Plainfield's fire department and all expressed much afvorable comment at the conclusion of the trip.

Starting from the department headquarters the engine and a score of passengers went south on Park avenue to Watchung avenue and then back to headquarters via the latter thoroughfare and the run was made without a hitch. The engine was driven by one of the company's mechanicians who will remain here until the local driver becomes thoroughly acquainted with the new apparatus.

Some trouble was experienced in getting the engine in and out of the fire house as there is barely two inches to spare on each side of the big truck as it passes through the door. The opening will have to be made larger in order to accommodate the new addition to Plainfield's fire fighting equipment.

PRESS HAS NOT MISSED A PUBLICATION DAY

Storm Made Abbreviated Sheets Necessary But All Editions Have Appeared.

Difficulties such as seldom, if ever fall to the lot of newspapers, have been encountered by the Daily Press since the snow storm of Sunday depriving the plant of light and power, necessary for publication. On Monday a small paper, consisting of five columns, five inches deep, was published and circulated in a territory immediately surrounding the office. News of this unique paper went broadcast about town, and all day yesterday people were visiting the office to secure copies, so that the actual circulation of Monday's paper, which was continued to be printed as demanded yesterday, reached over 4,000, fully 500 greater than any regular edition of the Press ever before printed.

Yesterday, with the assistance of type for setting by hand, which was loaned to the Daily Press by the Central Publishing Company, and by using one linotype, driven by a motorcycle, it was possible to set two pages of matter for publication. This was printed on the press of the Trembath Printing Company in North Plainfield, and a full edition was sent out, all of the city carrier routes being dispatched from the office. The press was driven by a gas engine. The Daily Press was the only local paper that came anywhere near supplying it's regular customers yesterday.

At time for starting our plant this morning, two linotypes were coupled to motorcycles, which however, it was found necessary to drive by having men ride them, as the gasoline power was found to be unsteady and disastrous to the machines. By this method, with the bicycle riders working in relays of forty minutes each, it has been possible to set type until power was restored at 11:30 this morning. At that late hour it was found necessary to condense the paper to eight pages, but tomorrow the normal size will be resumed.

The publishers are making every effort to get papers started to the 600 new subscribers secured on "Dollar Day" last Saturday, but the trouble in securing sufficient press facilities has made it impossible to make all of these new starts as yet. They will probably all be started tomorrow.

QUALIFIES FOR POSITION AT JERSEY CITY HOSPITAL

Among the seven candidates who qualified in the recent civil service test for the position of superintendent of the Jersey City Hospital, was Morris Harrison, who for some time has been the business manager of Muhlenberg Hospital. In order of merit Mr. Harrison stands first upon the list. The examination was open to all male citizens of the United States.

"PEOPLE'S FORUM" AT Y. M. C. A.

Prof. H. W. Overstreet Will Lecture There Tomorrow Night.

The meeting of the "People's Forum," which has been announced for tomorrow evening at Washington School, will be held at the Y. M. C. A. instead. The change is necessitated by the shutting off of the electric power in the city. Having its own power plant, the Y. M. C. A. can light its building as usual.

Everyone is invited to attend the meeting, which will be addressed by Professor H. W. Overstreet, of the College of the City of New York. His topic will be "An Out-Worn System of Political Philosophy." A member of the committee in charge, who heard Professor Overstreet give this lecture before one of the strongest civic organizations in New York city, declares that it is a most impressive and instructive presentation of the causes underlying political progress. William S. Tyler, president of the Board of Education, will preside.

LEGISLATIVE PROBE OF TELEPHONE COS.

Commissioner to Be Named to Investigate Alleged Exorbitant Charges.

Trenton, March 4—There is to be a Legislative probe of the rates of the telephone companies of the State. This was made certain last night when the Assembly concurred in the Senate resolution by Senator McGinnis, of Passaic county, calling for the appointment of a commission of three Assemblymen and three Senators to make an investigation.

The resolution states that numerous complaints have been made that the charges are exhorbitant, that there is discrimination and the character of the service is not what it should be and that disclosures in New York indicate that the charges of the New York Telephone Company are exhorbitant.

EDISON TALKING PICTURES TO BE EXHIBITED HERE

The Edison talking pictures will be given their first public demonstration in this city at the Y. M. C. A., Friday afternoon and evening, March 13, under the direction of one of the experts of the Edison Kinetophone Company. In all fourteen numbers will comprise the program, and each one will be carefully selected.

Recently, great improvements have been made in talking pictures, and it is said that the Edison concern has about reached the point of perfection. Sceretary Herbert Parker, of the Y. M. C. A., has been in communication with the Edison concern, with a view to giving an early exhibition of the talking pictures.

WORK IS TOO GREAT A HARDSHIP, SAYS YOUTH

William Briddle, a fourteen-year-old colored youth, was arraigned before City Judge W. G. DeMeza in the city court, this morning, on a charge of incorrigibility preferred by his father. The parent claims that the youth refuses to work and classes him as a "loafer of the worst type."

Briddle, senior, secured work for his son on a farm, but the latter quit in a short time, claiming that ploughing and digging was too strenuous. A laundry was his next place of labor and the youth's southern blood boiled in the steam of washing machines and he threw up that job saying that it was too hot for hit. The father next got him a job at the Cedarcroft, but the lad had to work until 8:30 o'clock in the evening and this was too great a hardship for him to stand.

The case will be disposed of by Judge DeMeza in court, Saturday morning, when it is probable that the youth will be placed in some institution.

C. E. HUXLEY'S FUNERAL.

The funeral of Charles E. Huxley, aged 86 years, will be held at the late home, 717 South avenue, tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock. Rev. W. E. L. Ward, of St. Stephen's church, will officiate and the burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

NO SERVICE TONIGHT.

There will be no service at Hope chapel, tonight, but the regular preparatory service will be held on Friday night and the communion service on Sunday night, as usual.

NOTICE TO ADVERTISERS

Because of the late hour at which power was restored today it was impossible to make any advertising changes today. Normal service with full changes of advertisements will be restored tomorrow.

Newark, March 4.—Former Judge Edward Ambler Armstrong, of Camden, brother of T. S. Armstrong, of Plainfield, as the owner of a $4,400 mortgage, which, it is alleged, he claims is a subsisting lien against six lots on Plainfield avenue, near Beatrice street, Plainfield, has been named as defendant in a chancery suit brought by John Francis Cahill in behalf of George A. Dowden, a well known art expert of this city, who, as the record owner of the lots, desires to clear his title of such cloud as arises by reason of Mr. Armstrong's claim.

Mr. Dowden bought the lots, whose numbers run from 1301 to 1311, both inclusive, "for a full and valuable consideration," as the bill of complaint puts it, from Frederick H. Smith, of Newark, who bought them from Irvine D. York, of New York, who acquired them at a Martin Act tax sale May 19, 1904, on his bid of $175.

Mr. Dowden claims that the mortgage, which Armstrong obtained from John A. Doty by an assignment January 23, 1901, is not a lien against his lots for the reason that the tax sale cut the mortgage off.

Acording to the bill York on August 22, 1904, through his agent, Joseph F. Pasco, served notice of the tax sale on Armstrong, as the holder of the mortgage, with the statutory warning that unless the property be redeemed within the time limit specified by law he would proceed to perfect his title. Armstrong, the bill alleges, paid no attention to the notice and took no action of any kind in the premises.

The bill avers that Armstrong's claim that his mortgage is a subsisting lien "is utterly without foundation, unjust and vexatious," serving only to cloud complainant's title.

The mortgage in question covered also six other lots not involved in Mr. Dowden's suit.

BISHOP THOMAS BOWMAN PASSES AWAY IN ORANGE

Bishop Thomas Bowman, of the Methodist Episcopal church, died yesterday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Burns D. Caldwell, High street, Orange, at the age of ninety-six years. He had been in failing health for months, but recently had rallied and was expected to recover his wonted strength.

Six months ago Bishop Bowman, who had lived in retirement for years past at his daughter's residence, showed signs of failing health. He was compelled to take to his bed and at first it was thought the end was near. He rallied, however, and within the last few days it was believed that he was out of danger.

REV. DR. TINKER WILL PREACH AT LATER DATE

Owing to the break-down in the electric service, making it impossible to secure illumination, the service announced for tomorrow night at the Holy Cross church, at which Rev. Dr. Tinker, of New York, was to preach, will be omitted. The date on which Dr. Tinker will preach will be announced later. The prayer-book class will be held tonight as the gas in the church will give sufficient light for that meeting.

TO INVESTIGATE FUNDS.

Trenton, March 4—The House of Assembly has passed the Johnson resolution authorizing a joint committee of three senators and assemblymen with power to investigate the funds of the various firemen's association and report same to the next legislature.

POLICE INSTRUCTED TO ENFORCE LAW

Failure to Clean Off Your Sidewalks Will Lead to Arrest and Fine.

Sidewalk conditions will be materially improved before nightfall as the resut of firm determination upon the part of the street department and police authorities to make negligence costly. Many complaints have been filed with Chief of Police Kiely and Street Commissioner Gavett and the street conditions in various portions of the city are far from commendable. A flagrant disregard of the ordinance making the clearing away of snow compulsory on the part of the property owner has been evident locally and the police are now determined to deal severely with offenders.

A number of householders were hailed before Judge DeMeza in the city court this morning, and the police will continue to summon all offenders to court. Detective-Sergeant Flynn is working on these cases today and is rounding up all tardy property-owners who will be lined up in the court tomorrow morning.

In speaking of the matter, this morning, City Judge W. G. DeMeza said: "The time has come when I have got to put a stop to this nuisance and I will deal severely with everyone brought before me on this charge. Citizens know that they must clear the snow away from in front of their houses and the levying of a ten dollar fine will help to impresss the seriousness of the offense on their minds. Conditions are far from what they ought to be in this city and the willful disregard of a city ordinance has got to be stopped.

"A large proportion of the offenders claim that they have an agreement with the city to clear snow from the walks after each fall but the city is responsible for no such contract and it is up to the property owner to personally supervise the clearing. The custom of the city department in clearing walks was established only for the benefit of property owners who live out of town and who cannot come to Plainfield and look after their sidewalks after every snowfall."

SOMERSET REPUBLICAN SLATE MADE AT HARMONY FEAST

Somerville, March 4.—William W. Smalley, of Bound Brook, was much gratified to hear that he was declared to be the only candidate for the Republican nomination for Senator next fall, at a dinner of leading Republicans of Somerset county, held here. Mr. Smalley is the present Senator from the county but no other name was presented at the meeting by those who spoke. Ogden H. Hammond, of Bernards, was presented as the only logical candidate for Assembly.

The dinner was given by Chairman Edward E. Cooper, to members of the county executive committee and other leading Republicans. It was Mr. Cooper who spoke of Senator Smalley as the strongest candidate, and it met with loud applause. A dozen speakers expressed their views and all were optimistic of party success next fall.

James H. Mulheron, Republican county chairman of Mercer county, was a guest of honor. He expressed the belief that Republican Congressmen could be elected from this district. He presented no candidate. Former Congressman Ira W. Wood is being urged to take the nomination again and is said to be very strong in all three counties. Prosecutor Frederick A. Pope, who was one of the speakers at the dinner, was hailed as a Congressional candidate.

The dinner was for the purpose of promoting Republican organization and enthusiasm.

MRS. RAY GUINN AND DAUGHTER INJURED

Sleigh Breaks Down and They Are Thrown Into the Street.

While returning to her home on Watchung avenue, yesterday afternoon after spending the day with friends in the borough, the sleigh in which Mrs. Raymond Guinn and her daughter, Beatrice Guinn, were riding broke down almost in front of the occupant's home on Watchung avenue, near East Fourth street. When the sleigh dropped to the road bed the horse attached to it became frightened and started to bolt, but was prevented from doing so by the driver, a local hackman. Both Mrs. Guinn and her daughter were thrown into the street.

Dr. C. H. Pratt, who was standing in his brother's drug store at East Fourth street and Watchung avenue, saw the accident and rushed out to lend aid to the unfortunates. Other pedestrians who were passing by at he time hastened to the street, some grabbing the horse so that no further damage would result. Neither Mrs. Guinn or her daughter were seriously hurt although the shock from the accident has had a very depressing effect on both. The driver had the sleigh removed to a barn in the vicinity.

ALARM SYSTEM BEING RESTORED

Thirty of the Fifty-two Boxes Are Now in Working Order.

Commendable zeal has been shown by Fire Chief T. O. Doane and Allen B. Laing in their efforts to hasten the repairs of the fire alarm system in this city. Local electricians and expert linemen were augmented with a force of workers brought to Plainfield from other cities nearby. Day and night, since it was discovered that the storm had put the entire fire alarm system out of commission the work of repairing the broken and disconnected wires has gone on.

Chief Doane has been indefatigable, as have all of the men who have been working under his supervision, in his efforts to have the alarm system in operation at the earliest possible moment. There are 52 alarm boxes in this city. Eighteen of the 52 alarm boxes had been repaired up to last night. One thing that has been demonstrated to the satisfaction of the fire department, at least, through the ravages caused by the storm, is the urgent need of placing all fire alarm wires underground.

Praise is also due the head of the North Plainfield department, for his ceaseless vigilance, and the car which was taken to prevent an outbreak of fire. Constant tours of inspection were made by the local departments and every man on duty held himself in instant readiness to respond to any cal that might be received. Fortunately, telephone connection with fire headquarters here, and in the borough, was not seriously interrupted. The North Plainfield department kept an extra team of horses in readiness to respond quickly in case of an alarm of fire. By tonight, it is expected that practically all of the local alarm boxes will be in working order. Thirty of the 52 boxes here in Plainfield were in working order at noon today.

"My men are entitled to great credit for the ceaseless vigil which they have kept during the last few days," said Chief Doane today. "To a man they were ready to respond instantly to any alarm. Hand extinguishers were used to put out a fire in a house on West Third street, on Sunday, which was caused by the crossing of electric wires. Our alarm system went out on Sunday night. Trouble was experienced early Sunday and repairs were made frequently. It would have been a serious matter had a large fire broken out while the alarm system was paralyzed and the streets in some cases almost impassable because of drifts. Plainfield has been particularly fortunate in this respect.

"By tonight, we hope to have the entire fire alarm system of the city in good working order. Should any fire occur citizens should immediately notify fire headquarters by telephone. The danger from fire is by no means past, although greatly lessened."

LOSES VALUABLE HORSE.

Charles Feller, the diaryman, of Pearl street, reported to the North Plainfiel dpolice authorities that he lost one of his horses from his stable last night. The equine was valued at $350.

SESAME CLUB MEETING.

The Sesame Club will meet tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock at the home of Mrs. LeRoy H. Gates, 826 First place.

CITY EMERGING FROM BLIZZARD

Normal Conditions Gradually Being Restored in Plainfield and Vicinity.

PARTIAL CAR SERVICE

While Plainfield is slowly recovering from the effects of the big storm, some sections of the state are still isolated. It may be a week before normal conditions prevail. Street Commissioner A. J. Gavett has 130 laborers at work clearing the main streets and avenues of the city. Thus far no trouble has been experienced in securing men for the work of snow removal. Wages of $1.75 a day are paid the snow shovelers and $5 a day is paid by the city for the use of each team.

It is estimated that to clear the streets of Plainfield will cost the municipality several thousand dollars. There is still a great deal of work to be done. Plainfield avenue, at the city line, is still impassible for vehicular traffic. Way was broken today through East Front street, at Cole's hill, by employees of the street cleaning department. There are other streets in remote sections of the city that are still deep in snow. Because of the thaw of yesterday and today the city's laborers are endeavoring to clear the gutters all over town. Little attention therefore can be given crosswalks and sidewalks. The police here and in the borough are warning householders to clean their walks.

Linemen of the telephone company are working strenuously in the effort that is being made to repair the damage to the lines hereabouts. More men were recruited for work in Plainfield by the telephone company from the Westchester division of the system. Still more men are needed, it was said this afternoon. The Mt. Pleasant trunk line of the telephone company is still out of commission. The energies of the many employes are being directed towards repairing this important cable. Of 4,400 telephones in Plainfield, 1,300 were still out of commission today. It is believed that complete service in this city wil not be restored before March 10. The operators in the local exchange are a tired lot of young women. They have been on duty almost constantly, with but little time to eat and sleep, for the past three days, and it is highly creditable to the service that they were able to accommodate the hosts of telephone users so well. All of the new copper wire which is being used by the telephone company reached this city by express.

Dairies in Plainfield today reported all milk shipments a day and a half late. Shipments will be still more delayed tomorrow, it is believed. Deliveries of bread, milk and other household supplies about the city were being made more regularly today. The mails to and from New York today were said to be about on schedule time. Mail from more distant points is still delayed.

Indications this afternoon were, it was said at the office of the Public Service Corporation, that electricity could be supplied many of its consumers by tomorrow night. This will be welcome news, if true, to many residents. There is pressing need of street lights. Transportation of coal is still slow. Half ton lots are being delivered in some cases owing to the hard haul. Light and power were furnished consumers in the business section of this city shortly before noon today. Through use of the current the Daily Press was enabled to operate its linotypes and its printing press.

Trains on the Central Railroad of New Jersey between this city, New York and Philadelphia are being operated now on practically a regular schedule. Great credit is due the railroad for its speedy resumption of traffic.

Suburban trolleys will not be running for some days. Every effort is being made to operate a trolley service in this city, however.

That some of the users of electric current were supplied today is due to the fact that the transmission line between this city and Metuchen was not nearly as seriously damaged as had been at first supposed.

Soce trolley cars were operated today on the main line, between Leland avenue and Dunellen. This was about the only movement of cars in this vicinity. Telephone communication between this city and the car barns of the Public eSrvice Corporation, at Dunellen, is still interrupted.

Large gangs of men were kept busy all yesterday and last night in an effort to restore the city's trolley service and partial success rewarded the officials today. At 11 o'clock this morning, the Fourth street line was

Not in many years have the elements wrought such havoc with the electric light and power service as during the storm just past.

Snow, temperature and low barometer produced most unusual conditions, causing wires to break and felling poles so as to put entire circuits and lines out of commission.

Before the storm receded all the resources of Public Service were brought into play to repair the damage, the cost of which will run into many thousands of dollars.

Every effort is being directed to restoring normal conditions and rapid progress is being made.

We ask our patrons to show, for the next few days, that spirit of forbearance which the severity of the storm would justify and we give our assurance that we are doing everything within the power of human agencies to overcome the damage wrought.

Y. W. C. A. STILL GETTING CASH

Recapitulation of Events of the Recent Campaign is Most Interesting.

THE TEAMS WHICH LED

Association Has Received $200 Additional Since the Contest Closed More Than One-half of the Subscriptions Paid in Cash.

Aftermath of the recent highly successful financial campaign waged by the Young Women's Christian Association, of Plainfield, for the purpose of raising a fund of $10 000, to provide for the budget expense of $6,000 and for the payment of a note of $3,250, held by the City National Bank, shows that the efforts of the women engaged were not alone successful in raising far more than the amount fixed, but have also resulted in awakening renewed interest in the work of the organization. Additional subscriptions to the amount of $200 have been received since the contest closed. One half of the amount given was cash. The balance is pledged. In all the fund amounts to $12,766.75.

Interesting data was available today, showing the amounts of money that were collected from day to day by the various teams engaged in the work of solicitation, and the standing of each team, as regards the total amounts collected, was also made public. Interest in the campaign has been so keen that it is believed publication of this data will be appreciated, not only by the many Plainfield women who participated, but by the general public.

Because the largest amount of money on the last day of the financial campaign was collected by Team No. 8, of which Mrs. Leslie R. Fort, was chairman, an award of $500, the proceeds of the Janet Richards lecture fund, was made to that team, as promised, by Mrs. Percy H. Stewart, bringing its total collections for the day up to an even $1,000.

The campaign began on February 24 and closed on the afternoon of February 27. Not a person in Plainfield was asked twice for a subscription, so well had the canvass been planned, and it was conducted throughout along systematic lines. Miss Harriet Taylor, executive financial secretary of the National Board of the Young Women's Christian Association, was at the local Y. W. C. A. headquarters during, and before, the solicitation of subscriptions began. She made many suggestions for the guidance of the women who participated, as did Miss Lena M. Farrar, who is also connected with the National Board.

Suggestion that the Plainfield Y. W. C. A. begin the aggressive campaign for a $10,000 fund was made at a luncheon, given in honor of Mrs. Dave H. Morris, Miss Taylor and Miss Farrar, by Mrs. Percy H. Stewart, at her home, at 1107 Watchung avenue, in this city, on February 19. The idea, when originally broached, was enthusiastically received and was speedily put into execution.

Members of all of the teams that were engaged in the work, met at 4 o'clock every afternoon, during its progress, at the Y. W. C. A. building, on East Front street, figured the total amount of the day's collections, and made announcement of the results. Tea was served each afternoon. On the Sunday following the close of the unusually successful campaign a vesper service, led by Mrs. Frederick Goodhue Mead, president of the association, was held, when thanksgiving was offered for the work that the women interested in the Y. W. C. A. had been permitted to accomplish, with the help of the generous, public spirited and philanthropic people of Plainfield.

Organization and membership of the various teams that canvassed for subscriptions were:

Team No. 1—Mrs. Rufus P. Lincoln, chairman; Mrs. Frederick W. Goddard, vice-chairman; Mrs. Daniel Runkle, Mrs. Harold Brown, Miss Crane, Mrs. Allan Cowperthwaite, Mrs. J. M. Charles, Mrs. Richard Boardman, Miss Harriet Goddard, Mrs. Arthur L. Otterson, Mrs. Lewis H. Timpson.

Will Represent the Colonial Barracks at Trenton During War Times—Will Be Well Equipped for Entertainment.

The New Jersey Building at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition to be held in San Francisco from February 20 to December 4, 1915 will be two and one half stories high with stucco walls, situated on a plot three hundred feet square, bounded by three boulevards, one of which faces the beautiful San Francisco Bay. The general plan is that of the letter "H," each court having covered balconies and other decorative effects, the chief of which is the Liberty Pole shown in the picture. The main entrance to the building is situated on one side of the "H" and is formed with a two-story portico of Colonial design.

Realizing that the New Jersey building would be surrounded by the New York State $200,000 building and also the buildings of Pennsylvania, Ohio and Oregon, each of which States had made much larger appropriations than had this State, the Commission thought it best to turn their attenion to some design aside from the ordinary exhibition building and from the various suggestions made it was decided to adopt, as a sort of "motif" for a building that would be distinctive and unique, the Colonial Barracks situated in the new State House Park at Trenton. Not the present structure, but as it existed in Revolutionary times and to which State it is now being restored through the efforts of Adjutant General Wilbur F. Sadler, Jr., and Chancellor Edwin Robert Walker.

These barracks were erected in 1758-59 by authority of the Legislature of the colony of New Jersey for the purpose of quartering British and Provincial troops to resist the threatened invasion by the French and Indians. The building was constantly occupied by troops from the time of completion until peace was established with France in 1765. From that time until the breaking out of the war which resulted in the independence of the United States it was practically disused. For a short time preceding the battles of Trenton and Assunpink it was occupied by British troops, Hessians, Provincial recruits for the service of the Crown, and Tory refugees, and during the remainder of the war by troops of the Continental line, State militia and their French allies.

The original plan of the barracks was a hollow square and this has been so far departed from that the New Jersey building is practically a restoration of two sets of barracks placed back to back in the shape of a letter "H."

The stem of the letter "H" gives splendid room for exhibition space and lecture and entertainment purposes. The wings are equipped with reading and rest rooms and are designed to make comfortable the New Jersey visitors at the exposition as well as display its various superior resources and advantages from an industrial, economic and social standpoint.

A FUEL SUPPLY THAT NEVER FAILS

If you have a Gas Heater you are sure of a means of heating your home when heat is most needed.

Storms may tie up railroads and cut off the coal supply for a time, but gas mains are not affected by weather conditions.

Teams may not be able to haul heavy loads through snow-piled streets, but gas for fuel is always ready at the turn of a valve.

A Gas Heater can be moved from room to room without trouble. We have them at various prices.

AT ONCE! CLOGGED NOSTRILS OPEN, HEAD COLDS AND CATARRH VANISH

Try "Ely's Cream Balm."

Get a small bottle anyway, just to try it. Apply a little in the nostrils and instantly your clogged nose and stopped-up air passages of the head will open: you will breathe freely: dullness and headache disappear. By morning the catarrh, cold-in-head or catarrhal sore throat will be gone.

End such misery now! Get the small bottle of "Ely's Cream Balm" at any drug store. This sweet, fragrant balm dissolves by the heat of the nostrils; penetrates and heals the inflamed, swollen membrane which lines the nose, head and throat; clears the air passages; stops nasty discharges and a feeling of cleansing, soothing relief comes immediately.

Don't lay awake tonight struggling for breath, with head stuffed; nostrils closed, hawking and blowing. Catarrh or a cold, with its running nose, foul mucous dropping into the throat, and raw dryness is distressing but truly needless.

Put your faith—just once—in "Ely's Cream Balm" and your cold or catarrh will surely disappear.—Adv.

THE ZENITH REACHED.

The fast waning indoor athletic season reached its climax Monday night in the National Indoor Championships in Madison Square Garden. It left behind it the record of having been the most successful and active season in the history of the board floor sport in this country. Especially true is that of the Metropolitan district where there have been many athletic meets of the indoor type since the great Olympic championships of 1908.

It is to our great indoor system that America owes a great deal of its supremacy on track and field, and England, in search of the causes for our rise and ability to set the pace in athletics, seems to be realizing it, too. America is a leader because as a country she concentrates on winning. Those interested spare neither time, money nor expert trainers in order to bring America's best men up to that pitch of physical excellence that is so necessary in all athletics. The result is that America has beaten practically every country in the world in athletic events.

WE SHOULD WORRY.

Jack Martin shook the Queen City mud from his feet early Sunday morning and departed for the sunny south to live on baked beans of the Boston "Hub" variety until the National League opens its campaign for recognition with the dangerous "Feds" as opponents. Martin claims that the National League will retain its old time place in the hearts of the American baseball public but other ball tossers differ in their opinions.

What is it that worries the officials of organized baseball? It is on record that they are not the least bit apprehensive as to the inroads of the Federals, and therefore that cannot be the cause of their unrest. Under the circumstances it must be ascribed to increased taxes or a threatened attack of some horrible malady. This is unfortunate, for if the old league magnates were not so preoccupied with other difficulties and worriments they would undoubtedly put the Federals out of business in a jiffy—Mayle.

Although the Y. M. C. A. basketball aggregation has proven itself an erratic quintet during the present season it has certainly proven that it had the stuff in it. This was demonstrated most forcibly when it outfought North Plainfield High School and swamped the fast traveling quintet of the New York University Law School. And yet there are not enough titles to go around.

Why not get that North Plainfield-Plainfield High School girls' controversy over with before we lose all interest. The intermission between the first and second contests was one of nearly two months during which the Plainfielders were whipped into championship form.

It is understood that other local feminine quintets are contemplating a trip to Trenton to meet Miss "Dot" Hayes in the annual session. As usual Miss Hayes is the team all in one and the Y. W. C. A. verdict over her was a surprise to all concerned.

Eight games in a single week is pretty good for basketball players of any team. This feat was accomplished by Bill Peacock and Dan McNamee of the Plainfield High School team last week and neither is any the worse for the battles waged. The couple appeared in Y. M. C. A., High School and a combination team's uniform.

Query—Can a landlord collect the rent when the water pipes are frozen and bursted and we have to annoy the neighbors for water? Also, if there are no locks on the doors and the windows out and he refuses to make any repairs. Also, isn't the landlord supposed to give a duplicate of the lease to the tenant and live up to the lease?—X. O. C.

Answer—You will have to take your trouble with your landlord to a lawyer. If you went into the house without securing a duplicate of the lease that is your own fault. The best thing for you to do is to move as soon as you can get your goods packed together, in our estimation.

"TAR BABY" CELEBRATES HIS 28TH BIRTHDAY

Boston, Mass., March 4.—Sam Langford, who has been resting up at his home in this city since he returned from Europe last week, was entertained by a party of his old friends today on the occasion of his twenty-eighth birthday anniversary. Langford is a product of Nova Scotia, where he was born March 4, 1886.

The "Tar Baby," as he is familiarly known, is one of the veterans of the ring, notwithstanding that he is comparatively young in years. He began fighting at the age of 16 and consequently he has a ring career of a dozen years to his credit. During this period he has engaged in more than 300 battles. He made his early reputation as a welterweight and in recent years has faced practically all of the middleweight and heavyweight fighters of reputation on both sides of the Atlantic and in the Antipodes.

Langford expects to engage in a ten-round boxing match in New York next week with Jack Blackburn, who about to resume activity after an absence of several years from the ring. Some ten years ago, when Blackburn was in his prime, he and Langford met on five or six different occasions, each contest resulting in a draw.

After the Blackburn contest Langford will go to Kenosha, Wis., where he is matched to meet Carl Morris at the end of this month. After several other bouts now in prospect he will return to Paris in April to renew his efforts to bring about a match with Jack Johnson for the world's championship.

TO WELCOME TOURISTS.

New York, March 4.—New York expects to entertain a big collection of baseball enthusiasts at the end of this week, when the world's tourists will be welcomed home from their long trip. A special train carrying several hundred Chicago fans is due to reach town tomorrow and other large delegations are reported about to start from Philadelphia, Boston, Pittsburgh, Washington and other cities. The Biltmore Hotel has been selected as headquarters for the demonstration of welcome, and the touring Giants and White Sox will be taken there after their arrival on the Lusitania on Friday. On that day there will be meetings of the officials and club owners of the National and American Leagues and it is likely the gathering will be taken advantage of to hold meetings of other baseball organizations. On Saturday night virtually all of the men who control the national game, together with an army of players, sporting writers and invited guests, will gather about the festal board at the Biltmore at the great banquet arranged in honor of the globe-trotting baseball teams.

SUGGS SIGNS FOR LIFE.

Kinston, N. C., March 4.—The wedding took place here today of Miss Seelle Cox, member of a prominent Kinston family, and George F. Suggs the well known baseball player, whose home also is in this city. Suggs is widely known as a major league pitcher. He began his baseball career ten years ago at Jacksonville, Fla., and after several seasons with Memphis and Mobile was signed by the Detroit team. From Detroit he went to Cincinnati five years ago and remained there until traded to the St. Louis Nationals at the close of last season.

N. Y. STATE LEAGUE MEETING.

Utica, N. Y., March 4.—President Farrell and the club owners of the New York State League, who are here today to agree upon a schedule and complete other arrangements for the opening of the season, express themselves as optimistic over the prospects for a successful year in their organization. The circuit will remain the same as last season.

WON'T ALLOW MIXED BOUTS.

Milwaukee, Wis., March 4.—Boxing bouts between whites and blacks will not be permitted in Wisconsin, according to a ruling of the State Boxing Commission, yesterday. As a result of this ruling, the proposed bout between Sam Langford and Carl Morris at Kenosha will be called off.

ATHLETICS DREW WELL.

Cambridge, Mass., March 4.—The Harvard Athletic Association concluded the season 1912-1913 with a balance of over $30,000, according to the annual report of William F. Garcelon, former graduate treasurer, which was announced last night.

LIDGATE LEAVES FOR BALTIMORE BALL CLUB

Eugene Lidgate, the Fanwood ball player, left last night for Baltimore, where he will join the Oriole club of the International League, prior to that club's departure for Lafayetteville, N. S., where the spring training camp has been established.

Liddy has been brought back to Baltimore by Manager Johnny Dunn after a year's "farming-out" with the Raleigh team, of the North Carolina League, and it now seems possible that he will make a permanent berth in the catching department this season.

DINNER TO BORO ATHLETES POSTPONED INDEFINITELY

The committee in charge of the arrangements for the dinner to be given in honor of the North Plainfield High School basketball teams met at the home of Mrs. William Taylor on Fairview avenue, yesterday afternoon, and decided to postpone the affair until some time later. It was originally scheduled to be held tomorrow night, but the uncertain lighting and heating facilities made the postponement necessary.

The committee in charge of the affair is composed of chaperons who have supervised the dances held in Saengerbund Hall. They are Mrs. Warren Townley, Mrs. Frank Rowley, Mrs. Frank Burner, Mrs. William Smalley, Mrs. William Taylor, Andrew Kenney and James Bailey.

THE PLAINFIELD THEATRE

No play that has been presented in many seasons has made a more powerful appeal to the sympathies of the audience, and certainly none has proven more popular than "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," which comes to the Plainfield theatre, tomorrow afternoon and evening. The laughter and applause with which this piece has been greeted in every city visited seems to be contagious. The dear old Kentucky drama never went better than in this, its tenth, season, the unctious drollery of the players giving three hours of unceasing and persistent happiness. As an entertainer, Mrs. Wiggs has no peer in her class. Of all women, she is the dearest and funniest, the ideal philosopher and friend, at once a broad beam of sunshine mid lowly surroundings and a benediction among all her associates. It is a play which makes a universal appeal, fits every taste and every locality.

PLAYS AND PLAYERS

Walker Whiteside will be seen next season in "Mr. Wu," a London success.

James K. Hackett is expected to return soon to the producing field.

Henry V. Esmond and Eva Moore are touring Canada in "The Dear Fool."

Augustin McHugh's new play, "Value Received," is to be promoted by John W. Rumsey.

Ruth Chatterton has the leading role of Judy in the new play, "Daddy Long-Legs."

Charles Frohman is to produce "The Land of Promise" in London next month.

The proposed revival of "Adonis," with Henry Dixey in his old role, has been postponed indefinitely.

May Tully is directing a vaudeville production of "Cavalleria Rusticana," in which twenty-five persons take part.

"The Under Dog," a play by William Harlow Briggs, is soon to be produced in London with a company headed by Minnie Tittle-Brune.

Bertha Kalich, when she returns to New York from Cuba, is to appear in vaudeville in a condensed version of "Marta of the Lowlands."

Ethel Barrymore has met with such success in "Tante" that she has decided to continue in the play during the remainder of the season.

H. B. Warner is to be starred in a new play called "Billy Black," by Charles Bradley. Rita Stanwood has been selected for the leading female role.

Walker Whiteside has purchased the American rights to "Mr. Wu," the Chinese melodrama which has been one of the best efforts of the season in London.

Richard Temple, who now has a leading part in the comedy, "The Wedding Night," is to star next season in a musical farce entitled "Cupid's Holiday."

"The Governor's Boss," a new play by ex-Senator James S. Barcus, is scheduled to have its first production by a stock company in Washington next week.

Irene Fenwick, Joseph Kilgour and several other well-known players are in the cast of the new comedy, "Along Came Ruth," recently produced by Henry W. Savage.

Hagar Revelly is to be produced in play form shortly, contracts having been signed between Joseph L. Plunkett and Daniel Goodman, the author of the much-discussed book.

A bill providing a penalty of imprisonment for from thirty days to six months for speculation in theatre tickets, has been introduced in the New York legislature.

Anouncement is made that Willis P. Sweatman's venture as a star in a play made from the Harris Dickson's story called "Old Reliable," has been definitely abandoned.

Mrs. Leslie Carter has been taking French lessons in Paris, for the purpose of appearing before audiences there in a one-act play. She will not return to America for at least another year.

Franz Lehar's "Alone at Last," a Viennese musical piece, is to be seen in America next season. It is said to be a somewhat serious operetta, with witty and sentimental scenes, provided by the well-known librettists, William and Bodansky.

Louise Closser Hale has finished her engagement with Henry Miller and will soon appear in a dramatization of her own book, "Her Soul and Her Body." The play is to be produced by Fred Belascon in San Francisco under the title, "Missy, the Dancer."

"Pretty Mrs. Smith," by Oliver Morosco and Elmer Harris, is having a run in Los Angeles, with Kitty Gordon, Charlotte Greenwood, Sidney Grant and Forrest Stanley in the cast. The story is of three husbands, two of whom were thought dead, but returned.

Laurence Irving and his wife, Mabel Hackney, are making a tour of the Canadian cities with "Typhoon," "The Unwritten Law," "The Lily" and "The Importance of Being Earnest." On his return to England Mr. Irving will produce Herman Bahr's comedy, "Bonaparte," which depicts the love story of Napoleon and Josephine.

WILL DISCUSS BENEFITS OF MARKET IN NEW BRUNSWICK

New Brunswick, March 4.—When the quarterly meeting of the Middlesex County Board of Agriculture is held Saturday afternoon at Brunswick Hall the benefits of a public market in this city will be discussed. Mayor Austin Scott will preside.

W. A. Clark, of Dunham's Corner, market gardener, will tell how a public market would benefit the farmer; Mrs. Walter P. Marvin, of the Housewives' League, will tell of its benefits to the housewife; Henry Klein will talk on its advantage to the hotels; Mrs. Charles Hammer will speak on its benefit to the large consumer; W. R. Reed, of the Board of Trade, will discuss its value to the city in general; former Mayor John P. Morrison will outline the retail merchant's attitude toward a public market for perishable products, and A. L. Clark, of the agricultural experiment station, will speak.

UNION COUNTY CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR UNION CONFERENCE

The conference under the auspices of the Union County Christian Endeavor Union in the interest of the fresh air work will be held in the Roselle Baptist church, Tuesday evening, March 10, in connection with which there will be a supper, followed by illustrated talks by practical fresh air workers. Business of considerable importance will be considered. There will be reports of last year's work. Fred C. Lounsbury, of this city, is the local representative of this work and a large attendance of Endeavorers is expected.

The union is planning to make the coming summer a memorable one in fresh air work for poor children. Some people think that the fresh air home for the tired mothers and little children would be better than the exclusive boys' camp. This question will be considered at the coming conference at Roselle. There will be an illustrated talk on "Camp Brett," the Hudson county fresh air home as one of the features, and this work will be explained in detail. There will be musical selections and the society of the Roselle church will act as host for the county members. Those intending to be at the supper should notify Harry Butt, Roselle.

COFFIN SHAPE TABLETS FOR POISONS PLANNED

Plainfield druggists are interested in the bill which has been introduced in the State Legislature at the instigation of the New Jersey Pharmaceutical Association, that fixes a shape and design to be used solely for antiseptic tablets containing poisons. The bill provides that after January 15, 1915, it shall be unlawful for any person to produce, manufacture, compound, deal in, dispense, sell, distribute, or give away any such poison tablet in a larger amount than one-eighth of a grain in any such tablet, unless such tablet is made in the form of a coffin, or burial casket. On each tablet shall appear the word "poison" and a skull and cross bones design. The container must bear a red label, stating the composition of the tablet and shall also bear the imprint "poison" and a skull and crossbones. Penalty for violation of these provisions will be a fine of $100, or six months' imprisonment, or both.

Not long since, Herbert Hoover, of Plainfield, took bi-chloride of mercury tablets, in Newark, with suicidal intent, but his life was saved. The frequent accidental poisonings through the mistake of such tablets for other drugs has served to call the attention to the need of throwing every possible safeguard around the sale and use of them. Plainfield druggists, who were seen today, declared that the proposed law would, in their opinoin, be an excellent one.

Plainfield, N. J., March 4, 1914.

CONGRATULATIONS.

Belated congratulations, because of our mechanical difficulties, are extended to Plainfield women upon the great success of the campaign which they closed last Friday to raise $10,000 for the local Y. W. C. A. In four days' time over $12,000 was subscribed, much of it to be given annually, for the maintenance of this great local institution, which is doing such a wonderful work for the girls and young women of the city. But there is one view of the subject which has been somewhat lost sight of in the greater struggle to achieve the goal. We refer to the fact that the Plainfield campaigners have acomplished something which could not be done in several other cities, notably Newark and Trenton. At Newark the effort to raise $25,000 in a week was a failure, and in Trenton where $10,500 was sought in two weeks, it has been found necessary to extend the period one week, because during the time originally fixed only about half the sum wanted was subscribed.

The result here indicates that the people of Plainfield, although many are complaining about the times, have not been so hard hit as in other places, and still are able to support worthy institutions in a loyal manner. There is not a single cloud that has not a silver lining, and the success of the Y. W. C. A. campaign indicates that things are not half so bad in the Queen City as some people would have us believe. With thousands of other citizens we extend to the Young Woman's Christian Association these belated congratulations upon the success of the campaign last week.

There are duties which a newspaper owes to a community that often make it necessary to print articles which it is known will hurt individuals, but at the same time will be for the benfit of the people at large. Time and time again we are asked to omit articles about escapades into which young men get who are sons of good families, and when no particular good is gained by it we willingly comply. But where a person is a persistent wrongdoer, to such an extent that he really becomes an enemy to society, then it is the newspapers duty to expose him, no matter who may be hit. Within the last week we have had a case where all sorts of efforts have been made to have us omit the story of wrongdoing on the part of a person with a bad record. Careful consideration of the case and all the circumstances coupled with the fact that only a few months ago we withheld news about the same culprit, convinced us that it was our duty to print the facts for the protection of local people. These rambling remarks are the result of deliberations following a threat to do all in the power of relatives of the person under discussion to harm the Press. We believe that the people of Plainfield expect their newspapers to prin the news and tell the truth, and the Daily Press intends to live up to that expectation. Often times publication of things which are not pleasant make people threaten all sorts of things against the paper, and sometimes they stop taking it, but the chances are that they begin again through a newsdealer, or borrow their neighbors copy. Certainly they see everything that appears concerning themselves.

NEW BOARD SECRETARY ENTERS UPON DUTIES

Former Plainfielder Takes Position Vacated by Frank B. Clark.

Henry R. Conger, the new clerk of the Plainfield Board of Education, entered upon his duties at the March meeting held at the High School, last night, candle light being used as a substitute for electricity. Mr. Conger succeeds Frank B. Clark, who recently resigned as clerk after serving in that capacity for eighteen years The former clerk's resignation did not take effect until April 1, but owing to previous arrangements he was unable to attend last night's session

Mr. Conger is a former resident of Plainfield and is well known here, having married Miss Harriet Duyckinck, daughter of Mr. and Mrs Duyckinck, of Madison avenue. He is a graduate of Williams College in the class of 1899 and of the Columbia Law School in the class of 1902. He was a classmate of W. M. Wherry, Jr., of Madison avenue.

Routine business occupied the Board's time last night. The teachers' committee announced the resignation of Carl G. Johnson, who has left to join the Jersey City baseball team of the International League and will be a professional ball player in the future. His place will be taken by A. Bruce Cutler. William S. Tyler, the president of the Board, announced that he represented the local Board at a meeting of the State Federation of School Boards held in Trenton recently.

Superintendent Maxson reported his attendance at a meeting of the National Superintendents' Association held recently in Richmond, saying that the meeting was a most important one and that he had gained much valuable information as a result.

RUMOR BUSY WITH THE FIRE CAPTAINCY

Dope of "Wise Ones" Has It James Fitzpatrick Will Be Council's Choice.

Owing to the limited number of members present and the sickly gas light furnished by the Public Service Corporation, the regular meeting of the Common Council Monday night, was curtailed as much as possible. As a result, a number of expected matters were not taken up. Among these was the appointment of a fire captain to fill the existing vacancy. While no official statement has been issued to the effect it is rumored around the hose and supply wagons that James Fitzpatrick, now acting captain at headquarters, will be named. An inside source has it that he was agreed upon at the caucus held last Friday night. If this is true, his name will be presented for confirmation at the adjourned Council meeting Monday night.

The appointment of the new captain will mean a general shift of men in the various local houses, a matter left entirely in the hands of Chief Doane. He has refused to give any information on the subject but the "wise ones" have doped it that Captain Townley, the senior of the quota, will be transferred from Netherwood to headquarters. His place will be taken by Captain Feiring, of No. 1 house, while the new captain will go to the latter house. The only officer to remain stationary is Captain Mehl, of No. 3 company, the dopesters say. There is also to be a shift of men owing to four new appointees having to be placed to the best advantage.

REVIEW OF NEWS OF PAST FEW DAYS

Published for Those Who Failed to Get Issues of The Press.

Brief comment of the news carried in The Daily Press of yesterday is here made for the benefit of those readers who were so unfortunate as to miss yesterday's edition.

The Common Council held its March meeting on Monday evening. The committee room where the was held was lighted by lamps and flickering gas jets. The gas was of such poor quality that President George S. Clay declared that he intended entering a complaint regarding it with the Public Utilities Commission. Firemen and policemen of this city petitioned for an increase in pay. The increase would be about $8.34 a month, with the exception of Class E men.

Announcement was made of the marriage of Mrs. Edith Fisk Church, the eldest daughter of Mrs. Chapman Fisk, of West Seventh strert, to Lloyd Ryder Stark, of Brooklyn, N. Y. The wedding occurred at the Hotel Marie Antoinette, in New York, Monday afternoon. Rev. Peter Milliken officiated. The couple will live in New York.

Fanwood was isolated from communication with the outside world by the storm. There were no street lights in all Plainfield. Telephone service was interrupted. Telegraph companies sent messages by railroad train. The Central Railroad of New Jersey ran its trains with more or less regularity. No trains were operated from 2 o'clock on Sunday afternoon until late in the morning on Monday.

In honor of the confirmation of their thirteen-year-old-son, Henry Mortimer, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Dreier gave a dinner in Abrams' Hall, on West Front street, Sunday night. Samuel Rothberg was the toastmaster. Fifty guests were present. Dancing followed the dinner.

Many events scheduled to take place on Monday night, were postponed on account of the storm. No meeting of the Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield was held last night. Miss Fola La-Follette was to have spoken at the meeting on "The Democracy of Suffrage." Joseph P. Burd is confined to his home at 112 Richmond street, as a result of breaking one of his toes by striking it against a door

There was no meeting of the Board of Trade last night.

The Public Service Corporation for the first time since it was granted a franchise for street lighting, has presented bills for light supplied to the heads of municipal departments of Plainfield. Usually it is customary for a company to supply a certain quantity of gas and electricity free to municipalities from which a franchise is received.

The funeral of Mrs. George LaMonte was held yesterday afternoon at her late home, "The Evergreens," at Bound Brook. Mrs. LaMonte was the mother of George M. LaMonte State banking and insurance commissioner.

Illness of Rev. Dr. H. P. Nichols, of New York, will prevent him from lecturing at Grace church on March 23, 24 and 25. His place will be filled by Rev. Dr. Herbert Symonds, vicar of Christ Church Cathedral, in Montreal, Canada.

Charges made by Samuel R. Manning and Leslie Lines, two Plainfield inmates of the State hospital at Trenton, has resulted in the arrest of Charles M. Brown, an attendant. He is charged with having assaulted and choked two other inmates of the hospital.

Statement that the United States Express Company intended to go out of business was made on Monday in New York. The parcel post is responsible for such contemplated action, it is believed.

Charles F. Wildey, a former resident of Plainfield, and long the proprietor of the old Cosmopolitan and Herald Square hotels, in New York, was found dead in bed on Monday. He is survived by two sons and three daughters. Charles F. Huxley, one of the first conductors on Plainfield trolley cars, died yesterday morning. He had been ill a long time. A wife and son survive him.

Nine members were received into the First Methodist church, of this city, on Sunday morning at communion.

The new Board of Assessors are busy planning the assessment work which is soon to be undertaken by them.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary E. Moyer, wife of Rev. Levi N. Moyer, was held on Monday afternoon. Burial was in Cedar Falls, Iowa.

Both meetings of the Boards of Education of Plainfield and North Plainfield were postponed on Monday night on account of the storm.

Mayor Percy H. Stewart has not yet named a captain for the Plainfield fire department. The appointee will probably be named next Monday night.

Waldemar Christofferson, a Danish resident of this city, died yesterday. He was in his seventieth year. He is survived by two sons and two daughters. The funeral of Claus Peterson, of Netherwood, was held yesterday afternoon. Burial was in the Methodist cemetery.

The engagement is announced of Laura Anthony, daughter of David Shields Lord, of 409 East Fifth street and Winslow Russell Dorthy, of this city.

Friends of Dr. and Mrs. Edwin I. Smalley, of Central avenue, enjoyed a sleighride to Union Village last Saturday night.

Somerville

Miss Katherine A. Blue, aged 85 years, died at the home of Mrs. E. C. Bolmer, corner of Davenport and Cliff streets, yesterday. The funeral will be held from the house Friday afternoon, at 2:30. Interment will be in the old cemetery at this place.

E. L. Van Doren, of this place, and Miss Grace Doyle, of Neshanic, were married at the home of the bride's mother on Sunday. Miss Doyle is a daughter of the late Jordan S. Doyle, and formerly lived in this place. On their return from a brief honeymoon trip to Washington, D. C., Mr. and Mrs. Van Doren will reside in this place.

Eugene Masterson has moved his family into the house on South street vacated by J. M. Carberry.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Mathews, of Davenport street, yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Weems, of Clover Hill, spent Saturday and Sunday with Mrs. Suydam and daughter, of this place, intending to return on Monday, but were delayed from returning home by the storm.

Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Terriberry have returned from their trip to California.

The March meeting of the Y. P. E. will be held next Monday evening at the home of Mrs. James Terwilliger, East Main street. Special exercises, including an address by Judge D. H. Beekman, will make up the program for the evening. A visiting delegation is expected from the Bound Brook society.

The following children attended kindergarten at West High street during every school day during February: James Carroll, Francis Morgenroth, William Sixt, William R. Sutphen, Jr., Ogden Ackerman, John Ely, Robert Bullard, Charles Mitchell, Alex. Orechio, Bernard Rosania, Theresa Hoch, Caroline Henry, Louise Neumann, Claire O' Donnell, Mary Hockenbury and Josephine Levitsky.

M. H. Burke is spending a few weeks' vacation at Lakewood.

Louis Flanzbaum, of Second street, is recovering from exposure at Somerset hospital. He was overcome while returning in the storm from Manville on Sunday evening, and was found about 6 o'clock in an unconscious conditio on the turnpike between this place and Finderne by George R. Nolan and others, who took him to the hospital.

Raritan

John Frech is reaping a harvest during the temporary shut down of the trolley service. He is running the old fashioned stage line, which was quite popular some 10 or 15 years ago.

The Rev. Dr. Edward G. Miller, of New York, will speak at the Reformed church on Sunday evening.

While returning from Somerville, on Sunday night, Ralph S. Young found two young girls from this place huddled together under the subway, unable to proceed on account of the storm. They were safely brought to their home.

Charles Berger has just received his discharge from the U. S. navy, after a service of four years. During the most of this period Berger was stationed on the Louisiana.

ELKS TO ELECT.

WILLIAM THAYER CARR PASSES AWAY

Well Known Resident of City for Twenty Years Succumbs to Long Illness.

William Thayer Carr, aged 45 years, a well known resident of this city for the past twenty years, died at his home, 215 West Fifth street, at 2 o'clock this morning, from complication. He had been in poor health for several years, but it was only during the past two months that his condition became critical.

Mr. Carr was born at Elmira, N. Y., from which city he removed to Plainfield. During his residence here he held a responsible position with the New Jersey Central at the Jersey City Terminal, where he was highly esteemed. He was a member of Grace Episcopal church and Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum, in both of which he was very active.

There survives a wife, and a daughter, Miss Frances Carr, who is a public school teacher at Ithaca, N. Y., and a son, Rodman Carr, who is at Vineland. The notice of funeral will be given later.

Y. M. H. A. PLAN TO HOLD OPEN MEETING

Plans have been completed for an open meeting of the Y. M. H. A. to be held in this city Sunday night, March 15. Arrangements have been made to have Dr. I. Edwin Goldwasser, of New York, chief of the bureau of experts in the National Y. M. H. A. movement and Professor Harry S. Feller, president of the New Jersey State Y. M. H. A.

Dr. Goldwasser will speak on "What the Y. M. H. A. means to the Community.' Both speakers are interested in the wide movement to almalgamate the Y. M. H. A societies of the country.

POLICE BOARD ORDERS ANOTHER EXAMINATION

The police committee of the Common Council has announced that another examination of candidates for the police force will be held in the Y. M. C. A. Friday afternoon. A large number of applicants will again submit themselves to the scrutiny of the doctor, among them being a number who were turned down several weeks ago. Five men are to be appointed to the force and possibly seven if good material is secured.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

The Stranger Club of the Mt. Zion A. M. E. church will give a grand concert and turkey supper Thursday evening, March 12.

The March business meeting of Grace Methodist church will be held in that edifice, Friday night. Following the routine business, a social hour will be enjoyed by those that attend.

There will be no prayer meeting at the Congregational church tonight because of the lack of lights.

The regular mid-week prayer service of Monroe Avenue Methodist church wil not be held tonight on account of there being no lights in the church edifice.

The Ladies' Aid Society of St. Peter's Lutheran church will meet at the residence of Mrs. Leinan, Washington and East Second streets, tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Plans are being considered by Grace church people to give a sacred concert at Bonnie Burn Sanitorium some time during Lent.

You Help in Rendering Good Telephone Service

THERE are three important factors necessary in rendering good telephone service:

1. The Party who is calling.
2. The Telephone Operator.
3. You.

When a customer desires to reach you by telephone, and the operator finds that your telephone is busy, she is obliged to report: "Line's busy." It is her way of saying: "His telephone door is closed." She has done her part; the person calling has done his.

You can help in rendering good telephone service by providing telephone facilities adequate to prevent frequent "Busy" reports.

Upon request we shall be glad to furnish a record showing the number of times your line has been reported "Busy" and recommend the facilities necessary in order to KEEP YOUR TELEPHONE DOOR OPEN AT ALL TIMES.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS WILL CELEBRATE GOLDEN JUBILEE

Trenton, March 4—A celebration of the golden jubilee of the Knights of Pythias of the Grand Domain of New Jersey, will take place at Atlantic City, May 12, 13 and 14. The event was planned at the session of the grand lodge, held in Trenton in 1912.

At the grand lodge session in 1913 an appropriation of $1,000 was voted for preliminary expenses. The committee in charge expects practically the entire body of Jersey Pythians to attend.

A feature will be a parade with not less than 15,000 men in line, among them 1,000 members of the uniformed rank, and 500 Knights of Khorassan, a branch of the order, in picturesque attire. Another event will be the conferring of degrees upon several hundred members. This will be done on the steel pier, the exclusive use of which has been engaged by the organization for the entire three days of the jubilee.

The committee having charge of the jubilee composed of Samuel H. Bulloc, Trenton, chairman William A. Johnson, Jersey City, secretary; George W. Phillips, Newark; Charles M. Scholey, Burlington; Clarence E. Case, Somerville; Robert H. Repport, Camden; Arthur W. Roday, Atlantic City; William B. Paret, Weehawken.

The order was founded at Washington, February 19, 1864, by Justice H. Rathbone and twelve friends. It had as its basis the story of Damon and Pythias, which had been played in Washington but a short time previous and made a deep impression upon the mind of Mr. Rathbone. From the originally thirteen members it has grown and spread through every State in the Union and many parts of Canada, and even has branches on the islands of the sea. There are now nearly 9,000 lodges in the order, with 900,000 members.

Connected with the order is an endowment branch, which holds securities worth more than $100,000,000. The subordinate lodges hold property to the value of more than $62,000,000 and have paid out for the relief of the sick and burial of the dead more than $75,000,000 during the past fifty years. In New Jersey the order has 138 lodges, with a membership exceeding 20,000.

MISS SLATTERY TO SPEAK.

Miss Margaret Slattery, the widely-known Sunday-school worker, will speak at the Congregational church, Monday evening, March 16, under the auspices of the Sunday-school.

James McCann, of 214 Church street, who has been detained at home with an attack of pleurisy, is much improved.

EMERGING FROM BLIZZARD

opened its entire length and the regular fifteen minute headway is now being maintained. The first car through was one that had been stalled at Fourth street and Prescott place, since Sunday. When it was seen the conveyance would soon get underway, a wag in the neighborhood hurriedly decorated it with flags and bunting. It was greeted with cheers at various points. Motorman Chris Weiss and Conductor Martin Hansen were in charge.

The main line cars began running from Grant avenue to Leland avenue last yesterday afternoon, and early today pushed westward to Dunellen. To the east they were prevented from getting on to Scotch Plains by one of the big cars jumping the track. It is probable the road will be cleared well toward Westfield this afternoon.

The Somerset street line was partially opened at noon but at that time no wheels were moving on either the Netherwood or Arlington avenue divisions. Efforts are being made to get them opened up late this afternoon. By tomorrow, it is believed the storm will be a thing of the past as far as traffic is concerned.

CARRANZA MUST SUBMIT TO U. S.

Determined to Make Him Come to Terms.

SAY BRITAIN WILL ACT.

Washington, March 4.—The United States government is determined to make Carranza yield to what is considered reason and accept representations from this government, acting for Great Britain. This was considered the most important phase of the Mexican situation.

Carranza's position, as outlined in his notes to Secretary Bryan, is now pronounced impossible and totally inadmissable by this government. Until Carranza has yielded to what is regarded as reason the attention of the state department will be concentrated on that phase of the problem. The principle involved is considered sufficiently important to overshadow all other considerations at present.

London, March 4.—The British government reserves to itself the right to obtain full reparation for the death of William S. Benton, a British subject, in Mexico at the hands of the rebels.

Sir Edward Grey, secretary of state for foreign affairs, made that announcement in the house of commons, answering an interrogation as to the status of the Mexican situation and the Benton inquiry.

"England," said Sir Edward, "has no intention of sending an armed force into Mexico and for the present is content to leave the Benton affair in the hands of the Washington government until the state department has had reasonable opportunity to act, but the British government does not intend under any circumstances to allow the Benton killing to drop."

Mexico, added the foreign secretary, gives every indication of a desire to conceal the truth.

When it became known that Sir Edward Grey would again speak on Mexico the house of commons galleries quickly filled with an eager crowd, and the secretary's words were listened to with grave attention.

"I must ask leave of the house," said Sir Edward, "to make a somewhat more extended statement than can properly be compressed within the limits of an answer to a question.

Inquiry Blocked In Mexico.

"All efforts that have been made hitherto have failed to secure an investigation into the facts respecting the death of William S. Benton. The persistent difficulties put in the way of such an investigation create the strongest presumption of a desire and an intention to conceal the truth on the part of those in Mexico who are responsible for what has happened.

"Communications with the government of the United States are still proceeding, but I would repeat what I said last week—that these communications do not imply that the government of the United States has any responsibility for what has taken place, by which I mean, of course, the death of Benton.

"While therefore we shall welcome any action that the United States is prepared to take to secure justice, we have no title to demand as a right that the United States should itself resort to the use of force. One can demand that another government should go to all lengths to secure reparation for a crime only when one holds that government in some way responsible for the commission of the crime.

"So far the United States has shown at least as much interest in the death in Mexico of a British subject as it has in the case of outrages on American citizens—for I understand that several Americans have been killed in Mexico. And the United States has shown every desire to use its influence to secure protection for British subjects in the Mexican territory controlled by the Constitutionalists.

"I would therefore sum up the situation by saying that if the United States thinks it proper to take further steps, either on behalf of its own citizens or of a British subject, we will gladly await the result. But if for reasons of its own the United States does not think it desirable to take such steps we must of course reserve to ourselves the right to secure reparation whenever it is in our power to do so."

MRS. SAYRE LOSES HER PURSE

Embarrassed While Shopping, but Clerk Offers Whole Store.

North Adams, Mass., March 4.—Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, daughter of President Wilson, will probably remember for some time her first shopping trip to this city since starting housekeeping at Williamstown.

After making a few purchases in a local store, she discovered with some signs of confusion that her pocketbook had been left at home. Mrs. Sayre blushed as she explained her predicament.

Upon learning his customer's identity the clerk soon put her at ease, however, by saying, "That will be all right, Mrs. Sayre, we would gladly trust you for the whole store if you wanted it."

—If you have a really desirable house or apartment to rent, your "ad" will constitute GOOD NEWS to some anxious people in this city.

Dunellen & Vicinity

This town like all the others in the state is practically isolated from its neighboring towns, due to the heavy fall of snow and the high winds that swept over this section Sunday and Monday. The town has been without lights for the past three nights and it is thought that there will be no lights in the borough tonight. Telephone conections can still be had with a few of the subscribers that have instruments in their homes. Transportation to other towns can be had only by the railroad, which was also crippled from the effects of the storm. The great demand for provisions by families that are usually supplied by out of town concerns are being met by the local dealers. It is thought that the trolley service through town will be resumed by tomorrow.

The regular mid-week prayer services in both the Methodist and Presbyterian churches, which are usually held Wednesday nights will not be held tonight because of the lack of lights.

Residents of a number of the localities who are employed in New York and towns in that vicinity were unable to get to their places of business until late yesterday. Those that were out of town Sunday thought themselves fortunate that they could get to their homes late Sunday night and not be compelled to remain in hotels.

The local schools reopened their doors this morining for the regular study periods.

The meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association, scheduled to be held in the Whittier School, yesterday afternoon, was postponed because of the inclement weather and the bad facilities of travel.

Street Commissioner I. V. Smalley has made announcement that it cost the borough about $25 a day to remove the snow and open up the gutters from the streets in the heart of town during the storm that struck thts section of the country about 3 weeks ago. The total amount of money expended in this way was about $200. If the costs of removing the snow and ice from the main thoroughfares of the town will cost no more than it did during the first storm this year, the authorities can consider themselves exceptionally fortunate.

SOMERVILLE FELT STORM AS MUCH AS ANYWHERE

Somerville is still in the grasp of the snow storm which visited this State on Sunday. The telephone is the only public convenience that has been kept going throughout town. The operators are on duty, night and day, meals being furnished them. At nights the streets and many of the business places are in darkness because of the failure of electric lights. Very many of the manufacturing places, which had depended upon electricity for power, have been compelled to shut down, with no assurance when they shall be able to again begin operations. In consequence, there are a number of people out of work. Temporary arrangements have been made by the use of batteries to keep the fire alarm service in operation. Extra teams and men have been detailed for service at the firehouses, and residents are warned in case to call the nearest firehouse by telephone. Efforts are being made to clear the streets of the snow, but many of the side streets are still blocked.

The South Branch Railroad was opened up to Flemington late yesterday afternoon. A snow plow, pushed by two engines, was sent up the line about 4 o'clock, followed by an engine and one passenger coach. Attempts at regular schedules were made this morning.

The rural carriers from the Somerville postoffice attempted to resume trips yesterday morning, but gave it up after making a few deliveries near-by.

SOMERVILLE COUNCIL MET UNDER GREAT DIFFICULTIES

By the light of lamps, lanterns and tallow candles the Somerville Borough Council held its monthly meeting at the engine house on Monday evening, just enough members being present to make a quorum. The absentees were Councilmen Durling, Richards and Wright. Those present besides Mayor Steele were Councilmen Cline, Bellis and Barras. The Rev. Frederick J. Soule, formerly pastor of the Baptist church, sent his resignation as a member of the trustees of the Free Public Library, which was accepted. The Second National Bank notified the Council that five per cent. interest would be charged on all matured indebtedness of the borough, dating from January 1. The Rev. Samuel Parry again complained of the condition of his premises, which were left in an incomplete condition at the time the borough macadamized East Main street, and the matter was referred to the street committee for adjustment. An ordinance in regard to the collection of garbage was introduced. This is only supplemental to the one already in force by the Board of Health. It will come up for adoption at the next monthly meeting. From present indications the borough will continue to gather and dispose of the garbage of the borough, and not have the work done by contract, as proposed at a recent meeting. The monthly claims passed for payment amounted to about $2,200. It was also voted to pay West End Sewer Certificates to the amount of $1,812, including interest.

'Plains & Fanwood.

Henry Demarest, of Front street, met with a very painful accident while coasting on Spencer's Hill a few days ago. He was coming down the hill at full speed on a large bobsled on which there were two other young men, named Ernest Wahl and Fred Coombs, when the sled hit the side of a small hillock and turned over. Demarest, who was steering the bob, continued down the hill landing on his head and side. As a result of the spill Demarest had his face and side bruised and lacerated, while Fred Coombs, who was on the rear of the bob had his coat ripped off and was considerably bruised around the body. Wahl was the most fortunate of the trio and finished with only a few scratches on his arms.

While returning to his home on Stansbury avenue, from School No. 1 of Fanwood township, young Louis Carrono, was severely bitten by two dogs owned by Italians. One of the canines bit the little fellow on the left leg while the other dog tore the boy's pants. Dr. Roy Munger was called and attended the boy after which he said that the lad was in no danger of hydrophobia. In trying to locate the owners of the two dogs the local police force had very little success.

Joseph Frazer, of Forest road and Bartle avenue, met with an accident at the foot of Spencer's Hill, Friday morning, while walking along the street. A large bobsled upon which several of the younger folks were riding, struck the old gentleman below the knees throwing him to the ground. The accident resulted in a broken nose and a lacerated face for the aged pedestrian, who after being hit was assisted by those on the bob to his home where medical aid was summoned and treatments were administered.

Solomon Nutman, the Scotch Plains tailor, of Park avenue, who has been detained at his home as the result of an accident in New York city, is again able to be out.

Mrs. H. C. Meyers, of Front street, who has been undergoing treatment at the Muhlenberg Hospital, for a severe attack of jaundice, is slowly improving.

A meeting of the Fanwood Township Board of Education to prepare the annual election will be held in School No. 1 tonight.

The Borough Council will meet in the Fanwood fire house tonight.

REV. DR. HUGHWELL C. W. FOSBROKE AT GRACE CHURCH

Rev. Dr. Hughwell E. W. Fosbroke, of Cambridge, Mass., who is giving the first three of a series of nine Lenten lectures at Grace church on "The "Literature of the Bible," spoke in that church last night on "The Development of the National Consciousness and its Expression in Literature.' Despite the storm and weather conditions there was a good attendance.

Dr. Fosbroke will speak at the church tonight, on "The Period of Reflection and Interpretation and the Compiling of Books.' Rev. Dr. George Hodges, of Cambridge, will give three lectures on "The Wisdom Books,' on March 16, 17 and 18, and Rev. Dr. Herbert Symonds, of Montreal, Can., will lecture on March 23, 24 and 25 on "The Story of Progress in the New Testament.'

RESIGNS FROM COMMITTEES.

Trenton, March 4—As the result of a tilt in the Assembly, last night, Assemblyman Magnus Bredenbek, Democrat, of Hudson county, has resigned from all committees. The resignation was in the hands of Speaker Beekman, last night. It is said to be the result of an argument on the floor of the House over the printing of a bill about which there was a question of error.

SIMPLE SPRAYS FOR EMBROIDERING CHILDREN'S CLOTHES

Have you noticed the plain little embroidered frocks for children that the exclusive shops are showing? They are made from chambray, lawn, crêpe and ratine weaves and trimmed only with a bit of hand embroidery, worked in white on colored material, or in a color on white material. These simple little frocks are often absurdly high priced because of their individuality, but you can easily copy them for your little daughter as the materials are not expensive. They are most simple to construct and the embroidery can be done even by the amateur needlewoman. Transfer pattern 14418 includes six sprays which may be arranged in a variety of different ways for trimming, as the style of the frock may suggest. These sprays are exceptionally easy to embroider, as they may be done entirely in solid work, or with the flowers worked in eyelets. The designs are also appropriate for trimming lingerie waists, underwear, infants' garments and neckwear.

Many a plain garment is lifted above the commonplace by just a bit of handwork, and you will find that these little sprays, worked on your nightgown, chemise, combination or drawers will give them the effect of expensive underwear, at practically no cost and very little expenditure of time.

Guaranteed hot-iron transfer pattern 14418 can be supplied to readers on receipt of price, 10 cents.

Some Cookery Suggestions

WHEN USING HALIBUT.

HALIBUT is one of the most reliable fishes which the housewife finds in the market. It can be bought fresh at almost all seasons, is almost generally liked and makes a substantial dish at moderate cost. Some hints for using it are collected here.

Fillet of Halibut.—Take sliced halibut and cut from the bone; roll each of the pieces into shape and fasten with wooden pick until cooked; brush each piece with lemon juice to which have been added salt, pepper and onion juice. Stew fifteen to twenty minutes and serve with hollandaise sauce.

This Will Be Relished.

Halibut With Oysters.—Take halibut steak, broil and sprinkle with lemon juice. Heat oysters in butter until they curl, season with salt and pepper and pour over the fish. Garnish with parsley or watercress.

Stuffed Halibut Steak.—Take out the bone in each steak and fill the cavity with a breadcrumb stuffing, such as is used for chicken. Spread a layer of stuffing over the fish. Dot with bits of butter, season nicely and bake.

Piquantly Flavored.

Tomato Halibut.—Take a one and one-half pound slice of halibut and wipe with a piece of cheese cloth wrung out of cold water. Put in a dripping pan and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Take a half pint of tomato pulp and pour over top of fish, then cut a green pepper with seeds removed over top of tomatoes. Bake in a hot oven half an hour, basting with one-third of a cupful of butter.

Baked Halibut Steaks.—Trim halibut steaks, lay them in a roasting pan and to each two pounds use a cupful of cream or milk, one teaspoonful of flour, one tablespoonful of butter, one teaspoonful of salt and saltspoonful of pepper. Add the seasoning and dot with butter, then pour over it the cream and bake fifteen minutes in a quick oven. Garnish with parsley and serve with lemon.

St. Patrick Breathed on the Snow.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

The Good And Kind St. Patrick.

"DADDY, do tell us this evening about St. Patrick—just who he was and all about him. Will you?" asked Jack.

"I've always wanted to know more about him, too, so I'd love to have you tell us about him," added Evelyn.

"Yes," said daddy; "I think that would be a very good plan."

"How many years ago was he born?" asked Evelyn.

"He was born in 372.

"When he was only sixteen years old he was stolen by pirates. They did not treat him at all well, and he was sold by them into slavery in Ireland."

"Oh, how dreadful!" said Evelyn.

"His master set him to minding pigs in the mountains. But Patrick had a strange dream in which the Lord told him to run away and set out for a continental town. He had been seven years in Ireland, so he was used to its language and all its customs and manners. After a time he was ordained a deacon, then a priest, and finally he became a bishop. At this point the pope told him to return to Ireland to preach the gospel and to tell the Irish people, to whom he was devoted and where all his love and interest lay, the truth.

"And he was such a good bishop and such a lovely, kind man to all people that he was made a saint. Since then he has always been known as St. Patrick. Though he had to suffer much trouble, he was so marvelous that he could overcome all difficulties.

"One story is that on a bitter cold morning St. Patrick and a number of his followers found they could not possibly build a fire. They had had no breakfast and were half frozen. St. Patrick listened to their complaints for awhile, and then he told them to gather up the snow in a pile. This they did. St. Patrick breathed on it, and it became a fire.

"Another tale goes that St. Patrick drove all the poisonous snakes from Ireland. He did this by the beating of a drum. It is said that St. Patrick beat the drum so loudly that he knocked a hole in it, but that an angel appeared and mended it, so that the drum was afterward kept as a relic.

"It is told that in one part of Ireland from which St. Patrick drove the snakes and toads he chained one huge serpent by a lake called in Irish Lough Dilveen and told him to stay until Monday. The people around the district still claim that every Monday they hear the serpent calling out in the Irish dialect, 'It's a long Monday, St. Patrick!'

"St. Patrick is said to have died on the 17th of March, 493, aged 121. His grave is at Dunpatrick, Ireland, and a tombstone now bears his name cut in Irish characters."

A Tale of the Vanishing People

By REX BEACH

Copyright by Rex Beach

UP from the valley below came the throb of war drums, the faint rattle of shots and the distant cries of painted horsemen charging. From my hard won vantage on the ridge I had an unobstructed view of the encampment, a great circle of tepees and tents three miles in circumference, cradled in a sag of the timberless hills.

Five thousand Sioux were here in all their martial splendor, painted and decked and trapped for war, living anew their tales of might and repeating in mimicry their greatest battles. Five days the feasting had continued. Five mornings had I been awakened at dawn to see a thousand ochered, feathered horsemen pour out of the gullies upon the camp, their horses rearing and plunging, their rifles snapping and spitting, while the valley rocked to their battlecries and to the answering clamor of the army which met them. The odors of a savage people had begun to pall on me, the sound of a strange language had begun to annoy me, and I longed for another white man or a word in my own tongue. Next to my tent was another one which had been erected during my absence, and through the flap was thrust the head of my friend, the government doctor.

"Gee, I'm glad to see you!" I said as I shook his hand. "I'm as lonesome as a deaf mute at a song recital."

"What's the matter? Won't the Indians talk to you?"

"I guess they would if they could, but they can't. Out of these 5,000 Sioux I haven't found one who can understand a word I say, and I've tried some 4,980 of them."

The old gentleman laughed.

"Your government schools have gone back in the betting with me, doc. You must keep your graduates under lock and key."

"They can all speak English if they want to—that is, the younger ones can. Some few of the old people are too proud to try, but the others can talk as well as we can until they forget."

"Do you mean to say these aborigines have been fooling me? I don't believe it," said I. "There is one that can't talk English, and I'll make a bet on it." I indicated a passing brave with an eagle feather headdress reaching far down his naked legs. He was a magnificent animal—young, lithe and as tall and straight as a sapling—and was decked from head to feet in his gorgeous panoply. "I've tried him twice, and he simply doesn't understand."

My friend called to the warrior:

"Hey, Tom! Come here a minute."

The Indian came, and the doctor continued:

"Tomorrow, 4 o'clock, unless it rains," said the fellow.

"Are you going to ride?"

As the ocher daubed figure vanished into the dusk the old man turned to me, saying:

"Yale."

"What?"

"Yale; B. A. He's a graduate."

"Impossible!" I declared. "Why, I could hardly understand him. He talks like a foreigner or as if he was just learning the language."

"Exactly. That halting unfamiliarity with English marks the death and decay of his learning. In three years more he'll be an Indian again through and through. Oh, the reservation is full of fellows like that." The doctor continued, with a sigh: "It's a melancholy acknowledgment to make, but our work seems to count for nearly nothing. It's their blood.

"I've heard a graduating class read theses from a platform, sing cantatas in chorus and deliver orations. Then I have seen those same young fellows three months later squatting in tepees, grunting in their native tongues and eating with their fingers.

"Some years ago I felt I was well on my way to success, for I found a youth who offered every promise of great manhood. I studied him until I knew his every trait and his every strength. He did not seem to have any weakness. I raised him under my own supervision into a tall, straight fellow as handsome as figured bronze and with a mind far in advance of his people and his years. He had the best blood of the nation in him, being the son of a war chief, and they called him Thomas Running Elk. He was educated at the agency school under me, and he went through his college course like a stag at the head of a great herd, a silent, dignified, shadowy figure, unapproachable and mysterious to his fellow students. In all things he excelled, but he was best perhaps in athletics, the credit for which I also took, feeling a godlike satisfaction in my work.

"News came to me of his victories on track and field and gridiron, for his professors kept me posted, being likewise interested in my experiment, but as for him he never wrote. It was not his nature, nor did he communicate with his people.

"It was in my protege's senior year that the great thing entered his life, the thing I had craftily built upon from the start and had well nigh despaired of. The girl entered, but instead of Running Elk being drawn to the woman, as I had planned, the woman went to him.

"In order to understand the story you'll have to know something about old Henry and believe in heredity, as I do. He is a self made man. He came into the middle west as a poor boy and by force of his indomitable pluck, ability and doggedness became a captain of industry. He is the same now as when he was a section boss, and his daughter Alicia is another Henry Harman feminized. Her mother was a pampered child of Fifth avenue, born to money and a slave to her own whims, and Alicia grew up more effectively spoiled than her mother, combining the traits of both parents.

"Well, when I got a panicky letter from one of Running Elk's professors, coupling her name vaguely with that of my Indian, I wavered in my determination to see this experiment out. But the mind of the analyst is unsentimental, and one who sets out to untangle the skein of the gods must pay the price, so I waited.

"As if fate had really taken a part in the affair, I found a long distance call from old Henry Harman when I returned to my hotel. He had wired me here at the agency and, finding I was in Washington, had called me from New York. He didn't tell me much over the phone, except that he must see me at once, and as my work was finished I took the train in the morning, going straight to his office.

"'Doc, I'm in an awful hole,' he declared, 'and you're the only man who can pull me out. It's about Alicia and that savage of yours.'

"'I know something about it,' said I, 'and I feel rather to blame, for it was I who sent him to college.'

"'I won't be defied by my own flesh and blood! I won't! I won't! I'm the master of my own family! Why, the thing's so absurd it's almost unbelievable, and yet it's terrible—terrible! Heavens! What would her mother say if she were alive?'

"'Have you talked with Alicia?'

"'Not with her, to her. She's like a mule. Yes, sir, just like a mule. I never saw such a will in a woman. I—I've fought her until I'm as weak as a cat. I don't know where she got her temper!' He collapsed feebly, and I had to smile, for there's only one thing strong and stubborn enough to overcome a Harman's resistance, and that is a Harman's desire.

"'What does she say?' My interest in the affair was increasing.

"'Nothing, except to agree that I'm right in the abstract and then to inform me that the abstract problems go to pieces once in awhile. She says this—this Galloping Moose, this yelping ghost dancer of yours, is the only real man she ever met.'

"'What does he have to say?'

"'Humph!' grunted Harman. 'All he does is to listen.'

"'How old is Alicia?'

"'Nineteen. Oh, I've hurled that at her, too, but she says she'll wait! You know she has her own money from her mother.'

"'Does Running Elk come to your house?'

"At this my old friend roared so fiercely that I hastened to say: 'I'll see him at once. I have more influence than anybody else with him.'

"'I hope you can show him how impossible, how criminal it is to ruin my girl's life. Yes, and mine too. Suppose the yellow papers got hold of this thing!' Harman shuddered. 'Doc, I love that girl so well I'd kill her with my own hands rather than face her disgrace and see her ridiculed.

"'She could marry a duke if one happened to come along, and I'd buy her one, too, if she wanted him, but I won't stand for this dirty, low browed Injun.'

"'He's not dirty,' I declared, 'and he's not as low browed as some degenerate foreigner you'd be glad to pick out for her.'

"'Well, he's an Injun,' retorted Harman, 'an' it'll come out on him. We've both seen 'em tried. They all drop back where they started from. You know that as well as I do.'

"'I don't know it,' said I, thinking of my experiment, which had gone so badly askew, 'but we've got to put a stop to this affair in one way or another. I'll see the young man right away.'

"'Tomorrow is Thanksgiving,' said Henry. 'Wait over and go up with us and see the Yale-Princeton football game. I understand Running Elk plays fullback. We'll pick you up at your hotel in the morning and drive up in the car. It's the big game of the year, and you'll enjoy it. I don't expect to, however.'

"You have seen similar games, so there is no need of my describing this one, even if I could. As it was my first experience it impressed me greatly. When the teams appeared I recognized Running Elk at a distance, as did the hordes of madmen behind us, and I began to understand what the old man in the seat next mine was combating.

"A dancing dervish in front of the grand stand said something through a megaphone, then waved a cane, whereupon a tremendous barking 'Rah! Rah! Rah!' broke out, ending with my Sioux boy's name. They bellowed and rioted over him until I wished that the old chief back in Dakota were there to see his son and witness the honor he had won among the whites.

"Quite as impressive to me as this demonstration was the deathlike silence which settled when the teams scattered out in readiness. Princeton kicked off, and the ball sailed high and far. As it settled in its downward flight I saw a lithe, gaunt shadow of a man racing toward it and recognized my boy. I had lost his position for the moment, but I knew that hungry, predatory stride which devoured the fleeting yards as if he were a thing of the wind. He was off with the ball in the hollow of his arm, back into the heart of his enemies, dodging, darting, leaping, twisting, always advancing. They tore his interference from him, and yet he penetrated their ranks like an elusive, quivering beam of light which none of them might lay hands upon. He was running free when tackled, and his assailant launched himself with such savage violence that the sound of their impact came to us distinctly. As he fell I heard Alicia Harman gasp as if some hand had been removed from her throat. And then the crowd gave tongue.

"From that time on to the finish of the game my eyes seldom left Running Elk and then only to shoot quick glances at my companions.

"Although the skill of the young Sioux overtopped that of all the others, the opposing team played as one man, as a wonderful, well oiled piece of machinery, and they scored. All through the first half Yale struggled to retaliate, but at the intermission had not succeeded.

"In the second half of the game the son of a Sioux chief led the men of Eli as Hannibal led his Carthaginian cohorts up to the gates of Rome with the same irresistible progress, showing withal the military genius of a Chief Joseph. He was indefatigable, magnificent, and he tied the score.

"It was a grand exhibition of coolness and courage, for he was everywhere, always alert and ready, and it was he who won the game finally.

"There came some sort of fumble, too fast for the eye to follow, and then the ball rolled out of the scrimmage. Before we knew what had happened Running Elk was away with it, a scattered field ahead of him.

"I dare say you have heard about that run, for it occurred in the last three minutes of play and is famous in football annals to this day. It was a spectacular thing, apparently devised by fate to make more difficult the labors of old Henry and me. Every living soul on those high banked bleachers was on his feet at the finish, a senseless, screaming demon. I saw Alicia straining forward, her face like chalk, her very lips blanched, her whole high strung body a-quiver. Her eyes were distended, and in them I saw a look which told me that this was no mere childish whim, that this was more than the animal call of youth and sex. Running Elk had become a fetich to her.

"The father must likewise have recognized this, for as we passed out he stammered into my ear:

"'You see, Doc, the girl's mad. It's awful—awful! I don't know what to do!'

"The press had separated her from us a bit, so I answered: 'Get her away, quick, no matter how or where! Use force if you have to, but get her away and keep her away. I'll see him tonight.'

"'I guess it's our only chance,' mumbled the old fellow. 'I'll kidnap her and take her to Europe. It's awful!'

"I didn't go back to the city with them, but said goodby at the running board of their machine, finding next morning that the father had taken my advice and that they had sailed unexpectedly for an indefinite stay abroad.

"I spent that evening with Running Elk, who seemed glad to see me. He asked all about his people, told me of his progress and spoke lightly of his victory that day. Sound him as I would, I could elicit no mention of Alicia Harman's name. He wasn't much of a talker anyhow, and at last I was forced to bring up the subject myself, whereupon the silence of his forefathers fell upon him, and all he did was listen. I told him forcibly that any thoughts of her were ridiculous and impossible.

"'Why?' said he.

"I told him a thousand reasons why, recounted them cruelly, unfeelingly, but he made no sign to me. As a matter of fact, I don't think he understood them any more than he understood the affair itself. He appeared to be blinded and confused by the splendor of it all. She was so glorious, so different, so mysterious to him that he had lost all perspective. Recognizing this, I descended to material things which I knew he could grasp.

"'I paid for your education,' said I, 'and it is almost over with. In a few months you'll be turned out to make your living, and then you'll encounter this race prejudice I speak of in a way to affect your stomach and your body. You're a poor man, Running Elk, and you've got to earn your way. Your blood will bar you from a good many means of doing it, and when your color begins to affect your earning capacity you'll have all you can do to take care of yourself alone. Life isn't played on a gridiron, and the first thing you've got to do is make a man of yourself. You've got no right to fill your head with insane fancies of this sort.'

"'Yes, sir,' said he. And that was about all I could get out of him. His reticence was very annoying.

"I didn't see him again for two years. I had barely reached the reservation when the stage from the railroad brought two women, two strange women, who came straight to my office—Alicia Harman and her French maid.

"Well, I was fairly knocked endwise. But she was as well poised and self contained as on that Thanksgiving morning in New York when she and old Henry had picked me up in their automobile—a trifle more stunning and a bit more determined perhaps. Oh, she was a splendid creature, in the first glory of her womanhood, a perfectly groomed, pulsating, spoiled goddess. She greeted me graciously, with that queenly air of all great ladies.

"'Where is your father?' I asked as I laid off her dust coat.

"'He is in New York,' said she. 'I am traveling alone.'

"'Why have you come out here, Alicia?' I inquired slowly, being far more ill at ease than she.

"'Do you need to ask?' she answered. 'I respected father's wishes when I was in my minority. I traveled and studied and did all the tiresome things he wished me to as long as he had the right to ask them of me. But when I became my own mistress I took my full freedom. He made his life to suit himself, and I am very sorry I cannot build mine to suit him. But we don't seem to see things the same, and I dare say he has accepted the inevitable.'

"'Then you consider this inevitable?'

"She lifted her dainty brows. 'Inevitable is not a good word. I wish it. I have wished it from the first. I have never ceased to wish it for an instant. I feel I must have it. Therefore, to all intents and purposes, it is inevitable, I suppose.'

"'You have—er—been in communication with'—

"'Never. Father did not wish it.'

"'Then how did you know he is here?'

"'He wrote me when he left Yale that he was coming here. I have heard nothing since. He is here, is he not?'

"'So I believe. I haven't seen him yet. You know I've been away myself.'

"'Will you take me to him at once? If you are too busy I will ask'—

"'Very well,' said I. 'We'll drive out to the encampment.' And I telephoned for my buckboard.

"There was little said on our fifteen mile drive, for I was apprehensive, and she was oddly torn between fear and exultation. We left the French maid behind. I don't know that any woman ever went to her lover under stranger circumstances or in greater perturbation than did this girl, behind whom lay the selfishness of spoiled womanhood and a generation of unrestraint.

"It was well along in the evening when we came over the ridge and saw the encampment below us. You can imagine the fairy picture it made, with its myriad of winking fires, the soft effulgence of a thousand glowing tents and the wonderful magic of the night over all. As we drew nearer the unusual sounds of a strange merrymaking came to us, the soft thudding of drums, the weird melody of the dances, the stir and confusion of dense animal life. In the daylight it would have been picturesque, but under the wizard hand of the darkness it became ten times more so.

"When I finally tied my horses and led the girl into the heart of it I think she became a bit frightened, for these Indians were the Sioux of a bygone day, all barbaric and primitive in habit and dress and coloring—an atavistic race which had shaken off some threescore years, or some thirtyscore for all we knew.

"I guided her through the tangle of canvas habitations, through glaring fire lit circles and through black voids, where we stumbled and felt our way, rubbing shoulders with fierce warriors or sullen squaws. At every group I asked for Running Elk, but he was one of the shifting thousands, and nobody knew his whereabouts.

"At one time we came upon a sight I would gladly have spared her, the spectacle of some wrinkled hags strangling a dog. The girl at my side stifled a cry at the vision.

"'What are they doing?' she gasped.

"'Preparing the feast,' I told her.

"'Do they—really'—

"'Yes,' said I. 'They eat them. Come!' I tried to force her onward, but she would not stir until the sacrifice had been dragged to the flames, where other carcasses were singeing among the pots and kettles. From every side came the smell of cooking mingled with the odor of burning hair and flesh. I could hear Miss Harman panting as we went on.

"After an endless search, during which we circled half the great hoop, we came upon the trail of our man and were directed to a nearby tepee. I lifted the flap and peered within, clearing a view for Miss Harman.

"We beheld a circle of half naked braves in full regalia, squatting haunch to haunch, listening to a story teller. In front of them was a confusion of blackened pails and vessels filled with something steaming, into which they dipped their naked fingers. Their faces were streaked and foul with traces of the dish; the air of the place was dead and reeking from their breaths. My eyes were slower than Alicia's, and so I did not distinguish our quarry at first, although a slow sigh at my ear and a convulsive clutch at my arm told me that he was there.

"And then I, too, saw him. It was he who was talking and to whom the others listened, but what a change two years had wrought! His voice was harsh; his face through the painted daubs and streaks was coarser and duller than when I knew him; his very body was more thin and shrunken than in the past.

"He finished his tale while we were staring at him, the circle broke into commendatory grunts, and he smiled in childlike satisfaction at the impression he had made. He leaned forward and, scrutinizing the litter of sooty pots, plunged his hand into the mess.

"Miss Harman stumbled back into the crowd a pace or two, and her place was taken by a squaw.

"'Running Elk!' I called over the heads of those next the entrance, and, seeing my face against the night, he arose and came out, stepping over the others.

"'How do you do?' I said. 'You haven't forgotten me, have you?'

"He towered head and shoulders above me, his feather headdress adding to his stature, the beaded patterns of his war harness bright in the light.

"'No, no! I will never forget you, doctor. You—you have been sick? The change in his speech was as marked as in his body and habits. He halted over his words and mouthed them hesitatingly.

"'Yes, pretty sick. And you—what are you doing?'

"'I do what the rest do,' said he—'nothing. I have some horses and a few head of cattle; that is all.'

"'Are you satisfied with that sort of life?' I demanded sharply, at which he hesitated an instant before answering.

"'Yes, I am satisfied. I am an Indian.'

"'And so your education didn't do you any good after all?'

"This time he paused a long while before answering.

"'I have dreams,' said he, 'many dreams. But I am a Sioux, and you told me that dreams are out of place in an Indian, so I hope to forget them along with all the rest.'

"A woman's voice which I did not recognize called to me sharply, and as I went Running Elk bowed his head and slunk back through the tepee door into the heart of his people—into the past—and with him went my experiment. Since then I have never meddled with the gods or given them cause to laugh at me."

"What became of him?" I inquired.

"That was he I asked about the horse races, the man whom you couldn't understand, the fellow who wouldn't talk to you!" the old man answered.

"Good Lord!" said I.

"Why don't you ask about the girl?" said he. "Haven't you any sympathy for her?"

"Not much," I replied slowly, "for her course was obvious. I seem to see a more pathetic figure by far. It is that of a youth from whose eyes the bandages of tradition and training and heredity had been suddenly whipped—a youth forced out from the darkness of all the ages into a dazzling, incomprehensible world. I seem to see him, awestruck and timid, groping forward till he laid his hand upon a still more miraculous thing, but a real and tangible thing which he could understand and which made a god of him. Then I see that thing snatched away and see his only guide desert him, leaving him utterly naked and alone in the center of a universe which had no place for him. Can you wonder that he went back whence he had come, where he had fitted in, where he understood and was understood?"

"Then you don't think my experiment failed, after all?" inquired the doctor.

"You haven't proved that it did," I maintained, "for I would have done just what Running Elk did if I had been in his place, and so would you."

"Perhaps," said he.

Practical Fashion Hints

By Alice Gibson

A very plain, modish model for a separate blouse, is shown in No. 7621. It is cut Peasant style, with a seam down the middle of the back and may be made with full length or short sleeves. It is optional to use the Medici collar, or the flat square design.

This is an unusually good design for heavy material, serge, velveteen or flannel and may be effectively relieved by a line of novelty buttons extending down the front and trimming the outside of either sleeve.

If made with the short sleeves and the turned down collar, one of the silks, crepes or voiles may be used and the front relieved from too plain a look, by a frill of net or embroidery.

The pattern is cut in 6 sizes; 32 to 42.

This Is a Perfect Pattern.

WILSON STARTS ON SECOND YEAR

His First Unanimously Admitted a Success.

FOREIGN FIELD IS A SNAG

Mexican Situation and Home Conditions May Work a Sudden Change, Although His Policy So Far Has Not Proved a Success—Asserts Leadership.

Washington, March 4.—The country today saw the first year of the Wilson administration and, while the past year has been a success, the future is a matter of conjecture. At the approach of the anniversary Democratic leaders pause to "take stock," and others sort over and ponder the doleful predictions of disaster with which they ushered the Democratic party into power a year ago.

Both agree that the record of legislation in the last year was remarkable. So far the Democratic and Republican conclusion travel in agreement, but there is, of course, a parting of the ways when it comes to predictions as to the ultimate effect of the Wilson policies on the country and the political results.

To President Wilson alone is to be attributed the character of tariff bill finally passed, the enactment of currency legislation and the progress toward anti-trust legislation. On one thing everybody in Washington is agreed—the president has shown himself thus far to be complete master of congress and his party. Even Colonel Roosevelt in his most strenuous days as president did not approach the record made by Mr. Wilson in imposing his will on congress. And there has been this notable difference, President Wilson has accomplished his purpose without bluster and threats and without making enemies.

While the president in the first year of his administration has won the admiration and applause of the country through his assertion of party leadership and the driving through congress of an impressive list of enactments, he was less fortunate in the handling of foreign affairs. It has always been a matter of comment in Washington, though, that foreign affairs have had little effect on the voters of the country unless some case arose which deeply stirred the feelings of the people. That is why Mr. Wilson's friends have until recently been predicting that the Mexican situation would not affect the popularity of the president.

Impatience Showed.

Within the last week or so there have been indications that the country has begun to show real impatience over the humiliations heaped upon it by Huerta and the Constitutionalists and that the working out of the Mexican problem will have a more important effect on the future of the administration than had been expected.

Even the president's friends acknowledged that in the matter of foreign affairs there are only one or two features that really have reflected credit on the administration. These are the reversal of the attitude of this government toward the Panama canal controversy and the efforts of Secretary Bryan to promulgate his peace treaty ideas. The handling of the Mexican situation, except in so far as the president has shown evidence of great patience and forbearance, has admittedly been bungled almost from the start, the administration's repudiation of "dollar diplomacy" in the far east has greatly militated against American business enterprise and brought no tangible benefits in return for this end, and the president's announced policy is generally regarded through actual events as already having proved itself unworkable.

DIGGING NEW YORK OUT.

Car Service Much Improved, but Still Danger From Fires.

New York, March 4.—A warm sun came to the aid of the street cleaning commissioner in his efforts to clear the city of snow and slush and besides the paid army of 17,000 men at work on the unsightly piles that nearly choked some thoroughfares there were many volunteers. Following the suggestion made by Acting Mayor McAneny, many citizens offered to clear away the snow. The sun kept the snow soft and easy to handle and the work progressed favorably.

Car service in Manhattan was much improved. Practically all of the lines were running good schedules. In the other boroughs the service was not so good, but it was hoped it would be improved by night time.

HORSE SHOW TO BE POSTPONED

Strong Counter Attractions Interfere With Annual Event.

MAY BE HELD IN FALL

Local Club Said to Have Decided Not to Compete with Piping Rock Meet and Polo Matches—Other Plans.

Rumors that Plainfield's annual horse show would not be held this year at the usual time, the last three days of the first week in June, were confirmed today by Lewis E. Waring, an official of the Plainfield Riding Club, under whose auspices the exhibition is given. The announcement will be a keen disappointment to the friends and all patrons of the show. The fact that no exhibition will be held, while not officially given out, does not mean that it is to be abandoned in the future. On the contrary there are now being considered tentative plans for holding it early in the fall, possibly September.

The reasons why there is likely to be a postponement of the show are that there are too many big counter-attractions just at the time the local exhibition would be on. These include the amateur racing meet of the Piping Rock Racing Association scheduled for Thursday, Friday and Saturday, June 4, 5 and 6, the dates usually assigned for the Plainfield show. The card of events is a big one and purses aggregating $35,000 will be offered. Against such an attraction it would be useless for Plainfield to compete, as Piping Rock draws people from all parts of the country.

The following week the international polo matches between the American and English teams will be played at Westbury, and in consequence it would be useless to compete against that event. During the three days prior to June 4, 5 and 6, there is the horse show at Devon, Pa., so that the directors of the club would not feel justified in trying those dates.

The local club has too much money invested and the cost of the annual show is too great to run the risk of having a small attendance with a limited number of good entries, thus facing a certain financial loss. The financial standing of the club is the best and the officers do not intend to give up its annual exhibition, but it no doubt will consider it more expedient to possibly postpone the show until September.

There is another possibility that some arrangement may be made whereby the local show can be given in conjunction with or before or after the Morristown exhibition, thereby attracting entries from the latter show. Nothing definite, however, has been decided upon as to such a plan. While the Piping Rock Association has been granted the dates June 4, 5 and 6, the Plainfield Riding and Driving Club could secure those dates for its show from the National Hunt and Steeplechase Association, if it was thought wise.

It is expected that the directors of the local club will have a meeting within a short time when official announcement will be made regarding the plans. This, however, will not be held until the return of O. T. Waring, president of the club, from Bermuda, where he is at present.

The club had the promise of an unusually large number of fine entries for this show, including all of the old exhibitors, as well as several new ones, but those familiar with horse shows are agreed that it would be unwise for the Plainfield Riding and Driving Club to attempt to compete with such strong attractions as Piping Rock or the International Polo matches, and it is understood that they have advised directors of the club to that effect. If it is found impossible to hold the show this year exhibitors and other patrons may rest assured that it will be held next year.

R. A. FAIRBAIRN RETIRES AS HORSE SHOW CHAIRMAN

Robert A. Fairbairn, of Westfield, who is a director of the Plainfield Riding and Driving Club, has resigned as chairman of the horse show committee of the National Horse Show Association, having been succeeded by Alfred B. Maclay, who has been an exhibitor at the Plainfield show in past years. Mr. Fairbairn retires because of ill health. In the future he plans to travel considerably and will doubtless spend some time during the coming year in the South.

Mr. Fairbairn has been connected with the National Horse Show Association for several years, giving much of his time to the success of the organization. His efforts have also been a great help in the success of the Plainfield show.

LENT BRINGS AN OYSTER FAMINE

Supply Fails Just When Abstinence From Meat Stimulates Demand.

HIGH PRICES PREVAIL

Just at this time, the beginning of Lent, when more oysters are said to be consumed by Plainfield people than at any other time of the year, there is a dearth of the bivalves in the local markets. Prices are unusually high, Plainfield dealers say. Fewer oysters are to be had in this city, at the present time, than has been the case, it is said, in ten years. The scarcity will be particularly felt by housewives, it is believed, tomorrow, when provision is made for Friday's dinner.

It is not alone the bad weather and the slowness of transportation since the recent storm, that is held to blame for the present oyster shortage, which, for want of a better name, may be termed a famine. Rather, dealers say, it is the late appearance of winter and the total unpreparedness of the producers. Generally, the coldest weather comes earlier in the winter. Oystermen are accustomed to making ready for it by laying in large stocks so as to tide themselves over the period of storm and cold, when the surface of the large area of oyster beds is ice covered. The mildness of the weather this winter caused them to neglect such usual precautionary measures.

In December, and in January, there was a plentitude of oysters. Suddenly, came a succession of snow storms and intensely cold weather all along the Atlantic seaboard. Oystermen were, to their chagrin, caught wholly unprepared. Ice formed over all of the great oyster beds from the New England coast to Cape Hatteras For days not an oyster was dug. Meanwhile, the few bivalves that were on sale in the markets of the country were either eaten, or delayed in transit. Heavy snows held up freight trains. Still another difficulty encountered came as preparations were being made by oystermen for cutting through the ice to get at their harvest.

Usually, when oyster beds freeze over, the practice is to cut a long canal in the ice. The beds are then dragged by walking a horse along the open strip. But this year a thaw came just after the canals mentioned had been cut. The ice fields were broken into floes. This precluded the dragging of the beds, either by boats or horses. In consequence, the scarcity of oysters has continued. Since the last storm there is said to be but little hope of bettering existing conditions. Even in the South, where some fine and succulent oysters come from, conditions are bad. So on the Long Island coast, where most of the oysters eaten by Plainfield people come from. Owing to the shortage in the supply local dealers declare they are obliged to pay as high as $6.50 and $7 a barrel in the New York market. Time was when $3.50 a barrel would have been deemed very high.

At the fish store of Fred Ivamy, on West Second street, it was said this afternoon that the shortage of oysters was noticeable. The store will, however, it is said, be in a position to supply its customers tomorrow and every effort is to be made to secure sufficient oysters to supply the Lenten demand for them. Usually the greatest demand for oysters comes at the comencement and the ending of the Lenten season, it was said.

At the fish market of Gustave Hoffman, on West Front street, the statement was made that oysters were not only scarce, but that the dealers were obliged to pay high prices to obtain them from the wholesalers. Conservatively speaking, fully $1 more a barrel is being paid for oysters today than in a long time heretofore. Much trouble is being experienced by local dealers in getting their orders filled by the New York marketmen, who deal directly with the oystermen of Long Island.

RECITAL WAS GIVEN.

Mrs. Nellie Strong Stevenson, of New York, gave her lecture-recital before the Monday Afternoon Club, Monday afternoon, despite the storm. The subject was "Strauss-Debussy," and inasmuch as Mrs. Stevenson reached Plainfield and there were about ten women present, it was decided to give the full program.

PLENTY OF COAL IN SOME YARDS

Further Investigation Into Situation Sets Aside Reports of Pessimists.

DELIVERIES ARE SLOW

Dealers Experience Difficulty in Getting Supply to Patrons, But No One Need Fear That Supply Will Give Out in Plainfield.

Despite reports to the contrary which have been circulated during the past few days by some local coal dealers, it was ascertained this morning that there is no immediate danger of a coal famine in Plainfield and many of the dealers have a good supply of all sizes on hand at the present time. Considerable difficulty has been experienced in delivering the fuel because of the condition of the roads, one team being able to do only one-half of its normal work and extra teams hard to secure.

The publication of a story in The Daily Press, following interviews with some local dealers, has caused trouble among all the dealers who have been swamped with orders urging immediate delivery this morning. Householders have become alarmed over the prospects of a shortage and many hurry calls have been sent out to replenish supplies. It has been definitely ascertained, however, that many local yards are in no immediate danger of a dearth of coal and patrons have no cause for worry.

When interviewed by a Daily Press reporter this morning, A. C. Wadley, of the firm of Wadley & Goodenough, said:

"There is an abundance of coal in my yards to meet the demands of my patrons for sometime to come and the many orders I have received this morning as the result of the reports will be filled as quickly as transportation over bad roads will permit. My men have unloaded eight cars since 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon and ten cars are now waiting to be brought on my trestle. A conservative estimate puts the amount of coal in our bins at 1,000 tons.

"I personally took a walk down the Central Railroad tracks yesterday afternoon and viewed the yards of other Plainfield dealers to get a definite line on the situation. I counted twenty cars of coal in other yards. Conditions in New York differ from those of local dealers and the circumstances should not be confused. In the metropolis it is necessary to use boats in the transportation of coal to the city and in many instances these barges have been frozen to the docks since Sunday.

Plainfielders have absolutely no cause for worry and the only thing needed at the present time is patience as it is impossible for teams to accomplish their normal amount of work at this time. Dealers may be slow in making deliveries, but this is not due to the shortage of fuel. Tuesday afternoon I talked with a coal salesman in my office and ordered a car of egg coal. Yesterday afternoon I received a manifest for the coal ordered."

The fact that four firms were experiencing a coal shortage was published in The Daily Press of yesterday after the firms had been consulted by a reporter. Not all of those talked with admitted a shortage in the supply, but the consensus of opinion was that coal was scarce and that there might be some inconvenience if shipments were not soon received.

FRANK H. SMITH IS RE-ELECTED EXALTED RULER

Plainfield Lodge No. 885, B. P. O. E., held its annual meeting last night for the election of officers. Frank H. Smith was re-elected exalted ruler for the third term, there being no opposition. There was a large attendance of members and much interest in the choice of officers. Those elected are as follows:

Exalted ruler, Frank H. Smith; esteemer leading knight, A. A. Prudhon; esteemed loyal knight, Joseph P. Burd; esteemed lecturing knight, Walter S. Marder; secretary, William R. Townsend; treasurer, Harry B. MacDonald; tyler, Edward C Searing; trustee, three years, S. P. T. Wilbur; representative to grand lodge, which meets at Denver, Frank H. Smith; alternate, Joseph Noonan.

ENTERTAINMENT POSTPONED.

On account of the lack of light, the "Evening of Pictures," that was to have been given in the Temple Baptist church, tonight, by the Bible School, will be postponed until Tuesday evening, March 10. The pictures to be shown were taken by George E. Hall while on his various trips, and are very interesting.

"ABYSMAL BRUTE" TO RUN IN DAILY PRESS

First Installment Will Be Published in Tomorrow Night's Paper.

The "Abysmal Brute," by Jack London, is the next serial story to appear exclusively in The Daily Press. Had regular publication been possible it would have started on Monday, but because of the storm the first installment has been delayed until all of the 600 new subscribers who began this week, were started. Every one of these names have been given to our carrier boys in the city, and papers shoiud reach all beginning tonight. The serial to be started tomorrow night is a short one. It will be followed by another of equal interest, by a well-known writer. The great success of "Seven Keys to Baldpate" has convinced the publishers of The Press that there is no feature more popular than a serial story.

Few authors living today have the force and directness, the rugged strength and vitality of style of Jack London. This new novel is one of his best. It is a story of the prize ring, a real man's story, big and vigorous and thrilling. Behind the tense life, the excitement of the fight itself, one can see in reading it the crookedness, the devious ways of the keen-witted men who stage the big fight and reap the profits. More than this, one can see into the soul of the Abysmal Brute himself, one of the strangest, most human and fascinating characters London has ever drawn, a bruiser who is a scholar as well, who is honest and clean and innocent up to the moment of his disillusionment—a veritable cross section of a strange phase of American life.

DR. MACHAN DIES IN NEW YORK HOSPITAL

Dr. Alexander Machan, a widely-known veterinary surgeon, who had lived in Plainfield for the past two years, died at Roosevelt Hospital New York, yesterday afternoon, following an operation. Dr. Machan left Plainfield about six months ago, going to Paterson, where he underwent an operation. He did not improve, and recently he decided to go to Roosevelt Hospital for another operation. This did not bring the desired relief. The cause of death was stomach trouble.

Dr. Machan formerly lived in Paterson and at Monticello, N. Y., coming to this city from the latter place. He was very well-known throughout New York State cities and towns. During his stay in Plainfield he lived at 324 East Second street. He had offices at 138 East Second street and 118 East Fourth street. There survives a wife and one son, John Machan. Arrangements for the funeral will be announced later.

WILL GIVE A PUBLIC ORGAN RECITAL AND CONCERT

Under the auspices of the Public Recreation Committee a public organ recital and concert will be given at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, Thursday evening, March 12, at 8 o'clock. Dr. E. Mettler Davis, organist, will be in charge and preside at the organ. The vocal numbers will be given by Miss Lillian Vernon Watt, soprano, and Miss Grace J. Carroll, contralto.

The admission to the affair will be free, but by ticket, and these can be obtained at the local drug stores, the dry goods stores or at The Daily Press office.

MONDAY'S PAPER.

So many requests have come from subscribers and others for copies of the abbreviated Daily Press which was published on Monday night, during the blizzard, that we have decided to reproduce it exactly as it was printed, in tomorrow's Daily Press. The same type from which the original edition was printed will be used, and the paper will be so arranged with white space around it that it can be clipped out of tomorrow's paper for preservation. Probably no edition of a local paper has created so much comment as this miniature Daily Press, and it has been impossible to supply the demand for copies, which have been mailed from one end of the country to the other.

AERIAL WIRES A PERIL TO CITY

SHOULD ALL BE BURIED

Danger to life and property through falling wires, as well as the inconvenience resulting through overhead lines being put out of commission, will, it is believed, lead eventually to municipal action with the view of compelling public utilities, such as the telegraph, telephone and electric light companies, to put their wires underground.

Evils of the present overhead system were brought especially to the attention of Plainfield people during the recent storm. Through lack of light, failure of telephone service and inability to send despatches, the entire community was isolated from communication with the outside world. It was a situation that was wholly unexpected, serious in the extreme, and such a condition as is likely to occur again under like circumstances.

Failure to light the streets by the Public Service Corporation, was in itself a menace to the entire community. The wrecking of the fire alarm system, the wires of which are all overhead, greatly increased the danger of fire. Other inconveniences, which were many, could easily have been avoided, had the overhead lines been dispensed with and the wires placed in conduits underground.

The transmission cable running from Metuchen, where the power plant of the Public Service Corporation is situated, is an overhead line. So is the Cranford service cable, from Richmond street out. There is said to be a general feeling now among Plainfielders that all wires should be buried. Action by the Common Councils of Plainfield and North Plainfield could accomplish this result. While the service companies who would be affected by such an ordinance, were it passed, would be obliged to expend a large amount of money, once the underground conduit or subway system was inaugurated, further danger of storms putting the several systems out of commission would be averted, with a consequent saving of many thousands of dollars to the public utility corporations.

The impracticability of the overhead wire system has stirred Fire Chief T. O. Doane, and other officials of the Plainfield fire department, as few propositions could. They see, probably better than do most citizens, the constant danger from such lines in weather characterized by severe storms, whether heavy wind and rain storms in the summer months, or the naturally more disastrous ones in the winter. In the case of fire overhead wires are at times a deadly peril, carrying as some of them do high voltage. Firemen here in Plainfield, and the borough, as in other cities, risk dangers enough when in attendance upon fires, under ordinary circumstances. They should not, in the opinion of Fire Chief Doane, and fire department officials, be placed in momentary peril of death from some live wire. But little attention has been given to this feature of danger by the public utility corporations here who control the systems of overhead wires. It is declared that their employes are never too prompt in cutting and detaching disentangled live wires, with which they are familiar, at any time that such action is necessary. It is regarded as miraculous that no person was killed or injured by electric wires during the storm which this city has just experienced.

There is, at the present time, a bill before the State Legislature, which provides for the establishment by New Jersey municipalities, of subways and conduits. It is aimed to force the removal of overhead wires so far as may prove possible. Trolley wires, naturally, cannot be buried, where the overhead system is used, as in Plainfield, for the operation of cars. All other wires can be buried.

Trouble experienced during and since the storm was almost wholly due to falling poles and wires. Had there been no overhead lines the weather conditions would have been met by the lighting, telephone and telegraph companies just as readily as was the case in an even more severe storm a few weeks earlier. Most of the fallen wires in this city were those carrying electric currents of small potentiality, not ordinarily dangerous, but which became heavily charged through falling across live wires.

The legislative measure, which has been framed with the object of forcing all municipalities to order the burial of the present overhead wires is now in the hands of the Assembly committee on municipal corporations.

ASK $36,000 FOR DARLING FARM

PRICE IS $400 AN ACRE

The Legal Phase of the Purchase of a Site for Sewage Disposal Works to Be Considered Next Saturday Night.

Purchase of the Darling farm, as a site for the sewage disposal beds, needed in the construction of the big trunk line sewer for the municipalities of Plainfield, North Plainfield and Dunellen, can be made for the sum of $36,000. Of this amount $5,000 must be paid upon the signing of the contract of sale. Once the payment of the $5,000 is made there need be no delay in starting work.

Questions raised last night, at the meeting of the joint sewer commission, as to the advisability of buying the Darling farm at the option price, and as to the legality of the proposed action, are said to have led up to spirited discussion of the project by George S. Clay, chairman of the commission, and Mayor Robert Clark, Jr., of North Plainfield. It was the desire of the latter, it is said, to have the matter definitely decided upon immediately. Chairman Clay is said to have demurred and the passage of words between the two gentlemen was today declared, by others who were present, to have been quite acrimonious.

At another session of the commission to be held on Saturday night, a representative of the firm of Lindabury, Depue & Faulks, of Newark, which firm has charge of all legal matters appertaining to the proposition to build a trunk line sewer will be present. He will pass, it is said, upon the legolity of the question as to just how the necessary money is to be obtained to secure the $5,000 necessary to obtain a contract for the purchase of the Darling farm, in Piscataway township.

It is on this land that the sewage disposal beds are to be located permanently. No attention is to be paid to the protests which, from time to time, have been made against the proposed location by residents in that locality. The acquisition of the farm will allow of the speedy starting of the sewer project. It is quite possible that through their counsel, William A. Coddington, the people in Piscataway township may seek to enjoin the three municipalities interested in the establishment of the sewage beds in that section. If so, the matter will be threshed out in the courts. The municipal heads of Plainfield, North Plainfield and Dunellen, however, are not worrying over the prospects of litigation. It is not believed likely that the decision of the courts will be adverse although, temporarily, the work of locating the disposal beds may be delayed. Meanwhile the building of the trunk line will go right on.

To build the trunk line sewer and install the necessary disposal beds will cost the three municipalities interested, approximately $300,000. Of this amount Plainfield, under the agreement made, must pay 66 per cent.; the borough of North Plainfield 27 per cent., and Dunellen, the remaining 7 per cent. Under this arrangement, members of the Common Council, who are likewise members of the joint sewer commission, have recently, it is said, come to realize that North Plainfield is especially favored financially and in all other ways. It is claimed that the Borough of North Plainfield has the best of the bargain, and realization of the fact is said to have caused the Plainfield members much chagrin and dissatisfaction is said to exist among them as a result.

Not only does North Plainfield pay but 27 per cent. of the cost of construction, but no provision has been made to increase the share of the borough, in the great improvement, as time goes on, although it is known that with the completion of the trunk line property values in North Plainfield will be higher, and the borough will become far more of a residential centre than it now is. Then, too, the big trunk line, as planned, will be on the borough side of the brook.

In order to make connection with it Plainfield will have to pay the expense, which will, it is said be at least $30,000. It is provided that although joint ownership in the pipe line is held by the borough, that municipality shall pay nothing towards the cost of making the Plainfield connection. And, should Scotch Plains and Fanwood, in time to come, desire to connect with and make use of the trunk line sewer, payment for such use must be made to North Plainfield. Why the borough should receive all the revenue collected from others, is something that some persons on the commission are puzzled over, although the agreement was ratified by the joint sewer commission. There are those in this city,

GOSSIPS DISCUSS CLARK'S REMOVAL

Idle Rumors That Board of Education Secretary Was Forced Out.

A VERSION OF AFFAIR

School Body Said to Have Felt That Secretary's Health Did Not Permit Continuation in Position, and Offered Him Minor One.

There have been all sorts of rumors around town regarding the change in the secretaryship of the Plainfield Board of Education, and the tongues of the gossips have been wagging at a lively pace ever since the Daily Press exclusively announced on Friday night last that Frank B. Clark had resigned from the position. One story was that the Board of Education tried to "unload" Mr. Clark, and in order to do so, reduced his salary by one-half, thus practically forcing his resignation. It is said that the salary of the position was $2,500 a year, but as the Board of Education does not make public any salaries paid, there is no official record to confirm these figures.

When Mr. Clark's resignation was handed to the board, it was to take effect on April first, but he refused to appear at the meeting held Tuesday night of this week, and H. W. Conger, who had been decided upon as his successor was immediately put in the position.

Efforts to run down the rumor today, so far as Mr. Clark is concerned, were unavailing, as he was said to be in New York, but it was learned that the change has been contemplated by the Board of Education for nearly a year. One member of the board, when approached today, said that he much regretted that the matter had become one for idle gossip. He did not care to be quoted, but it was learned from a thoroughly reliable source that the board has felt that the condition of Mr. Clark's health was such that he could not fully continue work, much as the members of the body would have liked to retain him, because of his twenty years service in the position. Under the law there is no pension fund provided for this position, as there is in the case of teachers, and the board decided to offer Mr. Clark a position at a reduced salary which did not entail so much work or call for any great strain. There was not a dissenting voice in the board when the matter came up, and all of the members regret very much that some bitterness has been shown in the controversy.

It was learned that Mr. Clark's successor assumes the position at a smaller salary than that which was paid to him. The figure is said to be $2,000.

ATTENDANCE BANNER AWARDED TO SENIORS

North Plainfield Parent-Teacher Association Presented Trophy This Afternoon.

Members of the North Plainfield High School senior class were the guests of the borough Parent-Teachers' Association at a meeting held this afternoon in the Somerset street school building. The attendance banner which was offered by the association for the best class record was presented to the senior class by Mrs. Oliver Ewart, chairman of the committee in charge of this new feature.

The pennant was received by Frank Dunning, president of the senior class, on behalf of the members. The banner is made up in the class colors, brown and gold, and the letters are the handiwork of Mrs. E. F. Lowe. The trophy will be hung in the senior class room until graduation time and then will be presented to the valedictorian of the class. The committee in charge of this work included Mrs. Oliver Ewart, Mrs Frank O. Dunning, Sr., Mrs. Dailey, Mrs. Frank Burner and Mrs. E. F. Lowe.

Following the special session a large amount of current business was transacted by the association.

HEATING PLANT ALL RIGHT.

Supervising Principal A. B. Vossler, of the North Plainfield schools announced today that the heating plant in the Somerset School was in good condition. Because of the lack of electric power with which to drive the big ventilating fan which disseminates the heat through the building, no sessions of the school can yet be held. Regular sessions are being held in the Watchung School, as usual.

—Neuman Brothers will have an unusually fine line of fresh fruits and vegetables for tomorrow's trade at their Watchung avenue market.—Adv. ***

'Plains & Fanwood.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Tull and Mr. and Mrs. White comprise the entertainment committee of the Saturday Night Club to be held in the Fanwood Fire House, Saturday evening.

The Lincoln Social Club will not meet in the Fanwood Fire House tonight, as expected, owing to there being no electric lights.

Mayor Hoar and family are wintering in New York.

On account of the lack of lights, due to the recent storm, the Fanwood Borough Common Council met at the residence of Mayor W. H. Hoar, last evening, instead of at the usual meeting place. The streets and sidewalks committee reported that the snow is being cleared from the paths as quickly as possible. The committee on audit and finance reported a balance of $4,087.47 in the treasury of the borough. It also reported that it has determined to pay off the $1,000 note carried by the borough in the First National Bank, of Plainfield. The following bills were ordered paid: Charles D. Resse, for official rolled gold badges, $32; William Linden, for removing snow from the sidewalks, $50.13, the Public Service Corporation for street lighting during February, $106.07; salary of police marshal for February, $75; A. D. Beeken, for printing and stationery, $16.10; First National Bank of Plainfield, $1,000, paying off note. The new ordinance on the construction and maintenance of sidewalks was passed on third reading. The walks must be at least four feet wide and must be well drained. They must be constructed of either slag or concrete. The ordinance of 1903, pertaining to sidewalks, was repealed. Fifty dollars was appropriated for the Board of Health budget, as per request. The resignation of Secretary S. W. McAneny, of the Board, was accepted with regret. A communication was read from Senator Carlton Pierce, in which he stated that he disapproved of the proposed small board of freeholders, and that the present board would have his support. The secretary of the Fanwood Fire Company notified the Council, in a letter, that Reed Holliday was elected a member at the last meeting. The meeting adjourned to meet again the first Wednesday evening in April.

The Fanwood Township Board of Education met last night at School No. 1 to arrange for the anual school election on Tuesday, March 17, when the appropriations will be voted upon.

Warrenville.

Warren township was visited on Sunday night with the worst storm since March 12, 1888. Telegraph poles were completely broken off, telephone wires were stretched across the road, large trees were torn out by the roots, the roads being completely block and traffic entirely tied up.

While driving home from Plainfield at a late hour Sunday night, Alfred Jennings broke his wagon. He unhooked his horse and started to walk, thinking he was going to the home of Dirk De Hass on the Washington Rock road, he wandered off the main road and when help reached him he was in a swamp on the farm of Dr. Cooley. After much persuasion he walked to Pedeflous' Hotel and stayed there until Monday morning, when he proceeded to his home on foot, leaving the horse at the hotel.

On Monday night, a horse driven by Jacob Newton and owned by Alfred Binz, of Mt. Bethel, became exhausted while going down the Warrenville hill. Mr. Newton unharnessed the horse and put it in Louis Mazoyer's barn and proceeded to his home on foot.

While Clarence Roddy was returning from taking his father to Plainfield, Sunday night, his horse got fast in a snow bank near William Kirch's and the harness had to be cut before the horse could be released.

The Warrenville school, which has been closed for the past two days, reopened this morning.

Miss Minnie Steffens has returned to her home after a week's visit with friends in Jersey City and Brooklyn.

Miss Lillian Williams was given a surprise party in honor of her eighteenth birthday on Saturday evening. Dancing, singing and games were enjoyed and at a late hour a dainty lunch was served.

George Spencer, teacher of the South Stirling school, was visiting his mother in Mt. Horeb over Sunday and on account of the storm was unable to get to his school until yesterday.

Somerville

Mr. and Mrs. T. I. Honeyman and son, Arthur Honeyman, started this morning for Washington, D. C., and from there to Jacksonville and Palm Beach, Fla. They will make an indefinite trip.

The dinner of the Somerville Merchants' Association will be given at the Country clubhouse, Raritan, on Thursday, March 19.

The Somerville Athletic Association will hold an important meeting in its rooms next Tuesday evening. At this time nominations will be made for the officers of the association; preparations for the annual dinner, which will be held the latter part of March, and also for the celebration of the tenth aniversary, which will be held in April.

Electric lights were turned on in parts of the town last night, although some of the stores and residences are still minus this convenience. The streets, however, were still in darkness last night. Because of the current being turned on for the house service, workmen had to quit work of restoring the fire alarm system at night.

The Alumni Association of the Somerville High School will hold a banquet in the Second Reformed chapel, Saturday evening. About one hundred and twenty-five are expected to be present.

Chris. Dois, a Greek merchant, of West Main street, was taken before Recorder W. R. Sutphen a few days since and fined for selling cigarettes to minors.

Edward O'Donnell expects to move from East Main street to the property he recently purchased on South street, April 1.

The trolley company's gang of laborers have succeeded in opening the line from Bound Brook to Raritan, and everything is in readiness to move as soon as the electric current is turned on. The men in charge of the stalled car under the subway, between this place and Raritan, are enjoying themselves as best they can during their enforced stay there.

A committee of fifty from the Second Reformed church working in pairs, will visit every member of the church Sunday afternoon or evening in the interests of the benevolences of the church.

The members of Ivanhoe Council, No. 72, Jr. O. U. A. M., will entertain a number of State officers at the meeting Monday evening.

COUNTY'S HOSPITALITY DID NOT MEET HIS EXPECTATIONS

Thinking he could "put one over" on the county when given his choice of paying a $5 fine or spending ten days in the Middlesex county jail, John Burns, of New Market took "time" when arraigned before Recorder David S. Campbell in Dunellen yesterday, but became suddenly afflicted with a severe case of "cold feet" and counted out the five hard simoleans.

Soon after Burns announced his intention of sleeping and eating at the county's expense for ten days, Marshal Tarpy started with his man for New Brunswick in an open sleigh. Half way between the two Middlesex county towns the vehicle became stalled in a snow bank, and after working for an hour with the marshal in an effort to extricate the sleigh the prisoner dug down in his jeans and handed over the fine, claiming that he did not know that snow shoveling went with the sentence.

PERSONAL.

Dr. N. W. Currie and family have removed from 515 Madison avenue to 508 Central avenue, having purchased the property.

Israel Stites, formerly of Plainfield, but who has been living at Akron, Ohio., has returned home on account of the critical illness of his mother, Mrs. Anna Stites, who lives in Dunellen.

Miss Jessie Brown, of Jersey City, who has been visiting here several days, has returned home.

Former Mayor Charles Joel Fisk, who with Mrs. Fisk has been living at Wilburtha, near Trenton, has been detained at his home by illness, recently. His condition is not considered serious, however, and he hopes to be out again within a short time.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert N. Packard, of West End avenue, have returned from Bridgeton, where they were storm-bound for a couple of days.

Former Mayor N. B. Smalley, of the borough, and George Andrews, of the Public Service Corporation, have returned from a trip to Washington. They were delayed en route for home by the storm.

Mr. and Mrs. Odie Ulmer, of Harrison avenue, are entertaining Miss Ethel Harrison, of Coontown.

The Misses Grace and Lucy Herlich, of Newark, were recent guests of Miss Carrie Koechlein, of this city.

Mrs. S. Schraeger, of Madison avenue, has been confined to her home by illness.

Mr. and Mrs. Elston Johnston, of George street, are entertaining Miss Amanda M. Stine, of Mt. Carmel. Miss Stine has been the guest of friends in Warrenville and during her stay in Plainfield will visit New York.

THE PLAINFIELD THEATRE

"Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," a play which may be said to be a fit example of the simple life, lived humorously, comes to the Plainfield Theatre tonight, and will be presented by practically the same cast as last season. It needs no introduction or recommendation to local amusement lovers, and, like the book of which it is an excellent dramatization, the play may well be set down as a tonic for the low-spirited and despondent, a new inspiration to the strong and a positive delight to all. It has been said that "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" as a play has sufficient heart interest and a sufficient number of distinct types to supply half a dozen comedy dramas and make the fame and fortune of each. The United Play Company has certainly done its part in giving an elaborate and realistic production, and has provided a cast of exceptional merit.

Our theatregoers have their first opportunity of witnessing "The Spendthrift," the latest dramatic work of Porter Emerson Browne, whose "A Fool There Was" has given him a position among American dramatists. The piece is a "vital drama of today" and deals primarily with the extravagance and wasted opportunities of a class of women who are numerous in certain strata of society. The basic theme of "The Spendthrift" appealed to Browne for a long time before he set his thoughts on paper and when he did he put into his writing all the vitality with which the idea was invested during the mental evolution. The play will be seen here Saturday afternoon and evening.

"The Red Widow" which comes to the Plainfield Theatre, Tuesday, March 10, is one of those rare gems among musical plays that have a real plot. The story which is consistent is followed closely throughout. "Cicero Hannibal Butts" is in London with his wife, who is an ardent suffragette. They are supposed to be on their way to Russia, but at the last moment Mrs. Butts receives an invitation to lead a band of suffragettes in a demonstration on the House of Parliament and to help throw a few bricks. It is at this point that "Anna Varvara," known to the Russian secret police as "The Red Widow" overhears Mrs. Butts' declaration that she is going to stay behind. "The Red Widow," with her good looks and wiles, subjects Butts to the dangers of being mixed up in matters that are dangerous for Russia; she persuades him to allow her to cross the frontier as Mrs. Butts. He, willing to help a lady in distress, agrees. The second act, private parlor in the Hotel Del' Europe in St. Petersburg, and here Butts realizes that he has jumped into a mess of trouble with both feet for trying to help the "The Red Widow." In this act is sung the song-hit of the show—"I Shall Never Look at a Pretty Girl Again." From now on the complications grow. Melodrama, comedy, farce and music are merged together into a bubbling melody of amusement.

PROCTOR'S FINE BILLS.

The moving picture entertainment at Proctor's Theatre was resumed last night, when the playhouse was thronged with patrons. The program for today is of exceptional merit. There will be Pathe's three-part adaptation of Jules Clarite's famous novel "Little Jack," "Cupid's Close Shave," "The Mill Girl," "The Amateur Detective's Dream," "The Easter Egg," "Three Children" and others. Tomorrow's bill will include "All for His Sake," "The Story of David Grieg," "The Money Lender," "The Rival Barbers," the inimitable "Fred Mace." There will also be special features for Saturday.

The program of the motion pictures to be shown at the Y. M. C. A., Saturday afternoon and evening, will include "Mother Goose," "King Henry Fourth and the Woodchopper," "On the Great Steel Beam," "Orange Growing in Florida," and a comedy film.

COP AND RABBIT ARE ATTACKED BY CATS

Policeman's Hand is Scratched and Bitten in Strange Encounter.

Patrolman Tobias Nolan, of the local police force, is nursing a badly bitten and scratched hand, the result of attempting to rescue a half famished wild rabbit from the clutches of five hungry cats which had attacked it. The officer was patrolling his beat, and was on West Fifth street, near Lee place, in the early hours of yesterday morning, when he noticed the group of small animals in a cleared space on the opposite sidewalk.

They refused to move when he advanced, and noticing that they were clawing and scratching among themselves, he looked more closely and discovered that the felines were viciously attacking and trying to put to death a large wild rabbit, of the common grey variety, which had been partly overcome by the cold.

Officer Nolan attempted to drive off the cats and two of them sprang upon his breast. Their claws clung to his coat and it was with difficulty that he shook them off. Before scattering the angry felines one of the policeman's hands was lacerated by the teeth and claws of the most formidable of the cats.

John Murphy, of Spooner avenue, who chanced to pass by at the time, aided the patrolman in saving the rabbit's life and gave the policeman's hand his attention. The rabbit, which was badly chewed and torn, and covered with blood from its many wounds, is being cared for by its rescuers. It will be turned loose as soon as it has recovered from the effects of its encounter with the savage cats.

STATE ELKS' ASSOCIATION WILL MEET HERE SUNDAY

It was announced at the meeting of the Elks, last night, that the State Association of Elks, comprising the past exalted rulers of the lodges in New Jersey, would gather at the local clubhouse on Sunday. This association held its first meeting for organization in Newark some time ago, at which time it was planned to have the next meeting with Plainfield lodge. The local Elks are planning to give the visitors a good time.

"CHURCH EFFICIENCY" IS SUBJECT OF CONFERENCE

A church conference and round table was held at the Park Avenue Baptist church, last night. The general topic discussed was that of "Church Efficiency," and those present were asked to ask themselves the personal question, "How can I help to make my church more efficient" The questions which were brought up for discussion and solution were interesting. One asked if, barring very exceptional cases, a Christian is fulfilling his whole duty to God and the church of his choice by merely attending the service once or twice a week, and contributing to the financial support of the church and its benevolences.

CRUSADE TO CLEAR WALKS HAS HAD DESIRED EFFECT

The crusade inaugurated by the local police department, yesterday afternoon, to compel property owners to clean their sidewalks of snow and ice, has had a remarkable effect and few bad spots now remain in the central portion of the city. The business section has ben entirely cleared up and those who were delinquent in the work were warned by the police officers yesterday to "get busy" and also told to appear in the City Court this morning where a dozen were given reprimands by Judge DeMeza.

All of the persons summoned to court had excuses of one kind or another, but a second offense will mean a fine of $10 under any circumstances. Street Commissioner Gavett has had a large force of men and teams at work in the more thickly populated sections and tons of snow and ice have been removed to vacant lots. As a result of the efforts of the police authorities and street department traffic in the roads has been considerably improved and the pedestrian can now go from one place to another without wading knee deep in slush.

LENTEN LECTURE.

The last lecture of the series which he has been delivering before teachers and students of the Bible, at Grace church, was given last night, by Rev. Dr. Hughwell E. W. Fosbroke, of Cambridge, Mass. His subject was "The Period of Reflection and Interpretation and the Compiling of Books."

CLASS WILL NOT MEET.

Owing to the illness of Miss Reba Kline, the teacher, the Friday night dancing class held in Debele's Hall has been called off for this week.

SEIZE 190 I. W. W. RAIDERS IN CHURCH

"Army" Causes Wild Scene In Catholic Edifice.

ONE PRISONER HAD $750.

Magistrate Holds Special Session to Hear Cases of the "Jobless"—Leader Tannenbaum Is Charged With Inciting to Riot—Ordered by McKay.

New York, March 5.—One hundred and ninety members of the Industrial Workers of the World, including Frank Tannenbaum, the young leader, were arrested in the Roman Catholic church of St. Alphonsus at 312 West Broadway. A girl by the name of Gussie Miller, who had accompanied the members of the army of the unemployed on their nightly visits to churches, was among those arrested. A suffragist of the name of Jane Est, who was much in evidence, was not arrested, although she tried to fight her way into the patrol wagon.

The prisoners were taken to the Macdougal street station and to the new station at Beach and Varick streets, as one station could not accommodate them all. Tannenbaum and another leader of the name of Charles Plunkitt were taken to the Macdougal street station, while the girl was taken to the other station. The leaders were held in the station on a charge of unlawful entry and inciting to riot. Their followers were accused of disorderly conduct. All the prisoners were taken to a special night court held in the quarters of the court of domestic relations in East Fifty-seventh sereet Magistrate Campbell presided.

Many Police Reserves Called.

It required the efforts of the police reserves from the Second, Fourth, Sixth, Tenth, Fifteenth and Twelfth precincts to make the arrests. In all there were 100 policemen under command of Inspector Wakefield. They met no resistance from the Tannenbaum "army." Tannenbaum's followers seemed to be stunned. It was Tannenbaum's birthday. He hinted on Tuesday that he would celebrate it in "a glorious manner."

The police in the Macdougal street station found more than $700 in the clothing of the second man to have his personal record taken. Several other prisoners also had sums of money Many billys and knives were found in the possession of the prisoners when they were searched, but no revolvers were found. In the church itself after the raid the priests found a razor on the floor.

Without bending knee or making any sign to indicate any recognition of the church as a sanctuary they walked in front of the altar to a door leading to the rectory. They met Brother Adrian of the Redemptorist order. He referred them to Father Schneider, who was in the rectory.

"Just a minute, father," said Tannenbaum, who had removed his hat, though Miller kept his on. "I want to explain. We are out of work and homeless. We have come to your church to sleep and we want food."

"I will not argue with you," answered the priest.

Detective Geegan suddenly appeared and as he hailed Tannenbaum one of the army grabbed his hand and said, "Goodby, Frank."

"You are under arrest for unlawful entry," said Geegan. "I arrest you by order of Commissioner McKay."

"Come on, boys," yelled Tannenbaum.

There was a moment's silence, for no one knew whether that was a signal to fight or not. The men jumped from their seats and started for the door The detectives and policemen, twenty strong, met and hurled them back

"Nobody invited you in," said one detective as he sent a man sprawling back. "Now wait a minute until we get ready for you."

The spirit oozed from the invaders and they moved back. Then came an order for "two men at a time." Two men walked forward and were shunted between two rows of policemen to the patrol wagon.

YOUTH, 19, SHOOTS FIANCEE, 16

Corset Steel Deflects Bullet — Movies Inspire Attack.

North Adams, Mass., March 5.—James Deery, nineteen years old, in district court pleaded not guilty of assault with attempt to murder Miss Grace Regan, his sixteen-year-old fiancee. A steel corset stay that deflected the bullet aimed at her heart saved the young girl's life.

Deery says that the shooting, which occurred Tuesday evening as the couple were on their way home from a moving picture theater, was accidental, but his sweetheart insists that he intended to kill her. Aside from a slight abrasion on her left side, where the corset stay was bent and pushed into her flesh by the force of the bullet, the girl is uninjured.

Deery ran away after the shooting, but later was captured by the police He is held under $5,000 bail. One explanation of the affair is that Deery was affected by a thrilling moving picture film depicting a love tragedy in which a girl was killed.

ONE LESSON FROM THE STORM.

Nearly everyone is drawing some lesson from the storm of the last few days, and the troubles incident to it But to us the greatest lesson was the absolute incompetence of the Public Service Corporation to cope with the problem presented to it, even in the business section of the city. That such a community as the combined Plainfields should be dependent upon power plants many miles away, with no emergency equipment located within its borders, is absolutely inexcusable. Years ago all the power for the city was generated in Plainfield, at the plant of the Plainfield Electric Light Company, on Second street. When the Public Service Corporation bought out that company, instead of keeping the plant intact, no matter how antiquated it was, they gradually dismantled it and either took the machinery elsewhere, or put it in the scrap heap. Such action is inexcusable, for serious fires or other catastrophe might cripple the plants which are miles away, and in that case it would probably be days before service was restored.

When the Cranford service was first used to give power and light to Plainfield the Daily Press urged upon the officials of the corporation the importance of placing the high power service cable underground, but to save a little expense it was strung on poles from Richmond street out. The Metuchen plant is also connected with Plainfield by wires overground. Had the wires been buried the entire distance there would have been no cessation of service, except perhaps in the residential section, where it would be necessary, because of the possibility of pedestrians and horses coming in contact with live wires, to keep the power shut off long enough to make a thorough inspection of all lines.

An emergency plant, even if only large enough to drive the trolley cars and give power and light to the business section, would have saved the people of this city great inconvenience, and saved the Public Service Corporation many hundreds of dollars, and probably thousands. It seems to us that Plainfield, with the great revenue which it gives the corporation, is entitled to much better treatment than has been the case in the past, and if under the franchise the city fathers can compel the company to either place an emergency plant here, or have their trunk wires buried between this city and the power plants, they should take legal action to bring it about at once. No corporation can give satisfactory service at all times under such conditions as those existing here now, as has been proven during the present week, and it is not unreasonable to demand that better provision be made for such emergencies in the future.

ADVERTISING RELIGION.

Pittsburgh, Pa., is the latest large city to adopt newspaper space to advertise religion, stimulate church attendance, makes converts and raise money for missions. There the movement is non-sectarian and is backed by contributions of several thousands of dollars by business men of the city who know and realize the value of newspaper publicity.

When a manufacturer or retailer has something to sell, he advertises it. He creates a demand for his wares as a first essential to success. When the church has something to place on the market—and it deals in religion and seeks the betterment of humanity, it holds an ice cream social and reaches one person where the business man greets a thousand readers through the daily papers. Each is seeking to reach a class which needs his wares. The church seeks to interest the masses; the masses read the newspapers.

For years it has been considered unethical and out of place for churches to buy space in the papers to spread their gospel and take their religion to the masses. Other institutions which once felt that way about it, now find advertising an essential in their business. Banks, for instance, advertising by which was once taken as a sign of instability, use the papers regularly to indicate their stability. The National Tuberculosis Society is one of the welfare organizations which have adopted newspaper advertising as a means of raising funds for welfare campaigns. Churches are falling in line and are never charged with sensationalism any more. Instead, they are given credit with being strong, virile and successful in civic betterment and soul saving.

There are many instances to show that church advertising pays. The Grace Methodist church of New York, of which Rev. C. F. Reisner, who spoke at the Board of Trade dinner, is pastor, advertises and fills its edifice to overflowing every Sunday. Its pastor was "promoted" from a Denver church because he advertised there with phenomenal success. A Philadelphia mission board advertised, spent $250 on it and received $29,000 for mission work.

Hiding its light under a bushel is no longer popular with churches. Business men in the church realize that the people in the by-ways may be reached by advertising and they are leading the present publicity movement.

Everything concerning the new Plainfield High School is of interest. With that thought in view the Daily Press has secured as its editorial writer for Saturday a young woman who will have a great part in the use of one of the most important branches of the new high school work. What she will have to say will be read by the parent of every student, whether in the high school now or to be there in the future.

Of course, it was only one of life's little ironies but it seemed like rubbing it in on the folks whose telephones were out of service for three days to have the March bills arrive in yesterday's mail for the usual full amount.

THE FORUM.

Editor of The Daily Press:

I understand that over three hundred and fifty names have been signed to a petition requesting the appointment of Edward Vail to the vacant fire captaincy. Mr. Vail has the endorsement of some of our leading citizens who have reason to know his ability. His experience of over twenty years in the department and the fact that he, as well as Mr. Fitzpatrick, is a Class A man, should have some bearing in the matter. It would seem to the writer that in experience, service and ability Mr. Vail is far more eminately fitted for the vacant position than Mr. Fitzpatrick. Our Common Council and our fire chief are the representatives of the people and should be guided by their wishes in such matters bearing on public welfare and the protection of our homes. Unless some convincing reason is advanced why Mr. Vail is not fitted for the position I feel that a precedent will be established that will have a deadly effect on the department. If Mr. Vail is not advanced what can any member of the department expect as a return for years of faithful service? Shall he work for over twenty years, advancing to the A Class merely to see some comparatively new member advanced over his head without good cause or adequate explanation? Here is an opportunity to establish a dangerous precedent or a safe one, and as a resident I wish to voice my opinion, and that of others to whom I have talked, and to call upon our city servants to place the word captain before Mr. Vail's name because of his being most fitted to receive this honor.

Yours very truly,
PERCY S. BROWN.

REV. DR. JESSE L. HURLBUT RESIGNS

Many changes the likely to be made in the Newark district of the Methodist Episcopal Church as a result of the resignation Tuesday of the Rev. Dr. Jesse Lyman Hurlbut, superintendent of the district, who formerly resided here and at one time was pastor of the First M. E. church. If he had not resigned he would have completed a half century of activity in the ministry.

It was learned that Dr. Hurlbut resigned because he wanted to give his time to his literary work. It is reported that Dr. Hurlbut's successor may be the Rev. Dr. George G. Vogel, pastor of Centenary church, Newark. The names of the Rev. Perry H. Murdick, now at South Orange, and the Rev. Thomas G. Spencer, now at Ridgewood, were presented yesterday to the committee of Centenary church. The Rev. Dr. Ralph B. Urmy may be brought from Morristown to fill the vacancy in Centenary.

Dr. Hurlbut is 71 years old. He was born in Orange, February 15, 1843, and was graduated from Wesleyan University in 1864. He served his first pastorate in Newark in the Roseville church from 1865 to 1866. After that he served in Montclair, the Market Street church, Paterson; Trinity church, Staten Island; First church, Plainfield, and the First church, Hoboken.

He was appointed general agent of the Sunday-school Union of the Methodist church in 1879 and continued to serve in various connections with the Methodist Book Concern until the completion of his career there as editor in chief of all the Sunday-school books and publications of the church. Dr. Hurlbut is author of many of the best known religious text and story books in this country.

METHODISTS GATHER AT NEWARK MARCH 18

Annual Conference Will See Radical Changes in Program.

The program of the fifty-seventh annual gathering of the Newark Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, to convene on Wednesday, March 18, in the Halsey Street church, Newark, presents some radical changes from its predecessors.

In addition to the fact that the same bishop—in this case Bishop Wilson—will preside a second year in succession, for the first time in the conference history, practically all the special speakers will come before the ministers on one day. They will commence at 8:30 o'clock on Friday morning and will continue through the day until 9 o'clock in the evening.

The conference will be opened Wednesday at 11 o'clock, with the sacrament of the Lord's supper. This will be followed by the usual observances of roll call and so on. In the afternoon at 2 o'clock, Mrs. J. R. Knowles will preside over the anniversary of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society. The special speaker for this will be Rev. Dr. Charles L. Mead. Closing this afternoon there will be a ministers' life insurance fund conference.

At 8 o'clock in the evening, Rev. Dr. Franklin Hamilton, chancellor of the American University in Washington, D. C., will deliver a lecture on 'The Fire-Bringer—A Love Tragedy."

The proceedings of Wednesday morning will be of a business nature. At 2 o'clock in the afternoon the anniversary of the Woman's Home Missionary Society will be observed, led by Mrs. George E. Backus, with Rev. Dr. Wallace McMullen as the principal speaker.

At the evening service, on "The Preachers' Aid Society,' Rev. N. McGee Waters will make an address. Dr. Waters is pastor of a Congregational church in Brooklyn. Preceding this a reception will be held from 5 to 7 o'clock at the Newark Deaconness' Home. Refreshments will be served for the delegates there.

Friday morning, the day set for the speaking of a large majority of those who are to appear before the conference, the various activities of the church, as a whole, will be discussed under the leadership of L. W. Eckard, Harry C. McCain, Edgar Blake, William H. Crawford, I. Garland Penn, C. M. Boswell and Frank M. North. The morning discussion will be under the general heading, "The Call to Advance.'

The Friday afternoon session will be devoted to a general consideration of surveys and new plans of the church affecting finance. At the conclusion of this section there will be a special consideration of district policies and programs in which the delegates will meet by districts.

The theme of the evening session of this day will be "The Call of the Total Task." This is to be largely a discussion of district and congregational measures.

On Saturday there will be business sessions throughout the day. In the evening at 8 o'clock, the meeting will be given over to a discussion of temperance, led by Rev. Dr. Wilson and Rev. Dr. Shields.

Sunday, at 10 o'clock in the morning, the love feast will be conducted by Rev. Joshua Mead. The sermon at 10:30 will be delivered by Bishop Wilson. At 2:30 in the afternoon there will be an ordination of deacons and elders. The Epworth League anniversary, to be celebrated at 7:45, will be presided over by Rev. Austin E. Armstrong. Rev Dr. Charles W. Flint will make the address.

The sessions of Monday will be entirely of a business nature and the conference will adjourn late in the afternoon.

LINEMAN INJURED BY FALL FROM TOP OF POLE

Lynn Roberts, a lineman, of Elizabeth, who has been working in this city recently for the Western Union Telegraph Company, fell from a pole this morning about 11 o'clock, on South Second street, in the vicinity of the plant of the Pond Machine Tool Company. He was taken to Muhlenberg Hospital. It was found he had sustained a bad gash in his scalp, over his right eye, and was suffering severely from shock. It is not thought that he is internally hurt. He was unconscious this afternoon.

N. P. H. S. NOTES.

Superintendent A. B. Vossler has returned from the annual National Educational Association conference, held in Richmond, Va., recently.

Stanley Stillman, instructor in the manual training department, has returned to his duties after an illness of three weeks.

Miss Lucile Ewart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Ewart, of Fairview avenue, gave an informal party and dance to a number of her friends at her home, last evening. There were fifteen present and the time was spent in dancing and playing games. The feature of the evening was violin solos by Mr. Ewart, who was accompanied at the piano by Miss Jubilee Rowley. Miss Nettie Steiner also performed at the piano. Refreshments were served by the hostess' mother, and the party broke up at midnight. Those present were the Misses Lucile Ewart, Margaret Ewart, Jubilee Rowley, Lillian Spencer, Edith Dalley, Lucy Douglas,, Annette Steiner, Marjorie Burtis and Duclos VanMater, Roy Love, Franklin Lowe, Addison Newkirk, Ronald Conroy, Lester Chandler and Frank Dunning.

it was said today, who believe that the entire cost of Plainfield's connection with the trunk line, should, in all fairness, be borne by the borough. It is, however, too late now to remedy matters.

"I have no desire to discuss the matter," said Mayor Clark today.

"If the newspapers of Plainfield have the interests of the city at heart," said Chairman Clay, when talked to over the telephone today, "they will say nothing about the matter."

There are people in Plainfield who are of the opinion that $36,000 is far too high a price to pay for the acquisition of the Darling farm. The tract embraces about 90 acres, a part of which is low ground and is at times under water, it is said. If the joint sewer commission buys it for $36,000 it will be paying at the rate of $400 an acre for the tract. Advocates of its purchase at the named price insist, it is said, that even if the price is a trifle high, it will be bought as cheaply as if it were necessary to acquire the land through condemnation proceedings. Such proceedings are usually expensive and cause a long delay.

JOHN BASSETT MOORE.

Unable longer to continue his connection with an administration with whose foreign policy he had but little sympathy, Dr. John Bassett Moore, one of the most widely quoted international law experts in the world, prevailed upon President Wilson to accept his resignation. He asked that it become effective immediately and before nightfall had completely severed his connection with his office as counselor to the state department.

MOORE, LAW EXPERT, SUDDENLY RESIGNS

Said to Be Disgusted Over Bryan's Methods.

Washington, March 5.—John Bassett Moore sent in his resignation as counselor to the state department. The resignation is to take effect immediately. The letter which contained it has not yet been made public, but it is not thought that it will disclose the real reason why Mr. Moore resigns at this time. His friends, however, are not backward in giving what they believe to be the cause. Well wishers of the administration are not pleased with the fact that it is losing—if it had wanted to use him—one of the world's greatest authorities on international law and diplomacy at a time when resourceful diplomacy is so much needed.

There is no question that Mr. Moore's position in the state department has long been an uncomfortable one. He was ignored on all questions of the administration's policy. He was said not to have been in accord with the policy regarding Mexico. In a disorganized and demoralized department all the routine work was forced on his shoulders because inexperienced men brought in by Secretary Bryan were unable to perform it. Mr. Moore was doing herculean service under most unfavorable circumstances while Mr. Bryan was on the Chautauqua circuit.

For three months, since the appointment of Dudley Field Malone as collector for the port of New York, there has been no third assistant secretary of state. John E. Osborne, the first assistant, has been entirely unacquainted with the duties of his office, which before has been the most important one in the department next to the secretary and which has been permitted to fall into a negligible position. Mr. Osborne was a former governor of Wyoming, and his appointment was a personal and political one on the part of Mr. Bryan.

TOLL REPEAL IS URGED BY WILSON

Takes Up Exemption Clause In Brief Message.

MAKES REPEAL IMPERATIVE

Washington, March 5.—In a brief message President Wilson urged congress to repeal that provision of the Panama canal act which exempts vessels engaged in the coastwise trade of the United States from payment of tolls.

To the Members of Congress:

I have come to you upon an errand which can be very briefly performed, but I beg that you will not measure its importance by the number of sentences in which I speak.

No communication I have addressed to the congress has carried with it graver or more farreaching implications to the interest of the country, and I come now to speak upon a matter with regard to which I am charged in a peculiar degree, by the complication itself, with personal responsibility.

I have come to ask for the repeal of that provision of the Panama canal act of Aug. 24, 1912, which exempts vessels engaged in the coastwise trade of the United States from payment of tolls and to urge upon you the justice, the wisdom and the large policy of such a repeal with the utmost insistence of which I am capable.

In my judgment, very fully considered and materially formed, that exemption constitutes a mistaken economic policy from every point of view and is, moreover, in plain contravention of the treaty with Great Britain concerning the canal executed on Nov. 18, 1901.

I have not come to you to urge my personal views. I have come to state to you a fact and a situation. Whatever might be our own differences of opinion concerning this much debated measure, its meaning is not debated outside the United States. Everywhere the language of the treaty is given but one interpretation, and that interpretation precludes the exemption I am asking you to repeal. We consented to the treaty, its language accepted, if we did not originate it, and we are too big, too powerful, too self respecting a nation to interpret with too strained or refined a reading the words of our own promises just because we have power enough to give us leave to read them as we please. The last thing to do is the only thing we can afford to do, a voluntary withdrawal from a position everywhere questioned and misunderstood.

We ought to revoke our action without raising the question whether we were right or wrong, and so once more preserve our reputation for generosity and the redemption of every obligation without quibble or hesitation. I ask this of you in support of the foreign policy of the administration.

I shall not know how to deal with other matters of even greater delicacy and nearer consequences if you do not grant this to me in ungrudging measure.

Government to Aid Army of Unemployed by Industrial Commission

THE country will soon have exact information as to unemployed men in the United States. Announcement was made recently by President Wilson's recently appointed industrial commission that it will immediately undertake an investigation into conditions of this character, notably in New York city, where it has been estimated that 350,000 men and women are now out of work.

This extraordinary investigation is to be undertaken for the purpose not only of ascertaining the facts, but with a view to recommending federal legislation, especially a measure establishing a federal bureau to serve as a clearing house for public and private employment agencies and to direct the movements of "migratory workers."

This is a brand new departure in federal activity and will undoubtedly arouse spirited discussion in congress. President Wilson's industrial commission suggests the possibility of a system of insurance against nonemployment.

In the preface of the commission bulletin this statement is made:

"Stirred by reports of 350,000 men and women out of work in New York city alone, the commission has undertaken an immediate investigation looking toward action by the federal government to relieve unemployment. During the next six weeks the activities of four of the commission's investigators will be restricted to a rapid survey of unemployment in industrial centers from Boston to Kansas City and a critical analysis of public and private employment agencies."

According to Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, who is a member of the commission, reports concerning unemployment throughout the country come from the commission's field agents.

MRS. J. BORDEN HARRIMAN.

"The greatest problem to be dealt with in this connection is to provide for men who are engaged in seasonal occupations," said Mrs. Harriman. "Many men are engaged in trades that keep them busy for stated periods in the year. At other periods they find it difficult to get employment along other lines.

"The result is that there is often great suffering among such classes. Present conditions are not abnormal.

"The reports that appear from time to time relative to the unemployed and business depression are undoubtedly exaggerated. Just to what extent they are exaggerated will be developed in the course of our proposed investigation."

Mrs. Harriman said that the commission would probably divide into subcommittees and hold hearings in New York, Chicago and other large cities. The commission will also visit the mining regions and other places where men are out of employment.

The statement was authorized by Frank P. Walsh, chairman of the commission. Concerning conditions in New York city he said:

"Estimates of charitable organizations in New York city that 350,000 persons are out of work there will be examined critically. The commission realizes that present conditions in the labor market are practically the same as in every year at this season and that the problem is a permanent one.

"As a superficial remedy the commission will gather material for the preparation of a measure establishing a federal bureau to serve as a clearing house for public and private agencies and to direct movements of migratory workers."

Mr. Walsh pictured conditions in big industrial centers under the present system in this way:

"Groups numbering from 100 to 1,000 stand outside our great industrial plants each morning at 6 o'clock hoping the foremen will pull them out of line and put them to work. They are thankful if they get only a few hours' work."

Mayors of the principal cities of the country are being asked to co-operate with the commission in gathering data on unemployment.

PROF. H. W. OVETSTREET TO ADDRESS "PEOPLE'S FORUM"

The second meeting of the "People's Forum" for the discussion of public questions will be held at the Y. M. C. A. tonight at 8 o'clock. It was originally planned to hold the meeting at the Washington School, but a change was necessary owing to the shutting off of the electric power throughout the city.

The address of the evening will be given by Professor H. W. Overstreet, of the College of the City of New York. His topic will be "An Out-Worn System of Political Philosophy." Professor Overstreet holds the chair of philosophy in City College. The address which he is to give tonight has been delivered before many social and civic organizations and is said to be a most forceful presentation of the causes underlying political progress. Both men and women are cordially invited to attend this meeting which will be held under the auspices of the Public Recreation Committee.

THE THREE NINES TURNED OUT TO BE THREE SIXES

IN THE SPORTING SPOTLIGHT

TAYLOR ESTABLISHES A UNIQUE STANDING

He is Recognized as a Leader in College—Smashes Precedent as Letter Man.

Carrol (Curly) Taylor, one of the best athletes ever turned out by the North Plainfield High School, has established a novel record in the Colorado School of Mines, where he is now perusing a course. Taylor is the first student to win the school insignia in his freshman year and has been a star on the college basketball team throughout the present season. Since being made a regular, Taylor has taken part in all contests and is leading the individual scoring with a good advantage to spare.

Although the season has not officially ended on the courts, Taylor is practising regularly with the baseball team and stands a fine chance of making the first-base berth in his initial year of college athletic life. He will also be a candidate for the football eleven next fall.

While in the borough school, Taylor was a leader on the baseball diamond and basketball court and was also active in scholastic social events.

"Sportdom Tips"

The snow storm has cut a big gash in the realm of sports and the sport program for a few days to come will be somewhat disarranged. This tie-up has been noticeable in every branch of work and line of endeavor and it is not surprising that athletic activities have been effected likewise. News from the baseball camps has been cut off and we have received no word from Jack Martin who is in Macon, Ga. Lidgate left Tuesday for the South but the wires are still in bad shape in that vicinity and it is doubtful if we will hear anything from the big fellow for a few days. Basketball teams have been unable to carry out their schedules owing to the difficulties encountered in transportation and many of the aggregations have curtailed their programs temporarily.

Just as sonn as Old Sol filters through the clouds and drys up mother earth sufficiently to allow baseball players to trod the sod the local and borough schoolboys will get into action for the greatest of all out-of-door sports. Baseball captains and coaches are aching for an opportunity to send their fingers to the fore and limbering up drill has been held regularly during the past four weeks in local gymnasiums. Little real practise can be done until the ground drys up, but the preliminary work has already been launched indoors.

Much favorable comment has been forthcoming from self-delegated inspectors upon the new gymnasium being erected on the Plainfield High School premises. Every aggregation of basketball performers that visits P. H. S. spends sometime in a tour of inspection and although the bare outline of the gym alone is visible the local schoolboys are the object for considerable envy.

Athletics are practically at a standstill in the Scotch Plains Parish House, bad roads and the temporary discontinuance of the trolley service keeping many people from that rendezvous. Basketball will be resumed Saturday night, however, and facilities will be somewhat better before that time.

Snow shoeing should prove an excellent sport for athletes just about this time. Why not follow up the basketball stunt with skiing which would serve as a fine appetizer for baseball artists to train on?

Dunning was the main cause for the downfall of the Leal School yesterday afternoon. "June" had one of the best days of his great career and dropped the ball in from all angles with wonderful regularity.

Haven't heard anything from those Sunday-School leaguers of late. Why not hand us a little reliable dope at this stage of the game so as to prepare us for what will surely follow?

If your name didn't happen to get on the list of All-Star basketball players don't get peeved. You were either considered too good for the bunch or else we thought you needed a little more seasoning.

One of the hardest tasks sport writers have to contend with is to pick all-star aggregations and it seldom happens that everyone's ability is fully appreciated.

What has become of that movement that was started early in the season to establish a fund for the erection of a North Plainfield High School gymnasium?

The United States Military Academy and the Naval Academy are still casting about for a place to hold their annual football game. New Brunswick is in a spot bear midway between West Point and Annapolis, and if we had the field and stands we certainly could land that game. We have the best railroad and plenty of locations along it for a stadium, but lack one thing—a man to build it.—New Brunswick Home News.

What would the Brunswick authorities do with 50,000 football mad enthusiasts?

NEW YORK MERCHANTS ARE AFTER BIG GRIDIRON GAME

A movement has been started by the Merchants' Association of New York to bring the Army and Navy football game to New York again this year, and resolutions have been adopted setting forth arguments in favor of that city as the scene of the combat.

The resolutions will be presented today to the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy in Washington by S. C. Mead, secretary of the Merchants' Association.

A written guarantee of not less than $12,000 a year each to the relief societies of the Army and Navy, making $24,000 in all, is offered.

ALL STAR INTERSCHOLASTIC TEAMS AS SELECTED BY THE DAILY PRESS

Many requests have been made by those interested in local basketball competition for the selection of an All-Star Interscholastic League quintet by the sporting department of this paper and after much deliberation we have finally arrived at a first and second selection which looks pretty good on paper. The ten honorary performers have been selected on their all around playing merits and the choice has not been made from any one particular contest. All of the games in which the players took part have been taken into consideration in arriving at a verdict and in our estimation the quintet is a world beater.

"Polly" Love is without a doubt the best forward in the league, being a sure shot and having the additional ability of being an expert at foul shooting. Love has been a member of the borough quintet for two years and during the past two seasons has been a mainstay. His heighth and litheness makes him a difficult man to guard and whenever left loose he is a deadly shot.

As a running mate to Love we are forced to pick Bill Peacock, of the Plainfield High School five. Although he has not played in the forward position for the red and blue quintet we are forced to recognize Peacock as a goal shooter rather than a guard and for that reason we pick him in preference to other forwards who do not come up to the standard he has set. Peacock is without a doubt the most versatile performer in the organization and he has proven his worth to the red and blue team as a goal tosser, passer and hard worker and his aggressiveness has been a conspicuous factor in all of the local team's games.

Frank Dunning is without a rival for the centre position. No other pivot man in the league can approach Dunning as an all around performer and seldom has it happened that a rival has gotten the "jump" on him in league games. Dunning is one of the best goal shooters on the circuit and leads the North Plainfield quintet in this department.

Hyman Abrams of the North Plainfield High School five, like Dunning, is without a rival at guard and he has proven that he is the peer in this department in every one of the games the red and black has played. Abrams' best and most conspicuous point is his passing ability and he can generally be relied upon to work the sphere down the floor and keep it in home territory. Although he does not make a specialty of shooting he can generally make good when given the opportunity. Abrams deserves great credit for his perseverance in gaining a regular place on the borough five and was an able substitute last year.

Benjamin Rosenson is without a doubt the best scoring guard in the league and he has been a prominent figure on the Plainfield High School team this season. Rosenson is a good guard but a better shooter and we are of the opinion that both Rosenson and Peacock have been misplaced this season by the P. H. S. coaching department. The trainer was in need of guards, however, and having a wealth of good forwards in reserve he took a chance and sent the two reliable goal shooters in to take charge of the goal prevention job.

Fred Dickerson and Chauncey Stewart, captain and manager, respectively, of the Leal School five, are our choice for the forward berths on the second team. These two players have developed wonderful teamwork while playing together and if separated they would probably both fall below their usual par. Both are sure shots and although Stewart holds the record of being the smallest player in the league, which has earned him the title of "Peanut," he is respected by rival aggregations as a deadly shot and is generally kept pretty closely covered.

No one man looms up for centre berth on the second team and although he does not come up to the standard needed for a player in this capacity, Bob Gavett will have to be placed on the list as a pivot man. With more experience the Plainfield High School youngster will prove a valuable cog in the local team's machine and we look forward to seeing him develop into a star next year. Gavett was out of the game during the latter part of the season owing to illness and this somewhat diminished his chances of shining as an individual. He has a lot to learn but when he thoroughly masters the fine points of the sport the youngster will be a consistent and valuable performer.

Captain Burner, of North Plainfield High School is our main choice for the guard berth on the second team. Burner has been a valuable man to the North Plainfield team as a goal preventor but is weak in the shooting line. Last season Burner played a wonderful game both on the defense and offense, but has slipped somewhat below par this season.

Although Addison Newkirk is but a substitute and has been holding down this thankless job all season for the Canadian aggregation, he is without a doubt superior to the rest of the regular crew of guards and must be considered when the plums are being handed out. Newkirk is an excellent guard and a sure shot and when given the chance to play regularly, which he will probably get next year, he will develop into a wonder.

While these are our personal choices for the first and second lists of honorary performers, others may differ in their opinion and if these individuals will submit their lists we will gladly give them publication. In selecting the team we have not been influenced by what any dopester has had to say in the matter and the selection is a matter of personal opinion exclusively. Following is a list of our selections:

FINAL LEAGUE CONTEST

Boroughites Swamped Private School Rivals in Game Replete with Sensationalism from a Shooting Standpoint—Final Score 54 to 17.

Playing the last league game of the season on their home court, the North Plainfield High School basketball team defeated the Leal School five in Saengerbund Hall, yesterday afternoon by the score of 54 to 17.

The visitors played defensive at first but finally changed their tactics and gave their rivals many chances. The first half ended 24 to 11.

Lyon and Newirk were sent into the fray near the finish of the game. Dunning equalled VanMater's high score mark with fourteen baskets, while "Duke" scored an even dozen points. For Leal's, Schneider and Stewart were the mainstays.

PLAINFIELD HIGH IN COUNTY FIGHT

Will Play Rahway for the Interscholastic Baseball Championship.

Included in the list of diamond matches scheduled by Manager Arnold Ward, of the Rahway High School nine, are contests with Plainfield and Westfield, both of which will go a long way toward deciding the Union county championship. There is promising material for a fast team in Rahway this season, and numerous veterans have made their appearance even at this early date.

The schedule:

April 4, Passaic, pending; April 7, Perth Amboy High at Rahway; April 11, Morris High, of New York, at Rahway; April 15, Rutgers Freshmen, pending; April 18, Rutgers Prep at Rahway; April 22, Plainfield High at Plainfield; April 25, Battin High at Elizabeth; April 29, DeWitt Clinton High at New York; May 2, Trenton High at Rahway; May 6, Rutherford High at Rutherford; May 9, Passaic or Rutgers Freshmen pending; May 12, East Orange High at East Orange; May 16, open; May 19, Orange High at Orange; May 23, Battin High at Rahway; May 25, open; May 30, ex-High at Rahway; June 2, open; June 8, Passaic High at Rah-

Watchung Council pinners, although out of the running for first place honors in the Knights of Columbus Bowling League, are directly interested in the distribution of the rest of the awards and several Plainfielders will probably come in for honors when they are handed out at the completion of the schedule.

The array of prizes includes cups and medals and the league, although in its opening year, has developed into an unusually healthy baby, and will be a permanent fixture in years to come.

CLYDE MILAN LED IN STOLEN BASES

(By Ernest J. Lanigan.)

Clyde Milan, premier baserunner of the American League in 1913, stole thirteen more cushions last season than Max Carey, boss of the National League's pilfering brigade, but the catchers cut him down oftener than they did the Pirate. The Washington flyer set out to steal on 104 occasions last year and the backstops prevented him from achieving his object thirty times. Carey endeavored to execute 78 thefts and the receivers kept him from carrying out his design seventeen times. The baserunning percentages of Milan and Carey, players who obtained votes from the members of the Chalmers jury of newspaper experts for their prowess in other departments of the game as well as for their speed on the lines, were therefore, .712 and .782.

Milan, like Carey, was not highly considered as a baserunner when he was serving his apprenticeship in the minors. The last year Clyde spent with the little fellows, which was in 1907 in Wichita, he stole only 38 bases, or 36 less than he filched in 1913. Carey, previous to joining the Pirates in 1911, was connected with the South Bend club and in 1910 he pinched only 36 hassocks.

Of Milan's 74 steals last year, fourteen were secured in games against Cleveland, thirteen in games against New York, twelve in games against Detroit, twelve in games against Boston, nine in games against Philadelphia, nine in games against St. Louis and five in games against Chicago. The Speedy Senator never was able to steal four bases in a game, but in two contests, one against New York and one against Detroit, he was credited with three larcenies. Ed. Sweeney was behind the bat when Clyde stole three bases against the Yankees and Henry Rondeau was the Tigers' maskman when the Nationals' flyer added a trio of larcenies to his record.

Windpaddists on whom Milan made two steals in games last season were: McKee, of Detroit, twice; Sweeney, of New York, once; Thomas, of Boston, once; Cady, of Boston, once; Carrigan, of Boston, once; O'Neill, of Cleveland, once; Lapp, of Philadelphia, once; Schang, of Philadelphia once, and McAllester, of St. Louis, once. Milan's seventy-four thefts were distributed through sixty contests, he stealing three bases in each of two games; two bases in each of ten games, and one base in each of forty-eight games. May was the month in which Milan showed his most speed and skill on the bases, he then executing seventeen steals. He committed fourteen thefts in June, twelve in July, twelve in August, eleven in April, six in September and two in October.

Sag Agnew, of the Browns, and Ed. Sweeney, of the Yankees, had the honor of turning Milan back oftenest when he set out on thieving expeditions. Each receiver frustrated four of his attempts at burglary. Jack Lapp, of the White Elephants, nipped Milan thrice and so did Steve O'Neill, of the Naps, and Bill Carrigan, of the Red Sox. The only windpaddist who flagged Milan twice in one game was Agnew, St. Louis, Sam turning the trick on June 3. Milan was caught trying to steal second twenty-three times, third six times and home once. The men on whom he made his steals and the men who caught him when he essayed to pilfer are named below:

MILAN'S SUCCESSFUL STEALS.

MILAN'S UNSUCCESSFUL STEALS

BASKETBALL PERFORMERS ENJOYED A STRAWRIDE

The members of the Borough High School Freshmen basketball teams enjoyed a strawride last night, to Westfield. They were accompanied by Mrs. Caldwell, of Leland avenue.

The party afterwards visited the home of Mrs. Caldwell, where refreshments were served and a general good time prevailed. The affair was arranged by the captains and managers of the teams. Those who took the trip are Grace VanDemburg, Elsie Van Demburg, Emma Mantz, Rose Cooper, Helen Ryno, Marguerite Barkalew, Marion Chandler, Elsie Wyckoff, Mrs. Caldwell and Almon Doty, Roy Force, William Carson, William Seidel, Alfred Willett, Daniel Denny and Robert Hebert.

FORD AND JOHNSON FOUR-BASE FEEDERS

(By Ernest J. Lanigan.)

It possibly will surprise fans to learn that Russell Ford, who has gone over to the Federals, was in Walter Johnson's class in one respect last season, that respect being the permitting of home runs. The Yankee hurler allowed nine four-bag blows to be struck by his adversaries and so did the man whom the Chalmers jury of newspaper experts picked as the player most valuable to his team. Ford and Johnson were nicked for more circuit clouts than any other American League gunners. The players who touched the Chalmers Car winner for homers were Frank Baker (twice), Harry Hooper, "Buck" Weaver, Ray Schalk, Harry Lord, Joe Lake, Wheeler, Johnston and Joe Jackson. Four hassock drives off Ford were obtained by Howard Shanks, Sam Agnew, Derrill Pratt, Eddie Collins, Gus Williams, Eddie Ainsmith, Wallie Schang, Sam Crawford and Joe Jackson. The last named probably made the longest home run of the year when he landed on one of Ford's spitters in the game of June 4 and hoisted the ball over the right wing of the grandstand at the Polo Grounds.

Next to Johnson and Ford, Tom Hughes, of the Washington's, allowed the greatest number of smashes for the full distance. He was located for eight drives of this character. Bobby Groom, of Washington, had seven homers made off his delivery and these men had six: Baumgardner and Mitchell, of St. Louis; Blanding, of Cleveland, and Brown, of Philadelphia. Five four-baggers were secured off Caldwell, of New York, and Bush, of Philadelphia; and four off Schulz, of New York; Pennock, of Philadelphia, and Dauss, of Detroit. The veteran Eddie Plank, one of the heroes of the World's Series of 1913, was nicked for three four-baggers, and so were Joe Boehling, of Washington; Earl Hamilton and Walter Leverenz, of St. Louis; Willie Mitchell, of Cleveland, and Ray Collins, of Boston, who are among the American League's cleverest southpaws.

"Chief" Bender had only one home run made off his curves last season and that four-bagger, manufactured by "Ping" Bodie, of the Chicago White Sox, added a defeat to the Indian's record. Other boxmen who allowed only one four-bagger were Weilman, of St. Louis; Steen, of Cleveland; Dubuc, of Detroit; Walsh, of Chicago, and Bedient, of Boston. Joe Wood, of the Red Sox, was even stingier than all these men previously named, for he refused to allow any one to get a homer off of his puzzling delivery.

Of the 159 four-baggers made in the American League in 1913, 35 were obtained off Washington's pitchers; 31 off New York's; 25 off Philadelphia's; 20 off St. Louis; 19 off Cleveland's; 13 off Detroit's; 10 off Chicago's, and 6 off Boston's. The individual list follows:

New York, 31—Ford, 9; Caldwell, 5; Schulz, 4; McConnell, 3; Fisher, 3; Keating, 2; Klepfer, 2; Clark, 1; McHale, 1; Warhop, 1.

Philadelphia, 25—Brown, 6; Bush, 5; Pennock, 4; Houck, 3; Plank, 3; Shawkey, 2; Bender, 1; Wyckoff, 1.

Fashion Is Being Depicted Here in a Wonderful Exposition

A Grand Promenade of Fashion

In the house of fashions it is Spring—a little more than a fortnight hence and it will officially be Spring in Calendar terms. For each year at this time the atmosphere of the famous Rue de la Paix and the Place Vendome is filled with eagerness—Paris eagerly awaits the new modes that the famous dressmakers give to this great world of fashion.

Today, tomorrow and Saturday the house of Hahne presents to New Jersey people all that is newest in dress and costume; shown by charming young women who wear these new costumes as they promenade about, displaying garments that are masterpieces of design, fine in fabric and faultless in taste. There are distinguished gowns of lingerie and daintiest silks. There are dresses of new crepes, the soft pussy-willow taffetas, the moires and satins—all with their quaint ruffles, bustle effects, shirred and ruched, and other fantastical drapings. Then there are calling gowns, matinee gowns, those to wear when one goes receptioning, and, of course, gowns for the dance.

Among the many new things there are some original creations and adaptations from—

JENNY, LAGER, POIRET, PAQUIN, CALLOT, CHERNIT, PREMET, DOUCET, DRECOLL, BERNARD, CHARLOTTE, BRAUNSTEIN

You are cordially invited to these promenades at 10:30 A. M. and 2:30 P. M., in the Costume Section, second floor.

The Wedding March is Playing! Here comes the bride, people are watching; ah! the party is near. The bride, the bridegroom, the bridesmaids and the flower girls—all in correct costume. Today and tomorrow at 3:30 P. M.

Of Interest to Women and the Home

NEEDLEWORK

By MARGARET LAWRENCE

WILD ROSE SPRAYS FOR MANY USES

Often one does not care for a set of conventional design and a spray of flowers is just the thing needed. These wild rose sprays have many possibilities of adaptation. They may be scattered over a table-cloth, luncheon cloth or tea-cloth; used on a centerpiece, carving-cloth, serving-table cover or on a luncheon set, embroidered entirely in white in long-and-short stitch combined with outline and solid work. In a pink bedroom these sprays would be pretty on the bureau-cover, table-cover, lingerie pillows, also the bags and cases for handkerchiefs, neckwear, gloves and laundry. They may be embroidered on a Japanese kimona or muslin negligee on parasols, bags and many novelties. If these sprays are to be developed in colors, work the leaves in three shades of green with touches of dull red in either long-and-short or Kensington-stitch; the stems and calyx should be worked in the dull red; the centers of the flowers in yellow French knots and the petals in three shades of pink in either long-and-short or Kensington stitch.

Guaranteed, hot iron, transfer pattern 12713 which includes all these sprays in the natural size, will be supplied to readers on receipt of price, 15 cents.

By Alice Gibson

For some time past there has been little change in garment designs for small boys; the sailor suits and Russian blouse designs have been favored. This season we are being offered quite a pleasing change; quaint little high waisted Dutch trousers are seen everywhere as well as the Oliver Twist and David Copperfield suits of Dickens' day. These have the box-pleated shirt waists and straight trousers, buttoning up the sides and onto the belt of the waist.

Mercerized English poplin in light colors, seems to be the most favored material for these suits just now, although any of the wash cottons would be suitable. No. 8142 is an Oliver Twist suit, consisting of a shirt waist with applied box pleats and straight trousers.

The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 4 to 10.

This Is a Perfect Pattern.

It may be obtained by filling out the coupon and enclosing 15 cents in stamps or coin, to the Pattern Department of this paper.

Some Cookery Suggestions

WINTER PARSNIPS.

THAT wholesome and appetizing vegetable, the parsnip, is at its best after it has been touched by the frost, so the farmers tell us, and lovers of the food are now enjoying it. There are many methods of preparing the parsnip, although most housewives serve it over and over in one or two ways, which has a tendency to make the family rebel.

Cooked In Sauce.

Fricassee of Parsnips.—Wash and scrape the parsnips and boil in milk till they are soft. Then cut them lengthwise into pieces two or three inches long and simmer in white sauce made with two spoonfuls of the broth, a bit of mace, half a cupful of cream a bit of butter and some flour, pepper and salt.

Scalloped Parsnips.—Take one pint of boiled and mashed parsnips, add one tablespoonful of butter, a teaspoonful of salt, a dash of pepper and two tablespoonfuls of milk. Mix and turn into a buttered baking dish, cover with breadcrumbs, dot with bits of butter on the top and brown in the oven.

Daintily Fried.

Parsnip Balls.—Boil some parsnips until tender, then drain and mash and combine with an equal quantity of mashed potatoes. Season well with salt, pepper and butter. Flour the hands and form the parsnips into balls. Roll in flour and fry in dripping in a frying pan until brown on both sides. A well beaten egg and one tablespoonful of flour may be added with the butter, salt and pepper.

Parsnip Fritter.—To make the fritters boil the parsnips until tender, drain, then press through a colander. To a half a dozen fair sized parsnips allow a tablespoonful and a half of flour and two beaten eggs. Season with salt and pepper. Have some good hot drippings in the frying pan, brown the fritters on one side, then on the other, and serve.

Enriched With Eggs.

Parsnip Cakes.—Peel, cut the parsnips in pieces and cook in salted water in which a tablespoonful of flour has been mixed. When tender drain and chop fine. Press through a colander. Return to the saucepan. Add salt, pepper, a little flour and the beaten yolks of three eggs. Stir on the fire for five minutes, then turn out to cool. Turn on a floured board and shape into small round cakes. Dip in beaten egg, then in cracker crumbs. Fry until light brown in hot lard.

She Looked Constantly at Her Watch.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

Little Cary's Ninth Birthday Celebration.

"CARY was nine years old," daddy said. "It was her birthday, and birthdays in her family were great events. First of all, at the breakfast table around her place was a wreath of flowers, and on each plate was a little flower—all simple flowers, but Cary loved them. She was called 'queen of the day' because it was her birthday, and every member of her family gave her nine kisses and said, 'Many happy returns, queen of the day!'

"The celebration came at 11 o'clock. In Cary's home there was a little porch at the back of the house. In the winter it was inclosed in glass, but in the summer it was covered with beautiful vines. As Cary's birthday came in March, of course the porch was inclosed, but it was fine and sunny.

"The celebration was to be held there. Great secrets were whispered among Cary's family, and from breakfast time until 11 o'clock she was left quite alone.

"A few minutes before 11 Cary's little brother came to her, ringing a large bell. 'Come to the celebration for the queen of the day!' he shouted, and all the family joined in the procession.

"In the center of the porch was a table. And such a marvelously covered table!—But, first of all, they seated Cary in a big rocking chair at the head of the table. They were all dressed up in funny costumes which they always wore for birthday celebrations. The table was full of presents, and in the center was a cake with nine lighted candles on it. 'Many happy returns of the day!' they all cried together.

"She opened her presents one by one. She had lovely pink knitted bedroom slippers from her mother, a beautiful doll from her daddy, a workbag from her grannie, a paint box from her auntie and a big box of candy from her brother, which he'd bought with his very own saved up money. Cary loved all her presents, and they were all things she wanted very much.

"But, last of all, came a surprise from an uncle who lived way, way off across the water. It was a little silver watch on a band to wear around her wrist. Cary put it right on, and she asked every one to ask her the time. She wanted to be asked the time every minute really so she could look constantly at her watch.

"Then they put on her head a wreath of myrtle, which she was to wear all the day.

"They told her that they had invited all her friends to come to a birthday party they were giving for her that afternoon. Cary felt quite bewildered with such a beautiful birthday. She said it was the nicest birthday that she had ever had."

COLLEGES AND RELIGION.

New Haven, Conn., March 5—With "The Relation of Higher Education to the Social Order" as its general theme, the eleventh annual meeting of the Religious Education Association was opened at Yale University today. Among the prominent educators and others who are to address the meeting during the three days' sessions are Governor Baldwin, of Connecticut; United States Commissioner of Education, P. P. Claxton; District Attorney Charles S. Whitman, of New York; President William DeWitt Hyde, of Bowdoin College; Prof. Albion W. Small, of the University of Chicago; President Arthur T. Hadley, of Yale, and President Charles P. Thwing of Western Reserve University.

THREE COLLEGES TO DEBATE.

New York, March 5.—Arrangements have been completed for the annual debates of the Intercollegiate Triangular Debating League, composed of Cornell, Columbia and Pennsylvania, which are to take place simultaneously in Philadelphia, Ithaca and this city, tomorrow night. Each college will have two teams on the platform, the negative team in each instance debating at home The question is, "Roselved, That it is desirable for all the States to adopt, by act of legislature, minimum rates of wages for women and children workers in industrial and mercantile pursuits."

BRIDAL COUPLE SNOWBOUND.

Califon, March 5—During the height of the blizzard Sunday night, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Space, of Somerville, arrived here on a late train from Dover on their way to Teetertown, where they expected to spend their honeymoon with the bride's mother, Mrs. Almira Beam. Because of the snow-blocked roads they stayed at the home of the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Williams, of Main street. The couple were married at Somerville, Saturday and spent Sunday with relatives at Morristown. Mrs. Space formerly lived here.

APPOINTMENTS BY GOVERNOR FIELDER

State Legislature Gets Down to Work After Storm.

TO PROBE PHONE RATES.

Places Filled on Boards of State Institutions—Two Important Bills Introduced by Senator Colgate—One Provides For an Investigation of Women's Labor Conditions.

Trenton, N. J., March 5.—Although several of the members were still stormbound and unable to get here, both houses of the legislature got down to real business for the first time since the blizzard.

Board of Managers of the State Home For Disabled Soldiers, Sailors, Marines and Their Wives at Vineland—Cyrus F Osgood, Monmouth; George Barrett, Camden, and Joseph R. Durell of Trenton.

Speaker Beekman announced the appointment of house members of the joint commission to investigate the alleged exorbitant rates and discriminatory service of the telephone companies operating in New Jersey.

Two important bills were introduced by Senator Colgate, Republican, of Essex county. One provides for an investigation of the labor conditions of women and all girls more than sixteen years of age, and the other provides for a commission of five members, one of whom shall be blind, to look after the blind people of this state. The sum of $300 yearly is asked for the support of each blind pupil.

DEATH REVEALS BURGLARY.

Home of Woman Who Died in Florida Ransacked by Thieves.

Red Bank, N. J., March 5.—News reached here of the death of Mrs. Ellen A. Wood, wife of William Hamilton Wood of Vista place, who died on Monday of heart disease at St. Petersburg, Fla. She was about seventy years old. Mr. and Mrs. Wood lived for many years on Hawthorne avenue, East Orange.

Instructions were sent to relatives here to prepare the house for the funeral service. When it was opened it was discovered that the house had been ransacked by burglars. Clothing and other articles were scattered about the floors, and valuable furs, suits of clothes and pieces of furniture were missing.

Mr. Wood and his two daughters are expected to arrive today with the body of Mrs. Wood.

FIRE PANIC IN PRISON.

A Thousand Convicts In Trenton Terror Stricken by Noise of Engines.

Trenton, N. J., March 5.—Fire was discovered in the chapel of the state prison, and the arrival of the fire apparatus threw the convicts into a panic

About 200 prisoners are employed in two shops, and 1,000 are kept in their cells. The rest are in the road camps When the men in the cells heard the fire apparatus they beat wildly on the bars and yelled and cursed at the keepers. The men in the shops were kept under restraint, but it was a considerable time before those in the cells were made to understand that they were in no danger.

Only some of the chapel furniture was damaged. The blaze was started by crossed wires.

WORKERS COCAINE VICTIMS.

Young Men and Women of Paterson Habitual Users of It.

Paterson, N. J., March 5.—The widespread use of cocaine by young men and women who work in the silk mills of Paterson has been discovered by the police.

In the past few weeks John Tracey, captain of detectives, has received many letters from mothers complaining that their daughters were buying cocaine freely and had become habitual users of it. Tracey's men in their investigation have found several street peddlers who sold the drug and have confiscated their wares.

CONDENSED STATE NEWS.

For an assault that caused the death of William Tompkins, Judge Martin, sitting in Newark, sentenced John Moore to from eighteen months to three years in state prison.

A score of persons narrowly missed injury when the flywheel of the automobile fire engine exploded in Passaic. It shattered the body of the car and filled the air with missiles.

Hundreds of quail, partridge and English and Hungarian pheasants have died around Hackettstown from starvation, the ground having been covered with snow for about three weeks.

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

We Eat too Much Meat Which Clogs Kidneys, Then the Back Hurts.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

SAGE TEA KEEPS YOUR HAIR DARK

When Mixed With Sulphur It Brings Back Its Lustre and Abundance.

Gray hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray and looks dry, wispy and scraggly, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its apppearance a hundred-fold.

Don't stay gray! Look young! Either prepare the tonic at home or get from any drug store a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully and removes dandruff, stops scalp itching and falling hair; besides, no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, its natural color is restored and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous, and you appear years younger.—Adv.

GERMANS FAVOR DRASTIC ACTION

Would Have Intervened In the Benton Case.

NO CHIHUAHUA EXPEDITION

Britain Severely Criticised — Attitude In Mexican Tangle Fails to Meet With Approval—British Ambassador Carden Does Not Like United States Policy.

Berlin, March 5.—One of the highest officials of the German government said that the killing of one German in Mexico would probably strain Germany's patience with the Wilson-Bryan policy to the breaking point.

He said also that if Benton had been a German instead of an Englishman the German press would not have adopted the attitude assumed by Great Britain.

It is pointed out that the German government is most friendly toward Washington and has done nothing which might embarrass President Wilson in any way whatever, but the anti-American campaign which is being waged by the German newspapers on account of President Wilson's Mexican policy would result in such an outburst that the German government would be compelled to take strong action.

Abandon Benton Probe.

El Paso, Tex., March 5.—All hope that the Anglo-American commission would go to Chihuahua to examine the body of William S. Benton if the body is actually in the Chihuahua cemetery has been abandoned, and the members of the commission announced that they considered their work completed before it was begun, and one commissioner appointed by the United States expressed himself as believing that no further efforts would be made in this matter. This was further emphasized by American Consul Letcher's announcement that he intends to return on the regular train to Chihuahua.

He came here to act as convoy to the commission when it went to Chihuahua on the special train. His announced plan for departure is taken by Benton's friends as signifying that there is no present intention of the commission going to Chihuahua at this time, as he was expected here to escort the commission to the state capital as representative of the state department. British Consul Arthur Charles Perceval called on Mrs. William S. Benton Tuesday afternoon to confer with her about her deceased husband's case. He also saw a number of Americans familiar with the Benton matter, but has made no statement regarding the matter.

New York, March 5.—Sir Lionel Carden, British ambassador to Mexico, declared before sailing on the Olympic that he feared the United States had adopted a wrong attitude in its dealings with Mexico. In almost the same breath he took exceptions to stories published in the American papers to the effect that he had criticised the administration's policy.

He defended Huerta, but wouldn't go so far as to say he thought he was the proper man to head the government. He mentioned no names in his talk and referred to the Benton case only indirectly. He said he did not see how the United States could have done other than it has.

"Things are in bad shape—very bad—in Mexico," he said. "This is not so much because of the Constitutionalists in the north as because of the brigands who are taking advantage of the situation and looting and killing."

When asked directly what he thought of the attitude of the United States he smiled and answered:

"I did not come here to criticise the policy of your government, but I question in my own mind how well the attitude taken will work out."

He praised Huerta for the protection he has given foreigners.

EXPRESS LOOT FOUND.

Nearly All of $6,400 Stolen In Illinois Is Recovered.

Farmington, Ill., March 5. — Five thousand six hundred and thirty-five dollars of $6,400 stolen from the Adams Express agent here on Feb. 17 was recovered in an outbuilding near the express office. The money was in the original packages, the seals being unbroken.

Express company detectives were in Farmington when the money was recovered and put the agent, Brown, through a severe examination, but his story that he was beaten by two unidentified men remains unshaken.

WILSON NAMES PHILLIPS.

New Assistant Secretary of State a Friend of Roosevelt.

Washington, March 5.—William Phillips of Boston was nominated by President Wilson to be third assistant secretary of state. Phillips served many years in the diplomatic service.

He is said to be wealthy, and a story told about him in the capital is that when he was employed in the state department he turned over his salary to co-workers. He was an intimate friend of President Roosevelt and in the last few months has been doing confidential work for President Wilson connected with diplomatic affairs.

FLEMINGTON CUT OFF FROM ALL WIRE COMMUNICATION

Flemington, March 5—Flemington has been cut off from all telephone and telegraph communication since Sunday noon. Telegraph and telephone connections in all lines were lost and it is likely to be several days before communication can be restored. Ice covered the wires to a thickness of from one to two inches. Poles on trunk lines which carried many wires were weighted down with tons of ice and high winds snapped off hundreds of them.

No trains reached Flemington from Sunday afternoon until late Tuesday afternoon when the Pennsylvania Railroad succeeded in opening the road to Lambertville. The Lehigh Valley opened its branch about the same time. The South Branch line of the Central is expected to be open within a few hours. Deep cuts on all the branches were filled.

PRINCETON CHOOSES MEN FOR TRIANGULAR DEBATE

Princeton, March 5—The six undergraduates and the two alternates who will represent Princeton in the annual triangular debate with Harvard and Yale, to be held on March 22, were selected Tuesday by interhall competition. The men are: Regulars, David R. Hawkins, 1914; Carl Fritz Taeusch, 1914; Julius Ochs Adler, 1914; Boudinot Bakewell Atterbury, 1916; Moore Gates, 1916, and John M. Smith, 1915. The alternates will be James J. Swofford, 1915, and Christian Frederick Martin, 1916.

The Lynde prize, open to seniors only, was won by Mr. Taeusch, with Mr. Adler second and Mr. Hawkins third.

The Trask prize, open to all the debaters in the final trials, was won by Mr. Atterbury.

The judges of the trials and prizes were Professors Robert McNutt McElroy, Carl van Winkle, Frank A. Fetter and Radcliffe Heeremance, all members of the university faculty.

The literary societies divided honors on the results, each hall getting four men on the teams. The prizes were divided equally also.

Your Appearance Counts

Have you ever realized how well you are received when your appearance is favorable? Men, send your Suit and have it cleaned and pressed. Ladies, your tea gowns, woolen dresses, opera cloaks, plain or fancy waists, and indeed anything worth cleaning.

I guarantee my work and assure you that my method will tend to renew the fabric, brighten the colors and raise the nap, thereby restoring the garment to the freshness of new clothing.

THE ILL WIND.

Those who rely on the yield of mortgages, generally demand the protection of FIRE INSURANCE—why not guard against loss by Tornado and Wind?

Windstorm insurance is as logical as FIRE INSURANCE. Without it the mortgagee may whistle for his money, if the land value is less than the amount of their loan.

The cost is slight. Make inquiries today of

NEW RELIGIOUS BODY ORGANIZED

SIXTY-TWO MEMBERS

Rev. C. C. Cain Chosen Chairman and Rev. J. Y. Broek Secretary—Board of Trustees Elected—Twenty Persons Baptized.

Organization of the Mary E. Wilson Memorial Union church at Watchung was completed at a meeting held at that place, last night, under the direction of several local ministers who were invited to be present. Rev. Dr. E. G. Read, of this city, a retired minister, opened the meeting, explaining the objects. Rev. C. C. Cain, of Grace M. E. church, gave an earnest talk on the subject, "The Church," and Rev. J. Y. Broek, of Trinity Reformed church, gave an interesting address on the subject, "How to Become a Christian."

Mr. Cain was then chosen chairman of the meeting, and Mr. Broek was made secretary. The future success of the new church may be indicated by the fact that twenty-three persons were received into membership by letter and thirty-nine on confession. Of the latter number twenty were baptized, following an examination by Dr. Read, and they were publicly received into the fellowship of the church.

The following were chosen as a board of trustees: George T. Hughes, George W. Winans, H. R. Kennedy, Ephraim Acker, John Mobus, Elmer Kingman, John Herrman, William Batte, Edward Spier and Melvin H. Cleaves. At the first meeting of the new body several weeks ago a constitution and by-laws were adopted, and the Apostle's Creed was adopted as the articles of faith for membership.

The first communion service will be held on Sunday. At present Rev. Dr. E. G. Read has been supplying the pulpit at the church, preaching the second and fourth Sundays in the month. It is not know what arrangements will be made for securing a regular preacher and pastor. This matter will probably be taken up by the trustees in the near future. No suggestions have been made along that line up to the present time, except that it is thought that possibly a student from one of the nearby theological seminaries may be available for such service.

The new church starts off with every prospect of success. A majority of the charter membership comprises young people and many of them have been identified with the religious work of the church for sometime.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS GIVE A "VARIETY SHOWER"

The Christian Endeavor Society of Warren chapel met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Hoagland, 226 Somerset street, last night, and proceeded to the home of Miss Louise Demarest, at 239 Somerset street where a surprise "variety shower" was given in honor of the young woman who will soon marry James Street, of Brooklyn. Miss Demarest, who is employed in New York, arrived at her home about half an hour before the Endeavorers, and was completely surprised.

The feature of the evening was the presentation of a copper coffee perculator to Miss Demarest by the members of the society, of which she is an active worker. Following the presentation of the perculator, a set of dishes and table linen, a poem written by Miss Dolly Boisterli, in honor of the occasion, was read to the couple, who are soon to be married. Games and a social time followed.

Among those that surprised the prospective bride and groom were: Mr. and Mrs. William Demarest, Mr. and Mrs. George Hoagland, Rev. and Mrs. Joseph O. McKelvey, and Mr. and Mrs. Gibson Smith, Mrs. John Schenck, the Misses Bertha Hoagland, Hattie Squires, Bertha Martin, Bertha Bodine, Viola Higgins, Letha Hoagland, Adelaide Stiglitz, Ida Wheeler, Grace Van Demburgh, Elsie Van Demburgh, Adele Demarest, Teressa Snyder and Mildred Smith, and Charles Holstein, Arthur Hoen, Alfred O'Connors, Ralph Martin, Theodore Martin and James A. Thompson.

PROMPT RELIEF WILL BE EXPECTED

So Declares William B. Lundie in Letter to Mayor P. H. Stewart.

Mayor Percy H. Stewart was today in receipt of a letter from William B. Lundie, acting for petitioners, in which he writes concerning the alleged general nuisance maintained by Albert Rajotte, as set forth in previous petitions to the local governing bodies, including the Common Council, Board of Health, freeholders, etc. He states that he has been informed that one of the local newspapers published an item of news to the effect that the Board of Health of this city found no nuisance being maintained on the property complained of in the city.

He states that he writes to the Mayor for the purpose of ascertaining whether such is the case and if it is not, asks that the statement be denied that "there was no nuisance." Mr. Lundie suggests that the Common Council visit the locality complained of as soon as the snow is off the ground that the members may see conditions for themselves.

"We want to inform you as American citizens," says Mr. Lundie in addressing the Mayor, "and we expect to be afforded proper and thorough relief on all matter complained of, especially so if it is an alien committing them. This very grave question is up in Congress and the Senate now on immigration and the biggest part of the trouble is partly due to local authorities in various parts of the country not looking into matters of just such type as we are complaining and attending to same properly. Gentlemen, kindly let us hear at least from you as to what you propose doing."

The matter of which M. Lundie complains came before the Common Council was referred to Corporation Counsel Charles A. Reed and at the meeting of the Council on Monday night, Mr. Reed advised that body that the city had no jurisdiction in the matter, and City Clerk James T. MacMurray was directed to so inform the petitioner.

WHITE RIBBONERS PERFECT ORGANIZATION

Young People's Branch of W. C. T. U. Will Strive for Prohibition in Plainfield.

An enthusiastic meeting of the local Young People's Branch of the W. C. T. U. was held at the home of Mrs. William J. Hamilton at 407 East Seventh street, last night. Several vice presidents were elected from the various denominations represented which were the Baptists, Friends, Presbyterians, and Trinity and Netherwood Reformed churches. Superintendents of flowers, press, and social departments were also elected.

The Plainfield branch now has twenty-one members, twelve of whom are young women, and nine young men, seven new pledge-signers joining last night. The immediate object of this branch is to work for a "dry Plainfield." The regular meetings are held the first Thursday of every month at 8 o'clock at the homes of the members. Social meetings will be announced at other times. The next regular meeting will be held with Miss Cormine Tennyson, at her home at No. 2 Grove street, Thursday, April 2.

The officers elected at the organization meeting in February are: President, Robert B. Butler; recording secretary, Miss Mabel Cronce; corresponding secretary, Miss Edith Hamilton; treasurer, Gideon Fountain. At last night's meeting the vice presidents elected were Miss Mary Bennett, Miss Caroline Borton, Miss Cormine Tennyson. White enamel ribbon pins with gold border were distributed and the colors chosen were maroon and white. Refreshments were served at the close of the business session.

TO DISCUSS BORO SCHOOL TROUBLES

Prominent Citizens to Address Public Meeting Tuesday Night, March 10.

On account of the existing conditions in the North Plainfield public schools, a meeting of citizens of the borough has been called for Tuesday night, March 10, at the Somerset street school, to consider these conditions. Prominent citizens have been invited to speak, among whom are Mayor Robert Clark, Jr., J. B. Betts, assistant State Commissioner of Education, Champlain L. Riley and others.

Subjects either directly or indirectly concerning the welfare of the schools of the borough will come up for public discussion, and the meeting promises to be of unusual interest to every citizen, but more especially to taxpayers and parents who have children attending the schools. It is understood that an effort will be made to solve some of the perplexing problems now confronting the school authorities.

DINNER WILL PRECEDE MEETING

Union County Suffragists Planning for Big Rally at Elizabeth, March 16.

The Union county mass meeting to be held in Proctor's Broad Street Theatre, Elizabeth, Monday night, March 16, under the auspices of the New Jersey Men's League for Woman Suffrage, is expected to attract suffragists from all parts of the State as well as the county. In addition to addresses by Dr. Stephen S. Wise, Mrs. Beatrice Forbes-Robertson Hale and George M. LaMonte, there will be a dinner for the State committee at 6 o'clock. At the dinner plans for work among the voters will be discussed, there being only a year and a half before the question of "Votes for Women" will be submitted to the voters.

Headed by Miss Esther G. Ogden, president of the Elizabeth league, the women's organizations throughout the county are rallying their membership to the support of the men, and the women it is believed will prove of incalcuable value to the men in bringing the question to a successful issue.

Two of the four votes cast against the suffrage resolution in the Assembly were from Union county Assemblymen, (the vote being 47 to 4 in favor). The importance of Union county as a hotbed of opposition will bring suffragists to Elizabeth from as far off as New Brunswick and Bound Brook. It is rumored also that the "antis" are anxious to hear Dr. Wise, who has become a factor in the New Jersey campaign since his whirlwind speech at the legislative hearing in January.

PHONE COMPANY TO MAKE CUT IN BILLS OF STORM VICTIMS

The New York Telephone Company has sent the following notice to local subscribers, because of the storm:

"The storm of last Sunday and Sunday night, consisting of very heavy falls of wet snow and sleet, accompanied by extremely high winds, was the most severe, from a telephone standpoint, that has visited this territory during the last fifteen years. More than 3,000 poles have been carried down and service has been interrupted on more than 30,000 telephones.

"Repairs are now under way and your service will be restored as soon as possible. In the meantime we ask your indulgence.

"In view of the interruption of your telephone service, we shall be pleased to make a corresponding allowance. This amount will be credited on your next bill."

REMOVES HIS OFFICES.

Clifford D. Manning, who has occupied offices on North avenue for the past seven years, has removed his real estate and insurance business to the new Manning building at Park avenue and Depot Park. The new office is at 106 Depot Park, directly in the rear of the telephone company's new commercial office, and is well adapted for the business.

SEEK IMPROVED JAIL CONDITIONS

C. Ames Brooks, of This City, Addresses Freeholders About Matters.

POOR LIGHTING SYSTEM

Appointment of County Farm Demonstrator Raises a Protest and the Attorney, W. R. Codington, With a Committee Will Investigate.

Elizabeth, March 6—C. Ames Brooks, secretary of the Plainfield section of the Union county committee of the State Charities Aid and Prison Reform Association, wrote the Board of Freeholders, yesterday, suggesting improved sanitary and lighting conditions at the county jail. Mr. Brooks said that the board of visitors felt satisfied with the general conditions at the jail, but agreed with the Plainfield Charity Organization Society that other sanitation and lighting was needed. The communication was referred to the jail committee.

Alva Agee, State superintendent of farm demonstration work, made an address to the board, in which he announced the appointment of W. F. Houston, of Harrison, N. Y., as the Union county farm demonstrator at a salary of $1,500. The appointment was made in accordance with the provisions of a legislative act which is mandatory.

Freeholders Meisel, Thompson and Hennessy all questioned the wisdom of the appointment.

Mr. Meisel said that the Freeholders should have been consulted and that despite Mr. Agee's statement, the farmers of the county had not appeared before the board on the matter. Freeholder Hennessy criticised the mandatory provision of the act, and said that it was one of many that saddled useless and expensive offices on the county.

Freeholder Thompson questioned Mr. Agee as to the practical experience of the appointee and was assured that he was an experienced farmer.

On motion of Freeholder Bourdon, a committee consisting of Freeholders Meisel, Hennessy, Darby, Bourdon and Thompson with the county attorney, was appointed to investigate the matter.

INSTRUCTOR RETIRED BY EDUCATION BOARD

Miss Alice Lansing Placed on the Pension List After Twenty-seven Years.

Owing to impaired health, Miss Alice Lansing, for twenty-seven years a member of the teaching corps in the local public schools, has retired from active service and her place has been filled temporarily by a substitute. She has been placed on the retired list by the Plainfield Board of Education and will receive an annual person from the State.

Miss Lansing was entitled to a pension several years ago but continued in active service until the present time, her health having been poor of late. She is one of the oldest instructors in the point of service in this city, and is known widely among those who have gone through her class. She has for many years been a member of the grammar school department, being one of the three teachers who moved with the grammar grades from the old Seventh-Day Baptist church building on Madison avenue to the present Stillman School, which was formerly the high school building. The other two teachers who are veterans in the service with Miss Lansing in the grammar grades are Miss Anna Day, the principal, and Miss Eleanore Wilbur, of the seventh grade.

The Board of Education took definite action in her retirement at the last meeting and she has severed her connections with educational work in this city permanently. She is well known as an instructor in mathematics, which she made her specialty and is considered an authority on algebra. Miss Lansing during her long and faithful service, has won the respect and affection of the community and many will regret her withdrawal from educational work.

OFFICIAL TEST TO BE HELD MARCH 14

Fire Chief T. O. Doane and the Councilmanic fire committee have arranged for an official test of the new Nott automobile fire engine to be held Saturday, March 14, on Brook avenue, near the Elm street bridge. Invitations have been sent to the heads of fire departments throughout this section of the State and the National Board of Fire Underwriters of New York, will be represented at the test.

The new engine was taken to the plant of the Rushmore Dynamo Works, yesterday, where a Rushmore self-starter was put on the machine and tested out thoroughly. So far as the layman can see the engine seems to be all that is claimed for it and the company feels sure that under the severe test to be given it will more than meet requirements.

URGES ARBOR DAY OBSERVANCE

State Commissioner of Education Asks the Co-operation of all Public Schools.

Calvin N. Kendall, State Commissioner of Education, has announced a general observance of Arbor Day in co-operation with the State Forest Commission, on Friday, April 10. The statutory requirement is as follows:

"On said day (Arbor Day) appropriate exercises shall be introduced in all the schools of the State, and it shall be the duty of the several county and city superintendents to prepare a program of exercises for that day in all the schools under their respective jurisdictions."

Mr. Kendall states: "That this requirement may be complied with, it is advised that Arbor Day be observed in a way that shall emphasize the special interests of each school and its immediate connections. City schools will naturally be most concerned with shade trees and bird life. Country schools, without ignoring either of these may care particularly about the preservation of the forests.

"Tree planting, though important, has been somewhat overdone in connection with Arbor Day observances. If there is room for more trees on the grounds of any school, or in nearby parks, let the occasion be used for planting with appropriate ceremonies, but it often will be better to organize a squad of pupils to cultivate and fertilize the ground about trees already established, to provide and maintain suitable guards, to conduct a campaign against insects, or in some other way to awaken a continuing interest on behalf of the trees. It is well to keep in touch with the town or city Shade Tree Commission.

"In this State there is no dearth of forests; in some places we still have too much woodland. The exercises in country schools, therefore, may serve to give emphasis to local needs and interets, especially to the control of forest fires by which so much property is lost. There is a forest firewarden in every part of the State where there is danger of forest fires. He may be asked to take part in the exercises and point out how the pupils can help in this work. They can do much.

"Further suggestions and definite information are given in the pamphlets 'Arbor Day' and 'Trees and Forests,' published by the Department of Public Instruction, which will be sent free on request. The State forester will give specific advice if asked."

FUNERAL OF CHARLES E. HUXLEY LARGELY ATTENDED

The funeral of Charles E. Huxley, the veteran trolley conductor, was held at his late home, 717 South avenue, yesterday noon, Rev. W. E. L. Ward, rector of St. Stephen's church, officiating. The burial was in Hillside cemetery. Mr. Huxley was a native of England, coming to Plainfield from Albany, N. Y., nearly twenty-five years ago. He was one of the first conductors employed in the local trolley service.

THREATENS SUIT AGAINST THE CITY

Louis Fay Said to Be Aggrieved at Building Inspector Doane's Action.

There are current rumors that Louis Fay, of West Third street, owner of the vacant building on Liberty street, between Second and Third streets, which Building Inspector T. O. Doane recently ordered braced because of the condition of the foundation, threatens to bring a damage suit against the city, because, he claims, Inspector Doane exceeded his power in ordering Mobus Brothers, contractors, of North Plainfield, to proceed with the work necessary to keep the house from being a menace to the neighborhood.

When interviewed this morning, by a Daily Press reporter, Mr. Fay stated that he feels that the city official exceeded his power in so far that no written notice had been issued to the holder of the property and that the contractors had entirely destroyed the foundation on the south side of the house. According to Mr. Fay's own statement to the Press reporter, his verbal understanding with Chief Doane was that the chestnut beams should "prop up" the house from the outside instead of skids, which were placed in the basement, incurring a greater expense to the owner as well as making it necessary to remove the foundation entirely from the south side of the building. Whether action will be finally brought against the city, Mr. Fay has not as yet determined, but the question has been placed in the hands of his attorney.

Last summer, Mr. Fay had an excavation made between his building, which is on a terrace, and Michael Devine's barber shop next door, this being done in anticipation of putting up a two story building, which thus far has not materialized. The foundation on the south side of the house was consequently left exposed to the weather, the frost during the last few months working havoc with the masonry work. Several portions of the foundation had worked loose to such an extent that the building was considered a menace by many of the business men of the neighborhood and several complaints had been made when Inspector Doane took the action which resulted in verbal agreement that the official was to order the work necessary to make the building safe.

SUPREME COURT SETS ASIDE VERDICT

W. S. Angleman's Contention About Partnership Law is Sustained.

A precedent in partnership law has just been made by the Supreme Court in support of Counselor W. S. Angleman's contention originally made in a case tried before Judge Vail in the Somerset Circuit Court at Somerville last October.

Harry W. Hoffman brought suit, through his counsel, Prosecutor F. A. Pope, of Somerville, against Charles G. Westlecraft on an award based on a submission to arbitration of a claim against a partnership signed in the partnership name by one partner. Mr. Angleman appeared for the defendant and contended that such a submission did not bind the partnership.

Judge Vail thought otherwise and directed a verdict for the plaintiff. Mr. Angleman immediately took the case to the Supreme Court, where it was signed in November before Chief Justice Gummere and Justices Parker and Kalisch.

The decision of the court was announced on Wednesday, and the opinion was written by Justice Parker. Mr. Angleman's contention was sustained, and the verdict was set aside.

DEBONAIR BANDIT WELL KNOWN HERE

A NOTORIOUS CRIMINAL

"W. Arlington Danton" Carried on a Dental School Here for Five Months—Information Offered by Local Police Result in Capture.

Evidence submitted to the Summit authorities by Police Chief Kiely and Detective-Sergeant Flynn, of the local police force, today resulted in the capture of one of the most daring criminals brought to the attention of the police in years. For five months, from August to December inclusive he lived at a boarding-house owned by Miss Clara Chapin, at 413 Central avenue, and carried on his highway robbery in other parts of the State. Following a conference with the local police, Detectives William H. George and John C. Gannon, of the Summit force, have corraled William R. Keith, alias W. Arlington Danton or Edward Farley, of Easton, Pa., who is said to be the debonnair bandit who kidnapped a policeman and a chauffeur in Summit, Saturday night, February 21. The captors were left in an old mill near Short Hills, bound with cut-up lap robes and hay wire while the tall well-dressed man of engaging manners made off for parts unknown.

Soon after the news of the daring hold-up was sent broadcast throughout the country, Detective Flynn, of the local force, who had been on Danton's trail, communicated with the Summit chief of police, and the latter, together with Mayor Bergen, of Summit, and Detective William George came to Plainfield where the latter identified the picture in the possession of the local authorities as that of the bondit and left here last Wednesday to arrest him with the information given them by the Plainfield officer. The case came to a climax last night when the arrest was made at No. 28 West Sixty-first street, New York, where Keith is said to have been living for several weeks with his wife and ten-year-old son. When the police officers called at the house in question, Keith personally answered the doorbell and invited the visitors in as his guests. He offered them cigars and drinks, which were declined and the policemen began a search of his apartments despite protests which he offered.

When he was confronted with a "jimmy," he replied, "I use that to break ice with on the window sills."

"That's handy for opening a safe," was his comment, when they found a glass cutter, but when they discovered a little dark lantern he said "That's handy for finding lost detectives."

Keith lived in Plainfield under the name of W. Arlington Danton and carried on a mail order business through the local postoffice for a correspondence school of "Mechanical Dentistry," the offices of which he had in the house where he boarded. He came to Plainfield early in July and one of the first places he visited was the office of a local dentist on West Front street, where he applied for desk room. An agreement between the dentist and the stranger could not be reached at once and he tried to borrow a suitcase from the latter, claiming that it would look better for him to go to a local hotel with a grip in his hand. The man went away and was not seen again by Dr. Smalley. He applied to several other local dentists for a similar arrangement, but was refused in each instance, finally settling down on Central avenue. While he was in Plainfield he was under suspicion, but so smoothly did he carry on his operations that no convicting evidence could be secured.

While he was here several local dentists' offices were looted and similar crimes were carried on in nearby towns which are thought to be the work of Danton. It is the supposition of the police that he worked entirely at night and was a man of leisure about town in the daytime. He was known to be a frequent visitor in New York and Newark.

He is thirty-four years old, of good address and appearance, and conspicuously well dressed. He made a number of friends while in Plainfield and secured admittance to the offices of several dentists, claiming to be interested in the work.

In the station house last night, he admitted he had a prison record: "I served ten years for robbing a sea captain in Philadelphia of jewels," he said, "and one year in Reading for playing the hotel swindle. I am a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania Dental College, and just now I am 'W. Arlington Danton,' head of the American Correspondence School of Mechanical Dentistry.'

"Why didn't you go straight when you got out?" asked Captain Kerr.

"I tried to, but the best I could get

Means of travel were restored through the center of town to other towns in this vicinity, last night, when the large Main Line cars were again placed in operation by the Public Service Corporation. Previous to resuming the Main Line car service, smaller cars were operated over the lines through town. These cars were in operation all Thursday night to insure against the freezing up of the water that completely covers the car tracks at all points.

Street Commissioner I. V. Smalley has had his gang of men at work around the borough and has up to the present time opened up most of the gutters in the heart of town, so that the excessive supply of surface water due to the thawing of the ice and snow, can safely be taken care of without flooding all the thoroughfares.

The Mayor has issued a notice to the residents of this town that those who do not remove the snow and ice from the sidewalks in front of their property are liable to arrest and a fine. As soon as this notice became known to the delinquents the majority of the property owners that got busy had walks which were a menace to the public, cleaned. Up to the present no notices have been served by the local authorities for delinquents to appear before the Mayor.

Steps are being taken, under a law recently passed, by the Township Committee, to fine all delinquent poll taxpayers. As there are a number in town this step was made necessary so that the books of the local tax collector can be brought to date.

Eugene Smalley, of the firm of Smalley Brothers, of North avenue, spent Wednesday in New Brunswick on business.

Charles Tinsman, of North avenue, who has been laid up with a severe attack of grip, is again able to be out and around.

The voters in the borough will select a successor to William M. Myers on the School Board at the district election to be held on Tuesday, March 17.

'Plains & Fanwood.

Means of communication have again been obtained with other towns by the residents of this village. With the resumption of the trolley service through town, it is now possible for residents who are employed, and are in business in other towns that have been completely separated from this town for the past few days, to resume their various duties. The first car to open up the way and which lead to the restoration of the regular scheduled run of cars through town passed along Second street late last night for Plainfield. This car was one that was stalled between Westfield and this town last Sunday afternoon when the power was turned off by the Public Service authorities.

Henry Demarest, of Front street, returned to his home yesterday from Bayonne, where he had been visiting friends since last Saturday. Mr. Demarest was one of the unfortunate victims of the storm, being unable to get a train from Bayonne to Fanwood, Sunday night, when he anticipated his return trip.

William A. Batterson, physical director and supervisor of the Parish House gymnasium, has returned to his duties after spending the week-end and an enforced two extra days with his parents in New York.

Coasting has again been resumed on both Spencer's and Meyer's hills in the mountainous sections of town. In addition to the numerous bobsleds, of not only the local sporting enthusiasts, a few of the young men who are fortunate enough to possess skiis, can be seen gliding down the icy surfaces every afternoon and evening.

Mrs. John Archbald, of Park avenue, who has been detained at her home for some time past, is reported as having improved slightly.

Owing to the lack of electric lighting facilities in the churches and Parish House, all the mid-week meetings of the various societies were not held Wednesday night. The Parish House is open only during the afternoon, as there are none but electric lighting fixtures installed in the building and as all the power has been cut off throughout the town no lights can be obtained.

was $75 a week for lecturing on prison reform, and that Jack Rose method does not appeal to me," answered Danton.

Detective Flynn had the man under suspicion since last fall and the records he has compiled of the criminal's history show that his real name is Ray Sampson and that he hails from Easton, Pa. He was arrested in Philadelphia in March, 1907, charged with highway robbery. Danton, in company with John C. Strickler and Arthur Stone. The three robbed a paymaster and the Danton man, who gave the name of William R. Keith at that time, was sentenced to a prison term of ten years. He was released last summer and came immediately to Plainfield and frequented New York and Newark. While he had a wife and child in Philadelphia when he lived in Plainfield, Danton mingled with local young women and got well acquainted in this way.

PARENT-TEACHER ASSN' WILL NOT OFFER A CANDIDATE

After a lengthy discussion held during the monthly meeting of the North Plainfield Parent-Teacher Association, in the Somerset street school building, yesterday afternoon, the members of the association decided to recommend to the borough Board of Education that women be barred from holding positions in the school board.

This subject has been the cause for considerable agitation in the borough since the retirement of one of the male members several months ago, when it was urged that a woman fill the vacancy. The names of several possible candidates were offered at that time by the association, but after further consideration of the matter it was decided to take the opposite point of view. The members were evenly divided on the issue, the first ballot resulting in a tie.

SEEK PRISON REFORMS.

New York, March 6.—Superintendents and wardens of prisons in various parts of the United States and Canada addressed a conference here today in the interest of prison reform. The meeting was held under the auspices of the Woman's Department of the National Civic Federation and was the first of a series of such meetings to be held in various parts of the country with a view to creating public sentiment in favor of legislation for prison reform and to formulate a definite program of legislative action.

HORSE ELECTROCUTED.

Stepping on a live wire stretched across Manning avenue near Watchung avenue, early this afternoon, a horse attached to a milk wagon driven by John Muller, a milkman, was instantly killed. A small boy who gave his name as Elliott Carson ran out to the horse as the equine fell and in unloosening the strap was severely shocked.

ELKS' REHEARSAL.

The local lodge of Elks will conduct a rehearsal of the annual minstrel entertainment in the club rooms on Watchung avenue tonight at 8 o'clock.

ELDORE C. OSTLIN RESIGNS POSITION

Announcement was made at the meeting of the Y. M. C. A. board of directors, held in the association parlor, last night, of the resignation of E. C. Ostlin, who has been the physical director of the association for two years, the same to take effect June 1. Mr. Ostlin came here from the Williamsbridge branch of the New York city association, and tenders his resignation to enter another line of work. During his connection with the Plainfield Y. M. C. A., Mr. Ostlin has inaugurated many features in the physical department and has become widely known to athletes and promoters of gymnastic endeavor in this section.

Reports received by the board of directors shows that the month just closed has been an active one for all branches and the various departments of association endeavor are all on a flourishing basis. The religious work committee reported eight meetings during the month, held in local shops at noon hour and five Bible classes are now being conducted with a total attendance of 108 for last month.

In the physical department seven classes had a total attendance of 955. Six educational motion picture entertainments have been held on Saturdays and holidays and the Saturday morning rally meetings arranged by Boys' Secretary C. William Bingeman has attracted 800 boys. The newly inaugurated social evenings for members of the senior department leaders' corps have been highly successful. Eight religions and civic bodies used the building for meeting purposes during the last month.

As an expression of its interest in the nation-wide movement for the destruction of the liquor traffic, the association is maintaining a series of posters prepared by the Scientific Temperance Federation and showing the relation of alcohol to accidents, athletics, physical and mental work, child welfare and social questions. These are displayed on a billboard in front of the local building.

Donald McInnis, of West Third street, has been confined to his home for the past few days with an attack of the grip.

John Clark, of West Fourth street who has been laid up for some time with an attack of the grip, has recovered.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter M. Jaccard, of Kansas City, are now visiting their aunt, Mrs. J. M. Martin, of Park avenue. Mrs. Arthur H. Carriere, who has been visiting her aunt, Mrs. J. M. Martin, for the past two months, has returned to her home in St. Louis.

LIKE SEEKING LIKE

Harrison Rhodes, who is well known as a magazine writer, and Thomas Wise, who collaborated with Mr. Rhodes on a piece called "The Gentleman From Mississippi," are again putting heads and pens together for the making of a play called "The Prince of Showmen." Obviously, this new comedy will have to do with the life of P. T. Barnum, who is shown above imaged in bronze—the memorial to him that stands at Bridgeport—and on its steps stands Thomas Wise, who will be the prince of showmen. It will be the first time the late P. T. Barnum has ever been put upon the stage, even indirectly. The cast of the play will include midgets, human skeletons and other freaks and friends of the late prince of showmen.

PATRICK J. CORRIGAN DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Patrick J. Corrigan, aged thirty-two years, a well-known resident of Plainfield, died last night at his home, 446 West Fourth street, following a lingering illness. He was a native of Ireland and came to this country when a boy. For a number of years he was employed by Frank Cullen, the grocer, of the West End, and more recently had been in the grocery business at Plainfield avenue and West Fifth street.

Mr. Corrigan was a member of Division No. 4, Ancient Order of Hibernians and St. Mary's church. He is survived by his father, Patrick Corrigan, four sisters, Miss Mary Corrigan, Mrs. Gustave Kaeding, Miss Elizabeth Corrigan, of this city, and Mrs. Emily McDonough, of Philadelphia, and a brother, John Corrigan, of this city. The notice of funeral will be given later.

QUALITY OF UNITED STATES POTATOES POOR

Elizabeth, March 6.—Professor M. T. Cook, of the New Brunswick Agricultural Station, in an address before the Union County Board of Agriculture yesterday, asserted that the United States was far behind Germany in the quantity of potatoes raised per acre. This country, he said, should, and undoubtedly would, raise more potatoes than at present.

PETTY THIEVES AT WORK IN NETHERWOOD SECTION

Two petty robberies were reported to the local police early this morning and Detective-Sergeant Flynn is now working on several meagre clues. The robberies were probably committed by boys. W. T. Banks, of 205 Netherwood avenue, reported at 6 o'clock this morning that someone had entered his store during the night and taken a quantity of cigars, cigarettes and candy. Entrance was gained by cutting out the glass in a window.

Joe Buratnecel, who lives next door to Banks reported that someone had broken into his place and taken $3 in money from a telephone box and a quantity of shoes and rubber heels. The lost will aggregate about $4.85.

"SUGARING-OFF" PARTY.

MOTORCYCLE CLUB PLANS FOR RECEPTION AND DANCE

Members of the Plainfield Motorcycle Club met in their headquarters, last night, when final preparations were made for the organization's reception and dance which will be held in Sebring's Auditorium, April 14. Twenty-one members attended last night's session and five new members were elected to membership and will receive the third degree at the next gathering, Thursday night, March 19.

A committee composed of James Conway, Jack Horner and Harry Uhler was appointed to investigate the conditions surrounding a piece of land in Piscataway Township where it has been proposed to erect a clubhouse. It was decided to hold a social gathering once each month and a committee was selected to arrange for one to be held March 19. The body met at once and decided on a smoker. Treasurer Hampson reported that he had taken a position with the F. A. M. Motor Company.

ENDORSED BY PREDECESSOR.

At the conclusion of President Wilson's first year in office every newspaper in New York told of the great success of his administration thus far. Even the New York Sun, which has criticised him and his cabinet adversely in nearly every edition since he took office, was compelled to say that the first year has been a wonderful success from the point of view of great things accomplished. Some papers see much for criticism in his attitude on the Mexican question, and by jingo methods are endeavoring to force intervention on the part of this nation, merely for the protection of business interests, even at the cost of the lives of many United States soldiers, and millions of dollars.

On the Mexican question the large majority of the people of the nation fully approve the President's action, in spite of the distorted statements appearing in the sensational newspapers. Former President William H. Taft, at a recent dinner in New York, defended the President's Mexican policy in such a way that he left no room for doubt, and he voiced the sentiments of every thinking man in the country, except possibly of those whose pocketbooks have been affected by the situation in the southern country. Mr. Taft said:

"The situation is in such a condition that it would be improper for me to comment on it except to say this, that those who lightly look forward to intervention are either utterly regardless of the loss of life and the expenditure of immense treasure or else they don't know what armed intervention on the part of this government in Mexico will mean.

"Those of us who have had experience in the tranquillizing of a tropical country, with a people not very different from the Mexicans, who take naturally to guerilla warfare and who would rather fight than work—that is, would rather fight and run than work—know the difficulties that an army would have to meet to accomplish the only purpose that we would have in going in—to wit, the bringing about of law and order. It would involve the garrisoning with a sufficient force of every town.

"It would involve the organization of columns to chase the guerillas in to their mountain fastnesses and across trackless desert plains and the subjugation of fifteen millions of people.

"I don't know when we would get through; I don't know how many lives it would involve; I don't know how much it would cost, but I do know it would be a drag on us, and then when we had gotten the thing done the future would still be doubtful and still be a charge and a burden upon our government and upon our treasury. I do not speak thus positively without some knowledge of the subject. No effort ought to be omitted to prevent a catastrophe like this."

Probably not a man now shouting for intervention would shoulder arms and go to the front in case intervention were necessary. That would be a horse of another color for them, and were they subject to being drafted for the army, they would soon change their tune. They do not appreciate what intervention really means.

MISSING A GREAT CHANCE.

In his talk before the Board of Trade banqueters some nights ago, Charles H. Sherrill, former American Minister to Argentine Republic, told of the great opportunities which American interests are neglecting in that South American country. He called attention to the fact that the trade there is slowly moving more and more to European shores. The markets of the western hemisphere are slowly melting away before our very eyes. Since that time it has become emphasized because Prince Henry, of Prussia, is sailing from Germany to Buenos Aires as an ambassador of commerce. The fatherland is preparing to bid strongly for more trade privileges and extensions in South America.

In the meantime, our own merchants throughout the country are paying scant enough attention to the sister continent, where undreamed-of development has been going on quietly for years. So engrossed with our own commerce, we have been doing little to broaden our fields and lay claim to our new opportunities. Not so our European contemporaries. For years they have labored with no little success to capture the trade of our own neighbors and they have made a well nigh clean sweep of it. Goods bound to us from the south must cross the Atlantic to Europe and come back again to us and our products must make the double trip over and back before they reach South America.

A large party of Illinois merchants and manufacturers are in South America now on a trade extension tour. Col. Roosevelt stopped on his tour of exploration to carry the United States' message of friendliness and frank understanding. But this is all and it is little enough indeed. If our American cities are to obtain the trade with South America which rightfully belongs here, we must resort to greater plans of trade extension there. When we go into the field, we will find the hardest sort of well-organized European competition to overcome. It will be an American invasion into America and it will be no easy task to claim our own rightful opportunity.

We are beginning to seek foreign markets for American-made goods. The field lies to the south. Plainfield manufacturers may well afford to consider the needs of South America with all due seriousness.

Assemblyman Dobbins, of this county, has introduced a bill in the House at Trenton providing that all books, documents or other records in the custody of any State or municipal officer, employe, board or committee shall be public records, open to any citizen of the State for inspection and copying, subject to reasonable regulations. The bill is a good one. There is no public body of any kind that should be allowed to conceal anything about its affairs. Every salary paid, every dollar spent, every official record should be open to the taxpayer, for after all every Common Council, Board of Health, Board of Education, and other body is composed merely of employes of the people, and as the employer the general public is entitled to know of every action of such bodies.

Miss Addie Parker Jackson, physical director of the Plainfield Public Schools, has written the contributed editorial for tomorrow's paper. Her topic, which is particularly timely just now, is "The New Gymnasium of the Plainfield High School—Its Uses and Benefits."

IN THIS LIST OF QUESTIONS GIVEN MONTCLAIR HIGH SCHOL PUPILS, HOW MANY CAN YOU ANSWER?

Principal Herbert W. Dutch, of the Montclair High School, recently submitted a list of questions on ancient, medieval and modern history to the various classes. The list, the principal said, was the duplicate of questions given at another school, where those answering received an average of about fifty per cent.

The questions have been submitted to a number of Plainfield people and they have found it difficult to answer them. They are here submitted for the readers of the Press to puzzle over, and among them are some which will make it necessary to get down reference books.

Here are the questions which the pupils were tried on, and which are considered a fair test:

Name—
The President of the United States.
The Secretary of State.
The American Ambassador to Great Britain.
The engineer of the Panama Canal.
The King of England.
The Prime Minister of England.
The political power now in power at Washington, D. C.
The political organization recently defeated in the New York city municipal election.
The new national revenue tax.
The neighboring country in a state of revolution.
The general who led the Carthaginians over the Alps.
The man who first circumnavigated the globe.
The original thirteen colonies.
The cities that have been capitols of our country.
The city that was saved by geese.

In what field or office have the following become famous? (Give nationality, also state whether contemporary or historical)—
Leonardo da Vinci; Alfred Noyes; Huerta; William Sulzer; Martin Luther; Winston Churchill; Mme. Homer; Rembrandt; Rabindranath Tagore.

What historical or literary associations are connected with the following? Tell what nations were involved.
Waterloo; the Treaty of Ghent; Trafalgar; the Statue of Liberty; the Craigie House; Islam; the Fourth of July; Gettysburg; Domesday Book; Jamestown, Va.

Name the city referred to by each of the following expressions:
Gotham; the Smoky City; the Windy City; the City of David; the Eternal City; the City of Brotherly Love; the South American Paris; the Hub of the Universe.

Where should the signature be placed on a check? Where the indorsement? Who does the writing in each case, and what does he write? Explain o. k., i. e., B. C., M. D. What were the Kalends and the Ides?

Who was the national hero of Switzerland, of Holland, of Scotland, of Celtic Britain, of Italy, of Ireland?

LITTLE INTEREST EVIDENCED IN ANNUAL MINSTREL SHOW

The first tryout and practise of the Plainfield High School minstrel troupe was held in the Franklin School auditorium, yesterday afternoon, and but fifteen fellows reported for the initial gathering. Plans were discussed for arousing interest in the affair and it is proposed to have nearly triple the number on hand for the next rehearsal.

The annual minstrel show is given under the auspices of the Boys' Athletic Association and will be the opening entertainment in the new Plainfield High School auditorium. The show will be given in May. Athletics in the high school are supported by this show and a committee of workers is today busy making arrangements for a big campaign among the male students.

SEVERE SENTENCE FOR WIRE CUTTER IF APPREHENDED

Malicious work on the part of some miscreant who cut the fire alarm wires at South Second street and near the Pond Machine Tool Company's plant, last night, is being investigated by the local authorities and if the offender is apprehended he will be dealt severely with.

There is a penalty of $1,000 fine and eight years in State's prison for such a crime and efforts are being made to make an example of the miscreant. Shortly after the linemen repaired a break at that place late yesterday afternoon and soon after they quit work the gong sounded. The break was investigated and the wire was found to have been cut with a pair of pliers or some other instrument used in wire cutting. Chief Doane is now holding the pieces of wires as evidence in the event of the capture of the offender.

If a Vote Was Taken

in town. As we said in our advertisement in Saturday's papers, was a great success. We mean as far as this store was concerned. We were crowded with eager buyers from early morning till closing time. The reason for our big success was the character of the goods we offered. Instead of making a rummage sale of it we took from stock bright, fresh, new goods and the savings averaged from 25c to $1.00 on every lot.

PLAINFIELD'S FIRST BIG DOLLAR DAY

Sale of Pillows

B. DEWITT GILES DIES IN 60TH YEAR

Following a three weeks' illness, which commenced with a slight cold while serving on the Middlesex county Grand Jury, and through neglect, developed into pneumonia and complications, B. DeWitt Giles, aged sixty years, died at his home on New Market road, New Market, yesterday.

Mr. Giles was a member of the First Baptist church of New Market, and an active member of that institution. He was the eldest son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Giles, and was born on the old Giles homestead which he sold about twelve years ago to Robert Fairbairn. For the past ten years Mr. Giles has lived as a retired farmer, taking pleasure in the advancement of church work, which he undertook during his leisure time.

Besides his widow, Mr. Giles is survived by four daughters, Mrs. George Harris, of Lincoln; Mrs. Isaac Lines, of New Market, and the Misses Fannie and Edith Giles, also of New Market, and one brother, N. B. Giles, of Dunellen.

The funeral will be held at his late home on New Market road, Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Rev. Dr. T. E. Vassar, pastor of the Baptist church, will officiate. Interment will be made in Hillside cemetery.

ADJUST DIFFICULTIES WITH BUILDING TRADES

Adjustment of the differences which have existed between the local Building Trades Council and the Master Builders' Organization, and Morris Abrams and Harry Dreier, has been completed, and the following statement has been prepared regarding the matter:

"All the differences heretofore existing between the Building Trades and the Messrs. Dreier and Abrams, due to the trouble that originated over the Astor Theatre building, has been amicably adjusted in every way satisfactory to the Building Trades.

"In justice to the trades union and the master builders, they desire that public expression be given of their harmonious relations and that the patronage previously enjoyed by Messrs. Dreier and Abrams continue as formerly. Arrangements should be made with some local master builder employing union men to complete alterations now contemplated.

FACING A CANDLE AND KEROSENE FAMINE

Residents of Dunellen and New Market are today facing a kerosene and candle famine as the result of a run on this material since the electric current has been cut off by the storm of Sunday last. The blizzard has completely cut off this municipality from the lighting current and at the present time there is no relief in sight.

Those who had heretofore relied on electric lights had to resort to kerosene lamps and those who could find no lamps after the supply had been exhausted in the villag stores resorted to candles. The supply of candles and the liquid fuel were quickly depleted ane one enterprising storekeeper braved the storm and went to New York where he purchasd 2,000 tallow candles and got big prices for them in his store.

A number of Dunellen storekeepers have made raids on local grocers and the supply held by Plainfield dealers is also fast depleting. The populace of New Market are also worrying about coal. Supplies in all of the yards are depleted and dealers are only selling in small lots and are depending upon the roads to clear up for further deliveries.

LIES COST HIM $5.

Because he lied to Judge DeMeza in the City Court, this morning, when arraigned on a charge of not cleaning his sidewalk, Nathan Lewis, of Liberty street, was fined $5. It has been the custom of the court to allow offenders to go with a reprimand on the first arraignment and Lewis would have received like treatment this morning if he could have been induced to tell the truth. The defendant was trapped in several lies during his examination.

POLICE AID IN ENFORCING LAW TO CLEAN SIDEWALKS

Co-operating with the local street department Police Chief Kiely has instructed his men to make arrests ordered by Street Commissioner Andrew J. Gavett, of those who have neglected to clear the snow from their sidewalks. It has been learned that many people have the idea that the city employes will clear the snow away if it is left on the walks and that it would be cheaper to have it done in this way.

The city holds no such agreements with property owners and individuals are responsible for having their sidewalks cleaned within two hours after the storm abates under penalty of arrest and a fine.

Lace Over Chiffon

The New Blouses of the Hour, $5

Paquin is shown a deep pleating which extends from shoulder to shoulder and which is very similar to ours on that Crepe de Chine blouse at $5. This is exquisite in the new peach tone, also in tango, flesh color and white.

Instead of the 'kerchief of net being on the outside, it is inset in the blouses of Crepon, for they simply had to have one of the new collars.

The new dancing blouses have chiffon sleeves whose armholes extend almost to the waistline, but otherwise they are of lace, lined with flesh-colored chiffon.

Blouses of Gay Printed Silk Crepe, $6.95

Fashion introduces black moire collars and cuffs on these blouses, for white would have paled richness of the silks.

750 New Suits for Young Women At $16.50 to $55---The Best of Their Kinds

Young girls in their teens are particularly fortunate this Spring, for the new styles are most appropriate for girlish figures. For this reason the Paris dressmakers have designed an almost unlimited number of styles with quaint puffs and ruffs, ruchings and frillings, draperies and tunics—and we have all of their notable models.

The new severely tailored suits are exceedingly good looking, especially those whose coats have the long waistline. In gabardine, serge, wool crepe, broadcloth, fancy worsteds and all the new silks.

Special---Three-Piece Suits of Silk Poplin $25

In a model that is composed of a charming dress, with bodice trimmed with lace and chiffon, and a petite coat. Gray, navy, brown and green.

SUPPORT OF U. S. ASKED BY DIAZ

Says He Will Overthrow Huerta if Recognized.

VILLA ASKS BIG RANSOM

Rebel Chief Has Threatened to Execute Young Terrazas Unless $500,000 Is Forthcoming Today—Captive Had Been Tortured Since He Was Taken.

Washington, March 6.—The most important development in the Mexican situation was the arrival in Washington of General Felix Diaz for the purpose of seeking light as to what the attitude of this government would be toward a movement which he proposes to launch to depose Huerta and make himself temporary ruler of the republic of Mexico. The nephew of the former president of Mexico has been in New York making plans to finance this new movement, which is to be a military one if undertaken.

General Felix Diaz hopes to be able to obtain the support of the United States for his latest plan. Diaz says he can bring about the downfall of the present Mexican government in thirty-six hours if the United States will promise to recognize him should his attempt prove successful. The senate committee on foreign relations will hear General Diaz in a few days.

Washington, March 6.—Secretary of State Bryan pleaded for nonpartisan support of the administration's Mexican policy. He frankly admitted that he cannot predict what the "watchful waiting" plan will bring forth, but expressed hope and confidence that a successful result would be attained. He said there was nothing imminent regarding intervention.

He told the house foreign affairs committee in secret session that he was confident that General Carranza of the Mexican Constitutionalists would recede from his present position and permit a full joint investigation by Great Britain and the United States of the death of William S. Benton, the Scotchman killed at General Villa's orders.

Bryan advised against discussion in congress of the Mexican situation. He vigorously opposed passage of the Ainey resolution requiring that the administration disclose all outrages against foreigners in Mexico and what steps have been taken and are being taken for their protection. The committee practically decided upon Bryan's request to "kill" the resolution.

Bryan was before the committee nearly an hour. He did not disclose a single new material fact regarding the Mexican situation. He discussed the Benton affair only incidentally.

To Hang Prisoner.

El Paso, Tex., March 6.—Luis Terrazas, Jr., who for many months has been held prisoner by the rebels at Chihuahua pending negotiations for ransom, has been given but a few hours to pay $500,000 to General Francisco Villa under pain of death.

Young Luis Terrazaz has been held a prisoner in Chihuahua by General Villa since his capture some months ago. At first he was detained as a prisoner in the municipal palace and his family was not permitted to visit him.

His father and a brother escaped to the United States and another brother to Mexico City. Six weeks ago Villa demanded of Terrazaz a payment of $1,900,000 to escape the death penalty imposed upon him as an active adherent of the Huerta government. The prisoner demurred and he was led out to be hanged.

His captors swung him up a few seconds and then let him down. When he had recovered his breath he agreed to meet the terms of the rebels as nearly as possible. He was able to get only $590,000 from the local banks in spite of the immense fortune in land, estimated to be nearly $800,000,000, belonging to his family.

AUTO PLUNGES FROM BRIDGE

Nashville, Tenn., March 6.—While trying out the new police emergency automobile, Emergency Officer W. L. Wright of the police department was killed and Chauffeur John T. Ryan received fatal injuries when the machine left a temporary bridge over the tracks of the Lewisburg and Northern railroad and fell a distance of over fifty feet.

The emergency man was learning to drive in the Franklin road when he choked down the car at the bridge. Ryan cranked it up and had no sooner resumed his seat when the plunge was taken by the car.

MRS. BUFFUM FILES APPEAL.

Murderess Says Court Erred In Admitting "Confession."

Buffalo, March 6.—Claiming the court erred in several particulars, notably in excluding an effort to show her "confession" to be false, counsel for Mrs. Cynthia Buffum has filed notice of appeal with the clerk of Cattaraugus county.

Mrs. Buffum is under sentence of death in the electric chair at Auburn for the murder of her husband, Willis Buffum of Little Valley.

These rugs are chosen rugs.

They are modern rugs. They will look finer after a few years of use than they do today, although they are fascinating now in their multitude of tones and designs, their browns and pinks and blues, their jewel-like medallions and vine-trailed fields of color.

The designs of the Hamadan Mossouls are Ferghans, Heratis, Serebends, Gullehenies, Kurdistans, Joshegans, Sarouks and medallions.

The Khiva-Bokharas have the deep, deep blues and reds that seem more wonderful every time one sees them.

The sizes range from about 4 ft. 10 in. x 3 ft. 4 in. to 9 ft. 3 in. x 4 feet.

The 738 Mossouls
$10, $12.50, $15, $17.50

INTEREST LAGGING IN JUNIOR TOURNEY

Plainfield Country Club About the Only Organization Willing to Hold Meet.

While rather lively agitation has been going on throughout the West in behalf of a junior championship, which would be national in scope, there is danger that the metropolitan junior event will go begging unless the local governing body displays more interest than heretofore.

Two years ago a championship competition for youths of nineteen years or less was sanctioned by the M. G. A. at the suggestion of Leighton Calkins, and as a result the Plainfield Country Club has run off the tournament each of the two years it has been in existence. A prominent member of the club said today that Plainfield may consent to handle the tournament for the third time, but it would be desirable to have some other club take hold of the management.

It is really considerably harder to run off the junior affair than an ordinary tournament of the open or invitation variety, for the reason that the usual clubhouse accommodations will not suffice. The boys must be taken care of in the homes of the members. For two years Plainfield showed conclusively that this can be done. If any club should try to run off the junior metropolitan championship by means of merely sending out programs, failure would almost certainly result. In the past the Plainfield officials got in touch with the parents so that the latter knew beforehand what their boys might expect while away. There was nothing taken for granted. Considerable expense is attached to holding an event of this kind especially in the entertainment provision. At both of the previous tournaments in Plainfield club furnished eight or ten prizes.

"Sportdom Tips"

The practise of announcing games to be played in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium by independent teams before first consulting the officials of the association is getting to be a nuisance and if it is not stopped someone is pretty likely to get into serious trouble as a consequence. Yesterday the managers of the North Plainfield and Plainfield High School feminine teams got together and decided to play the third and deciding game of the series in the association gym. They evidently took it for granted that the officials of the association would see fit to let them have the rendezvous for that occasion for they came out with a statement and complete details yesterday afternoon. It so happened on this occasion that the Y. M. C. A. had been previously engaged and some other date will have to be arranged for. This practise has been tried before but up to this time the Y. M. C. A. officials have been good enough to overlook the bad method of scheduling championship contests and in some instances have even gone so far as to put themselves out in order to accommodate those who think they can use the association at their own convenience without first consulting those at the head.

Now that the interscholastic basketball league has closed up its business for the season of 1914, we anticipate a lull in local sportdom circles until the diamond game assumes its place in the retinue of organized sport. During the five months, more than ever before, the popular indoor pastime has amused hundreds of sport followers and this year has witnessed one of the most profitable seasons in the history of the game locally. All of the contests have drawn well and we have yet to hear from a manager whose profits are not what he anticipated. Some of the best games ever staged in this city and the borough have been put on at different intervals this season and new confestants from all parts of the State and metropolis have been introduced to Queen City sportdom. Little remains before closing time to put the final edge on the season and between now and April we hope to see everything settled to the satisfaction of all corcerned. We are satisfied that North Plainfield is the best in the interscholastic league, but we are still reluctant to name the city and borough champion on real playing merits.

One of the best basketball games of the season is on the card for tomorrow night in the Y. M. C. A. gym, when the association players meet that All-Star outfit representing the interscholastic league. No better aggregation than this one could be herded together for a contest and the home team will have its work cut out tomorrow night. The selection of the five players has met with universal approvel and should they go down to defeat this fact would cause some real comment in local circles. It is safe to say that representatives of North Plainfield, Plainfield and Leals will be on hand to root for the benefit of the organization and where the Y. M. C. A. supporters will come from remains a mystery.

Another title yet remains to be decided before the summer winds begin to blow around these parts and that is the ice hockey series between the Cedarcroft and Cranford clubs. To date each team has won a contest and although Plainfield displayed a better winning game than did the visiting outfit, a third and rubber setto will be necessary before we are satisfied as to the real champion. Plainfield hockey enthusiasts have anticipated the playing of a third game on the local rink but if we aren't served up with some more cold weather there will be no ice on which to stage this all-important affair.

During the past couple of weeks our attention has been called to certain activities in a clique of North Plainfield High School students that is going a long way toward disrupting the present healthy athletic relations in that institution. Frequently, at athletic association meetings and in team elections, this group has come to the fore with a party ticket and in some cases leaders have not been elected on their real playing merits. The basketball situation this season has ended rather disastrously for some few substitutes as far as securing the good will of the regulars is concerned, for just this reason and unless something is done to break up the objectionable fraternity, matters are bound to come to a regretable crisis sooner or later.

Plainfield and North Plainfield High School feminine athletes have waived aside the jinx that is supposed to attach itself to "Friday the thirteenth" and the fair athletes have deliberately postponed their rubber game to this date on which all persons of a superstitious nature keep under cover.

Haven't heard any adverse criticism on that interscholastic all-star teams of ours yet. It must be that everyone is satisfied with the selection as made.

Plenty of pinning is going on at the present time in the Elks' Club and on the Knights of Columbus alleys. Never before in the history of the sport locally has wood splitting been such a popular diversion among Plainfielders.

Just as we predicted—another month will probably elapse between the playing of an interscholastic contest among the fair sex. It takes an awfully long time for these players to get over the effects of a conflict.

MAY NOT PLAY.

Although Manager Cottrel has a game scheduled with the Somerville High School five to be played by the Plainfield High School at the Somerset county town tomorrow afternoon, the contest will probably be called off as the Somervillians have disbanded for the season.

SCOTCH PLAINS' GAME.

Scotch Plains Parish House basketball tossers will lineup against the High Street Cadets tomorrow night. The High Street youths defeated Hope Chapel on the latter's court last week by a score of 43 to 37.

LEAL SCHOOL IN ACTION.

Members of the Leal School basketball team, of this city will go to Hackensack tomorrow afternoon, to lineup against the Newman School five of that place.

Sporting Editor:
Query—Is a raffle of tickets here against the law?—L. H.
Answer—A rafile in this State would be illegal.

Sporting Editor:
Query—When will the next examination for members of the police force be held? How many vacancies are there at the present time?—C. T.
Answer—It is understood that the next physical examination will be held tonight and if you have submitted your application you should have received notice of this. If you have not as yet submitted an application you had better get busy. There were originally seven vacancies to be filled, but it is understood that two of the first lot passed the required tests and there is now five.

Sporting Editor:
Query—A has a little pond on the side of the mountain which he has stocked with bass and trout and claims that he can take the fish from the pond by hook and line whenever he chooses. B says he cannot take them out of season. Who is right?—J. I. Y.
Answer—B is right. He cannot take trout or bass out of season even if the pond is owned by him and he has stocked it. The law covers the fish in whatever they may be, both as to size and time when they may be legally taken.

Sporting Editor:
Query—In 200 grams how many Troy ounces are there? In six metri liters how many quarts are there?—K. J.
Answer—One gram in the metric system equals 15,432 Troy grams. Therefore in 200 grams there are 5.43 Troy ounces.
As a metric liter equals 1.05675 quarts, in six liters there are 6.34 quarts.

DAME NATURE'S LIST OF ALL STAR PLAYERS

(By E. J. Lanigan.)

Picking star teams being a favorite occupation of the scribes and the fans during the off season, it is strange that on one has thus far tried to find out what Dame Nature's selections for an All-American outfit are. The Old Lady saw to it that the six players voted by the experts the most valuable to their teams and rewarded for their skill with Chalmers cars each should have been born in a different month. Tris Speaker reaching this sphere in April, Jake Daubert in May, Larry Doyle in July, Frank Schulte in September, Walter Johnson in November and Ty Cobb in December. In these months other star athletes were born, plenty, as a matter of fact, to equip six teams.

The Johnson club, made up of men whose birthdays are in the month given over to elections and turkeys, would have the choice of three leaders, either George Stallings, Clark Griffith or George Stovall. Johnson would have able assistants in the pitching staff in the persons of Bill Steen, Marty O'Toole and Joe Bush and two of the best pinch hitters in the world in Jack Lelivelt and Ham Hyatt who would form two-thirds of its outfield.

The Doyles, born in July, also could make a choice of managers, Joe Tinker, Charley Herzog and Johnny Evers having been born during that month. This team would have on it Joe Jackson to hit, Bob Bescher to run bases, Steve O'Neill Ivy Wingo, "Chief" Meyers and George Gibson to flag baserunners and a pair of southpaw pitchers in Leverenz and Hamilton to make life miserable for men who hit from the off side of the plate.

The Speakers, born in April, would be commanded either by John McGraw or Hugh Jennings. They would have a great pitching staff in Marquard, Hendrix, Ford, Scott and Gregg and a sturdy outfield in Speaker, Lewis and Crawford.

The Dauberts, born in May, would be without a leader, but either Jake or Eddie Collins could jump in and command with credit. Their twirlers would be of Class, Walsh, Chenery, Adams, McQuillan, Rixey and Bender, composing a sextette that would be as famous as "Florodora's." Three fourths of the infield—Daubert, Collins and Gardner—could hardly be improved on.

The Schultes, born in September, probably would be stronger at the bat than the Doyles, Speakers, Johnsons or Dauberts, such men as Ludrus, Lajoie, Konetchy, McInnis and Clarence Walker qualifying as members. Frank Chance would lead this team, which should have two consistent winners in Bert Humphries and Al Demaree.

The Cobbs, born in December, would be directed by Connie Mack and they would have a pretty fair pitching staff in Reulbach, Willie Mitchell Bob Shawkey and Fred Falkenberg. Tyrus' associates in the suburbs would be Mike Mitchell and Joe Birmingham.

The full make-up of the six teams is as follows:

Johnson's team, born in November—Manager, George Stallings, born November 17, 1867; Clark Griffith, born November 20, 1869, or George Stovall, born November 20, 1881. Pitchers, Walter Johnson, born November 6, 1887; Joe Bush, born November 27, 1892; Marty O'Toole, born November 27, 1888; Bill Steen, born November 11, 1887. Catcher Johnny Kling, born November 13, 1875. Infielders, Del Gainer, born November 10, 1886; Tommy Leach, born November 4, 1877; Rhody Wallace, born November 4, 1874; George McBride, born November 21, 1881. Walsh, born May 19, 1882. Catchers, Jimmy Archer, born May 13, 1883; Tom Clark, born May 9, 1888. Infielders Jake Daubert, born May 14, 1885; Eddie Collins, born May 2, 1887; Larry Gardner, born May 13, 1886; Ed. Grant, born May 21, 1883. Outfielders, "Rube" Oldring, born May 30, 1888; Vic Saier, born May 4, 1891; Jim Thorpe, born May 28, 1888.

Cobb's team, born in December—Manager, Connie Mack, born December 23, 1862. Pitchers, Ed Reulbach, born December 1, 1882; Willie Mitchell, born December 1, 1888; Bob Shawkey born December 1, 1890; Fred Falkenberg, born December 17, 1880. Catchers, Arthur Wilson, born December 11, 1885; John Henry, born December 28, 1888. Infielders, Fred Merkle, born December 20, 1888, Joe Bergen, born December 22, 1888; Maurice Rath, born December 25, 1887; Bobby Byrne, born December 31, 1885. Outfielders, Ty Cobb, born December 17, 1886; Mike Mitchell, born December 12, 1883; Joe Birmingham, born December 3, 1885.

Schulte's team, born in September—Manager, Frank Chance, born September 9, 1877. Pitchers, Arthur Fromme, born September 3, 1883; George Tahler, born September 3, 1889; George Wiltse, born September 8, 1880; Al Demaree, born September 8, 1886; Bob Groom, born September 12, 1884; Bert Humphries, born September 26, 1882. Catchers, Jack Lapp, born September 12, 1886; Napoleon Lajoie, born September 5, 1875; Charley Wagner, born September 23, 1881; Jack McInnis, born September 13, 1890. Outfielders, Frank Schulte, born September 17, 1882; Ed Konetchy, born September 13, 1885; Clarence Walker, born September 1, 1889.

Doyle's team, born in July—Manager, Joe Tinker, born July 27, 1880. Charley Herzog, born July 9, 1885, or Johnny Evers, born July 21, 1883. Pitchers, Jack Quinn, born July 5, 1884; Walter Leverenz, born July 21, 1888; Earl Hamilton, born July 19, 1892; Elmer Knetzer, born July 23, 1888. Catchers, Steven O'Neill, born July 6, 1891, Ivy Wingo, born July 8, 1890; John Meyers, born July 29, 1882; George Gibson, born July 22, 1880. Infielders, Harry Davis, born July 18, 1873; Larry Doyle, born July 31, 1886; Charley Herzog, born July 9, 1885; Johnny Evers, born July 21, 1883. Outfielders, Joe Jackson, born July 16, 1888, Ward Miller, born July 5, 1885, Bob Bescher, born July 25, 1886.

Speaker's team, born in April—Manager, John McGraw, born April 7, 1873, or Hugh Jennings, born April 2, 1870. Pitchers, "Rube" Marquard, born April 22, 1889; Jim Scott, born April 23, 1888; Claude Hendrix, born April 13, 1889; Russell Ford, born April 25, 1883; Vean Gregg, born April 13, 1885. INTERSCHOLASTIC LEAGUE'S ALL-STAR OUTFIT WILL OPPOSE Y. M. C. A. QUINTET

Plainfield basketball enthusiasts will be treated to a grand finale in the Y. M. C. A. gym, tomorrow night, when the Y. M. C. A. quintet will lineup against the All-Star interscholastic five as picked by The Daily Press sporting department. Agitation for a contest similar to this one has been rife all season and the issue will probably be one of the best drawing cards of the year.

The All-Star team is made up of the five best players in the lineups of the three schools represented in the league race and the fact that three of the players are members of the title winners gives additional interest to the affair. The Y. M. C. A. five has been idle for the past two weeks, as far as its regular schedule is concerned, but the association players expect to come back strong and give the rival aggregation a good run for victor's spoils.

Included in the All-Star lineup are Abrams and Rosenson, two of the best guards in this vicinity, who have made themselves conspicuous because of their all around ability. Dunning, without a doubt the peer of centers in this section of the State, will play the pivot position for the opposition and will have the husky Joe Gavett for his opponent. What Dunning will be able to do against this burly individual will furnish a little entertainment on the side. Rosenson, one of Plainfield's best shooting guards, will lineup against Moulton, the Y. M. C. A. sharpshooter, and the latter will have his hands full checking up the lithe little goal preventer. Abrams will play the other guard against McNamee.

"Poly" Love and Bill Peacock, the latter a former Y. M. C. A. man, will play the forward berths and will be guarded by Glover and Farmer respectively.

The teams will take the floor as follows:

Y. M. C. A.		ALL-STARS
Moulton	forward	Love
McNamee	forward	Peacock
Gavett	center	Dunning
Farmer	guard	Abrams
Glover	guard	Rosenson

EVOLUTION OF A BIG LEAGUE.

That the Federal League has at least succeeded in wiping the "tut, tut" or "pooh, pooh" expression from the major league baseball countenance is an admitted fact now.

Its progress, in the estimation of Organized Baseball, may be noted in the following answers that time and the outlaws' activity have put into the mouths of the "pillars of the trust" in reply to the question "What do you think of the Federal League?"

October 30—"Federal League? Seems to me I've heard of that somewhere!"
November 30—"Haw, haw! Are you falling for this outlaw league stuff, too? Did one EVER last?"
December 30—"The Federals are welcome to such old spavs and malcontents as jump to them."
January 15—"They'll never open their gates."
January 30—"It's not reasonable to suppose they can pay bigger salaries than we are giving, and survive against competition."
February 28—"We expect the court to sustain us in our contention that not one of all the stars stolen from us will be retained by the Federals."

IT'S DIFFERENT NOW.

At this rate of progress we may confidently look forward to receiving the following later replies on the dates named:

March 30—"The National and American Leagues will take the field with at least half of the stars with which they closed the 1913 season."
April 15—"There has arisen in Organized Baseball ranks a sentiment favorable toward the Federal League, which makes it entirely probable that it will be admitted to Organized Baseball circles next year."

STOLEN WAD HELPED FITZ TO BECOME A REAL FIGHTER

When Rob Fitzsimmons fought his first battle years ago in Australia a little incident occurred that helped him a great deal in later battles. At that time Fitz was a lanky and awkward youngster in the blacksmith trade with no particular ambition to become a fighter, but being known to be rather agile with his mitts he was matched in a prelim with another youngster and was to receive $7 for his work.

The fight went through with no great glory to either side, and afterward when Bob returned to his dressing room he discovered that $8 left in his trousers pocket was no longer there.

His first battle cost him an eve dollar, and he was so angry over the thing that he determined to be a fighter for life and avenge his loss on whomever opposed him in the ring. The thought of that stolen wad at his first fight in later fights put in him a rage that vented itself on his unlucky opponent.

NEVER KNEW HIS REAL NAME.

"Jack" Quinn, pitcher of the Boston National League club, has forwarded his signed contract to Manager Knabe, of the Baltimore Federals. He received $3,500 for signing and will receive $21,000 for the three years. He signed under his correct name, Picus.

OLD-TIMERS WILL GET TOGETHER TO PLAY INTERSCHOLASTIC ALL STAR PERFORMERS

During the early hours of this morning information leaked out, in some unknown way, of the formation of a team of "usterwus" basketball cracks who will challenge the All-Star interscholastic league quintet as selected by The Daily Press sporting department. So quietly have the old timers been carrying on their preliminary training that even the newspapers have been kept in ignorance of the plans that have been carefully mapped out. All of the limbering up has been done on foreign courts and the has-beens have had to flash good sized wads of greenbacks in some instances to have their "John Hancocks" kept out of the public spotlight.

Fearing that the announcement would have a disastrous effect on the All-Star crew, the old timers have been charitable enough to keep their doings under cover but now that the dope has leaked out they are willing to comment on what they are going to do to the younger generation. All of the players included in the comeback argument are basketball cranks of the thirty-second degree and have kept in trim through long years of wear and tear by furnishing vocal music from the gallerys where championship fights have been waged. Several of the warriors have sons performing on the courts and it is with a view to getting even with some of the youngsters that several of the "old men" have consented to once more don basketball togs.

A few of the present day artists who have been acquainted with the remarkable tidings have averred the opinion that some of the prospective performers will be looked for in vain when it comes time for the actual battling. Several are known to be pondering day and night and the problem which, when solved, will reveal the easiest position to play, while others are spending busy hours manufacturing some good armor that will protect their anatomy from twentieth century rough house tactics.

Bicycle knickerbockers, sported in years gone by, are being pulled from dusty holes in the attic and will serve as excellent regalia for the big event, for which no date has as yet been set, by the way.

The personnel of the regiment will include William L. Smalley and William Taylor as forwards; James A. Love, at center, and Warren Townley and Frank Burner as goal preventers. All of this quintet have sons active in athletics in the borough school and the youngsters are spending some time each day in coaching their dads in the sport that swells the athletic association's treasury in Canadian territory. Smalley and Taylor, as goal shooters, both expect to immortalize themselves in this department and have mastered the art of snuggling the sphere in the nets without the use of a step ladder.

For heighth Love could not be equalled as a pivot man and if his rival Dunning, ever gets the jump on him it will be little short of miraculous. The All-Star team will need a rope and some pretty long tackle to hoist Dunning above the reach of his opponent.

Townley and Burner, as guards, will stick around and hold the youngsters by the ears from start to finish, according to their own statements. Townley is recognized as "some runner," and can now travel so fast that the heels of his suction shoes play a tattoo on his basketball trousers. Burner is well known as a pedestrian and while a trifle slowed than his running partner, he will hang around the goal and take an occasional punch at the younger Love and one Bill Peacock. It is said that Townley will occasionally meander down the floor and take a shot once in a while at the ringed target.

The ancients claim that they know all there is to be known about the court game and no referee will be needed for the big affair. Should an official be chosen, however, it will be one with a wooden leg and a glass eye, who will not interfere with the speed of the contest.

The teams will face each other as follows:

ALL-STARS		ANCIENT 5
Peacock	forward	Smalley
Love	forward	Taylor
Dunning	center	Love
Abrams	guard	Townley
Rosenson	guard	Burner

VanArsdale, Milne

WALDORF'S PINNING WON A CLOSE SERIES

John Cose's Elks Are Nosed Out by Captain's Phenomenal Work.

Team No. 3, of the Elks' Club Bowling League, took two out of three of the league matches rolled with the aggregation captained by John Cose on the Watchung avenue alleys, last night, pulling ahead in the rubber match by a score of 790 to 683, after each quintet had annexed a battle. The initial setto was won by a margin of three pins by the Cose outfit and Waldorf's crew came back with colors flying and a eighty-two pin margin in the second.

Captain Waldorf's bowling was the real sensation of the evening along the high score line. He set up marks of 213, 204 and 223 in the three issues for an average of 213.1. Not a man on either side, with the exception of Waldorf, passed the double century mark.

The scores:

TEAM NO. 3—J. E. WALDORF, CAPTAIN.

C. Swalm	176	158	137
C. Dunham	132	130	122
J. Blimm	117	142	150
C. S. Woolston	156	153	158
J. E. Waldorf	213	204	223
	794	787	790

TEAM NO 8—J. H. COSE, CAPTAIN.

R. Gow	177	129	107
W. McCullough	150	133	155
F. Harold	154	133	155
E. Bennett	176	170	127
J. H. Cose	140	134	139
	797	705	683

Miss Dorothy Crane, recognized as one of the best feminine athletes in this section of the State, was presented with a silver loving cup at the assembly exercises in the Plainfield High School, this morning, significant of the tennis singles championship of the school which she captured last fall.

Miss Crane is a freshman in the High School and besides being a champion racquet wielder she is without an equal as a point scorer on the school basketball five and is also an adept at basketball. She is the first freshman in the history of the school to win the coveted honor.

ARRANGING TENNIS SCHEDULE.

Manager Harold Lounsbury, of the Plainfield High School tenis team, has arranged a tournament to be played with the Boys' High School team of New York, May 7. May 15 the local racquet wielders will oppose Montclair High School, and May 16 the Glen Ridge team is scheduled. East Orange High School will be played May 25.

ATHLETES GOOD SCHOLARS.

Scholarship reports for the months of January and February were issued in the Plainfield High School this morning, and returns show that every member of the school basketball team is up to the standard in class work and are eligible for further competition on the court.

NOT FRIDAY THE 13TH.

The date for the third and final interscholastic feminine contest has been changed from Friday the 13th to Tuesday next at 4:30 o'clock. Further details will be announced later.

P. H. S. GIRLS' GAME.

The feminine basketball team representing the Plainfield High School will play the Clifton Park High School team here tomorrow afternoon.

N. P. H. S. SECONDS TO PLAY.

The North Plainfield High School second team will lineup against the Oak A. C. colored team in Saengerbund Hall tonight at 8 o'clock

CAPTAIN SMALLEY GIVES HIS BATTERY MEN A TRIAL

With the basketball season closing today, Captain Ralph Smalley, of the North Plainfield High School baseball team, has started in earnest with the preliminary practice of the diamond squad. Yesterday afternoon in Saengerbund Hall he had the twirlers and the catchers out for a slight warming up. Four moundsmen reported, including George Townley, the mainstay of last season. Several of the infielders were also out and tossed the ball around. The following players reported yesterday: Pitchers, George Townley, Ernest Stahl, Daniel Denny and Oscar Dilts; catchers, Edson Day and Malcolm Marsh.

With other members of the team, Smalley has been scouting around for a good coach and has a few in view including Fred Becker, an old High School star, who coached the championship team of 1911. Becker made no final statement when sounded on the subject but expressed a willingness to take the position and if a financial agreement can be arranged between him and the Athletic Association, he will probably be signed up as coach. Manager Beckman's schedule calls for the opening game one month from last Wednesday, when the team from the Roselle High School will appear on Hyde Oval.

WITH THE BOXERS

Paris fight fans are all worked up over the so-called championship battle between Jack Johnson and Frank Moran.

Guarantees to boxers are a thing of the past in New Haven. The promoters of a recent boxing show in that city split the fancy sum of six dollars among them after the guarantees were paid.

FEMININE CONTEST.

The North Plainfield High School girls' basketball team will play on Saengerbund Hall court tomorrow afternoon, when the team from Perth Amboy will appear here. This will be the second game of the season between these teams, the first one resulting in a two point victory for the Sproughites. The locals will probably be without the services of Lucy Douglas, the centre, and her place will be filled by Bertha Kellar.

BASEBALL NOTES

It is said that George Simmons, the Rochester second baseman, who led the International League in batting last season, has jumped to the Baltimore Federals.

Manager McGraw has written home to the effect that the world trip has made a star ball player out of Jim Thorpe, the celebrated Indian athlete now with the Giants.

Johnny Evers is beginning to think that his $20,000 bonus to sign with the Boston Braves may turn out to have been nothing more than a dream.

Jack Barry, shortstop of the Philadelphia champions, started training some time ago by indulging in daily practice in the baseball gymnasium at Holy Cross College.

What's this The Springfield Three-I League baseball club scheduled to play exhibition games with the St. Louis Federals. More trouble for organized baseball.

Toledo capitalists, headed by Roger Bresnahan, of the Chicago Cubs, are making an effort to purchase the Toledo franchise in the American Association.

Clark Griffith has placed the Federal League in the firecracker class. Meaning that the new outfit will explode on or about the Fourth of July.

The illness of "Smoky Joe" Wood and the hold-out proclivities of Tristram Speaker, have put the Boston Red Sox in the nine hole right at the start of the training season.

The opening of the International League season has been set back almost a week. The league race started April 16 last year, but will not get under way until April 21 this year.

Hank Ramsey, manager of the Troy team of the New York State League, claims to be the oldest baseball manager in point of continuous service. Hank has been piloting minor league teams for nineteen years.

Upon arriving at Hot Springs, Pitcher Kelly, a Red Sox rookie from Spokane, registered at the Sox's hotel as "Mr. Edward Kelly, member of the World's Champions of 1912."

Harry Wolter claims the New York Yankees put the bee on him when they sold him to Los Angeles. The former New York gardener says Los Angeles has offered him only fifty per cent. of what he received in salary last season.

The Crandall brothers, Otis and Carl, will probably work for rival clubs in the same city this season. The Indianapolis Federals claim Otis, while Carl has signed with the Indianapolis American Association team.

POLITICAL NOTES

Five candidates are contesting for the governorship in Alabama.

Three hundred cities and towns of Illinois are to vote on the liquor question next month.

The Republican State ticket in Maine will be selected at a convention to be held in Augusta on April 9.

On April 7 the voters of New York will decide whether a convention shall be held to frame a new State constitution.

Twenty-three amendments, initiative and referendum measures will be voted on at the California election in November.

Congressman J. Thomas Heflin is the only Alabama representative who has no opposition for re-election in the primaries next month.

A special election will be held in the Seventh district of New Jersey on April 7 to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Congressman Bremner.

Former Governor Myron T. Herrick, now ambassador at Paris, is mentioned as a possible candidate for governor of Ohio on the Republican ticket this year.

Lieutenant Governor Barratt O'Hara, of Illinois, is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for United States senator to succeed Lawrence Y. Sherman, Republican.

Socialists of North Dakota met in Grand Forks recently and nominated a full State ticket to be submitted to the voters at the general primaries to be held in June.

A. Caminetti, United States Commissioner General of Immigration, may decide to enter the contest for the Democratic nomination in the Second Congressional district of Nebraska by James C. Dahlman, the mayor of Omaha.

Michigan Democrats will renominate Governor Woodbridge N. Ferris, who is the first representative of their party to occupy the executive office in more than twenty years.

It is reported that the purpose of Theodore Douglas Robinson in going to Europe is to meet Col. Roosevelt and consult with him concerning the political situation in New York. Mr. Robinson is a nephew of the former President and chairman of the New York Progressive State Committee.

Two candidates are in the field for the Republican nomination for governor of Michigan this year. They are Alexander J. Groesbeck, chairman of the State Committee, and Frederick C. Martindale, present secretary of State and a defeated candidate for the gubernatorial nomination two years ago.

Jeremiah D. Botkin, warden of the Kansas State Penitentiary, is a candidate for the United States senate on the Democratic ticket. Senator Bristow seeks re-election and Charles Curtis, former senator, is contesting with him for the Republican nomination. Congressman Victor Murdock, of the Eighth district, is the choice of the Progressive party for the senatorship.

"Little Jack," the photo-play in three reels, presented at Proctor's theatre, yesterday, made a hit. It will be shown today and tomorrow. Today's program will include "All For His Sake," "The Story of David Greig," "The Money Lender," "The Rival Barbers." Tomorrow will be shown the Mutual Weekly; Pathe's production of "Orphans," "The Field Foreman," "Bunny's Birthday," "Little Billy," "City Cousin," "A Midnight Alarm." The second run of the thrilling "Fantomas" series will be on Monday.

"Boost" for PLAINFIELD

The Business Men's Association, of Plainfield, was formed with but one idea: "Boosting" for Plainfield, There isn't a city in the East that offers better opportunities in almost every line than Plainfield---and every "live wire" in Plainfield is aware of this fact.

Buy from Plainfield Merchants

If you believe in Plainfield; if the town is good enuf for you to live in; if you want to spend your earnings to the best advantage---buy from Plainfield merchants---patronize the local craftsmen and mechanics---men whom you know---people who are always ready to see that you get a "square deal." Plainfield is a real live city—progressive—growing—solid—and backed by an Association that means to DO things. Will you join us?

A LITTLE BIT OF SILK

The possibilities of a yard of silk—as a turban, as a toga, a tunic, an opera cloak and similar feminine necessities—is dexterously exhibited by a young English girl, Moya Mannering, in an English musical comedy, "The Marriage Market," now running in London and Boston. Miss Mannering makes her entrance wearing what seems to be a neat turban, which she continues to wear while singing a song concerned with the virtues of "A Little Bit of Silk." Then, with a sudden twist of her head covering, Miss Mannering is suddenly gowned in Grecian style, though only for a second, for with another unfolding of the little bit of silk she next appears in short skirts. And so the changes go on until at the end one's inclination is to ask why any woman should need a better gown than a little bit of silk.

High Bridge-Califon.

Sessions were resumed Wednesday at the High Bridge borough schools.

Owing to the illness of the principal, Miss Stella Crammer, there are no sessions this week in the principal's room of the Califon school.

After a stay at the home of Mrs. Mark Helms, near Teetertown, Mr. and Mrs. William Hart returned Wednesday to Stephensburg.

The Women's Christian Temperance Union will meet tomorrow afternoon at the home of Mrs. Philip R. George, Parsonage Heights, Califon.

Richard L. Beaty, of Schooley's Mountain, has taken title to the Trimmer property at Middle Valley and will occupy the premises the last of the month.

An examination for rural delivery mail carrier will be held March 14 at High Bridge.

JACOB AUGUST RIIS.

Journalist and Friend of Roosevelt Critically Ill.

Jacob A. Riis suffered a relapse in New Orleans and is in a critical condition. He had abandoned a lecture tour and had intended leaving for Battle Creek. His illness is said to be caused by heart trouble and complications. He issued an interview last night predicting that Colonel Roosevelt would be elected president in 1916.

REAR ADMIRAL VREELAND.

Ranking Officer to Retire on Account of His Age.

Charles Edward Vreeland, ranking rear admiral of the navy and ranking member of the navy general and joint boards next to Admiral Dewey, will retire March 10. Secretary of the Navy Daniels has announced. Vreeland's retirement is on account of age. Rear Admiral Vreeland was born in New Jersey March 10, 1852, and served as a drummer boy in the volunteer navy during the civil war, later being appointed to the Naval academy.

BASEBALL MAGNATES GATHER IN NEW YORK

Federal League Announces New Pittsburgh Backer.

New York, March 6.—James A. Gilmore, president of the Federal Baseball league, announced that the majority stock in the Pittsburgh club has been purchased from William A. Kerr by E. W. Gwinner, a Pittsburgh banker.

"Now that Mr. Gwinner has joined our ranks," said Mr. Gilmore, "we are financially stronger than the National and American leagues and we have men with sufficient capital to meet any emergency. If organized baseball wants war we are prepared to fight."

Federal league men met here for a series of conferences that will have an important bearing upon the legal attitude the "outlaws" will assume against organized baseball. Mr. Gilmore and Edward G. Gates established headquarters at the Waldorf and were joined later by George Stovall, manager of the Kansas City club; Larry Schalfy, manager of the Buffalo team and Mordecai Brown, who will have charge of the St. Louis outfit.

In accordance with the request sent to President Gilmore by James E. Gaffney of the Boston National league club and William F. Baker, head of the Philadelphia Nationals, these three and Mr. Gates, the "Feds'" counsel, met to discuss the cases of Seaton and Jack Quinn, pitchers, who jumped from the Philadelphia and Boston teams, respectively, after accepting terms and signed with the Federals. Nothing definite was done.

The Chicago Cubs will be sold late today unless all plans go astray. The buyer will be Charles H. Weeghman, backer of the Chicago Federals, or any other man connected with the Federal league movement. Whatever may have been in the wind from that quarter was cast aside definitely as a result of the baseball happenings of yesterday.

POLICE ROUT I. W. W.; MORE ARE ARRESTED

New York, March 6.—Police Commissioner McKay stopped the open air meetings the Industrial Workers of the World had been conducting in Rutgers square. Ten policemen were stationed there to stop all demonstrations. Two orators who defied the police were arrested. One gave his name as Darwin W. Meserole, a prominent Brooklyn lawyer; the other, Theodore Freeman, boasted of being an I. W. W. agitator.

Frank Tannenbaum, leader of Thursday night's demonstration against St. Alphonsus' church, was arraigned before Magistrate Campbell, who raised his bail from $5,000 to $7,500. In default Tannenbaum spent another night in jail. He is charged with the felony of inciting to riot.

Tannenbaum's 190 followers were herded in an improvised pen in No. 300 Mulberry street—old police headquarters. Only one man was put on trial and his case was not finished. Pending the outcome in that action the whole crowd was remanded to jail.

They spent the night in different jails—overcrowding the court lockups to such an extent it has been suggested that Ludlow street jail temporarily be turned into a detention place for them.

After a week of triumph after compelling hospitality from churches, after refusals to work, after open defiance of the police the series of disasters that overtook the "army" yesterday fell with stunning force on those who are allied with the I. W. W.

Even "Chowder" O'Brien, the bull shouldered young man who lost his health just outside the danger line on Wednesday night, had not recovered sufficiently to rally the demoralized "army." James Strong Hamilton and others who are recognized with O'Brien as leaders of the I. W. W., tamely submitted to being pushed by rough policemen into ankle deep slush.

TO TRY HASSETT MARCH 18.

Motion Granted For Special Panel of a Hundred Talesmen.

New York, March 6.—Justice Seabury granted the motion of District Attorney Whitman for a special panel of a hundred talesmen from which will be drawn a jury to try Thomas Hassett, the former confidential agent of State Engineer John A. Bensel, who has been indicted for attempting to obtain $50,000 under false pretenses from Anthony C. Douglass, an aqueduct contractor. The trial will begin on March 18.

State Engineer Bensel left for Albany. At his office the story that process servers for the assembly graft investigating committee had been unable to find him was regarded lightly. It was said that he came to town on Wednesday from Bernardsville, N. J., after having been snowed in since last Saturday.

The John Doe inquiry will go on. Several title searchers and appraisers of aqueduct property have been subpoenaed.

SNOW BREAKS FALL.

Delirious Patient Jumps From Window at Gouverneur Hospital.

New York, March 6.—While delirious as a result of taking ether for an operation Michael Hysosle, thirty-two years old, a laborer, living at 114 Orchard street, jumped from the window of a fourth floor ward at Gouverneur hospital. He landed in a snow pile on the sidewalk facing Gouverneur slip, and when he was dug out it was found he had broken his left ankle.

BIG FORCE AT WORK.

Fifty additional linemen were brought here from Buffalo, N. Y., today to assist in the repair work being carried on by the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company. There is a large amount of work to be done in this vicinity and the force now in charge numbers nearly four hundred.

SPEAKER CONTRASTED OLD AND NEW SYSTEMS

Those Who Attended "People's Forum" Heard Interesting Lecture.

A small, but appreciative audience, attended the second meeting of the "People's Forum" held in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium, last night, when Professor H. O. Overstreet of the College of the City of New York, described "An Out-Worn System of Political Philosophy." The speaker at last night's meeting read a lengthy treatise on the subject dealing with the conditions as they exist today and contrasting them with those of a quarter of a century ago. He forcefully presented the needs of the present day government and outlined the underlying causes for political progress.

He stated the view a citizen takes of political despotism in the Twentieth Century and told of the work carried on in the reform movement by great politicians during the last decade. The speaker showed a thorough familiarity with the subject and kept the audience interested throughout. He described the "inside" parts of the mechanism of the country's government and dwelt at length on the work accomplished by each individual in his particular line of endeavor.

Each Day Marks the Arrival of More Fine Suits, Coats and Dresses For Women

We take pleasure in announcing the most complete individual style exhibit—the new Spring modes—that this store has ever been able to present so early in the season.

Fashion's favored modes in suits, coats, dresses, frocks and evening costumes are in splendid readiness. Individuality is the keynote of the new Hahne women's shops—individuality is stamped on every garment, combined with the Hahne standard of quality and prices that are decidedly interesting

Grand Promenade of Fashion

Tomorrow, between the hours of 10:30 and 12:30 a. m., and 2:30 and 4:30 p. m.

Music by a string orchestra.

An exposition in advance of the formal Spring opening, illustrating all that is newest in gowns, street costumes and dresses—shown on living models, thus giving a better idea of the correct manner in which the gowns should be worn, and how they will appear. Including some original creations and adaptations from the leading dressmakers of the world.

Drecoll, Charlotte, Bearnard, Braunstein,
Jenny, Lager, Poiret, Paquin
Callot, Cherut, Premet, Doucet.

A Wedding Procession, including the Bride, Bridegroom, Bridesmaids and Flower Girls, in correct costumes, will be one of the features of the promenade.

The knowledge that women who desire to be, and are well gowned, must show an individuality in dress has placed us in a position to develop these ideas along these lines and enabled us to make a selection of wearing apparel that will meet the requirements of any woman or miss—large or small, young or elderly.

A choice collection of the new things—ready-to-wear with an individuality—awaits your approval—an exhibit to which you are cordially invited should you desire to purchase or not. The prices range from $10 up to $75.

AN INTERESTING GROUP OF TAILORED SUITS AT $10.

Strictly men tailored suits—made from a good quality of worsted serge, in navy and black. The coat is two-buttoned cutaway front, with a notched collar and revers. Finished with white pique piping, with the new French back, and lined with peau de cygne. The skirt is the new gored model with the fancy panel front.

Two hundred more of those pretty Cotton Crepe One-piece Dresses have just arrived. Each dress is draped with choice combinations in colorings, made in pannier effect with all-bound seams, and have net collars and cuffs with lace insertions. The sleeves are cut in the popular kimono style and piped with contrasting colors.

HAHNE & CO. - - NEWARK

Here is the Blizzard Edition of the Daily Press, published Monday Night, which caused so much comment

PLAINFIELD DAILY PRESS

PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY, MONDAY, MARCH 2, 1914.

WORST STORM IN 26 YEARS PARALYZES WIDE AREA

Grim destruction rode upon the wings of the icy gale, which all of yesterday, last night and in the early hours of today swept New Jersey and the entire eastern section of the country. It was a battle of the elements. The might of the titanic forces of the storm gods—the wind, the snow and hail—contended for supremacy with the handiwork of man and won the far from equal struggle. Statewide the spoils of triumph of the storm gods can be viewed today.

The snow was swirled into huge drifts by an 80-mile gale which raged almost continuously for many hours. The low temperature of last night and the icy sleet which froze upon telephone and telegraph wires, added to the rigors of the night.

All public utilities, the telegraph, telephones and electric light wires and trolleys were paralyzed by the great storm. It was, in the opinion of railroad men rswoe even than the famous blizzard of March 12, 1888. The havoc is far greater. For the most part all of the telegraph poles along the line of the Central Railroad of New Jersey are prostrate. Wires are a tangled mass of wreckage. Poles were blown down, in some cases actually uprooted by the force of the gale and others were snapped in two. The wires curved sinuously about railroad cars, and twisted in every conceivable shape for miles, were encrusted with ice. In many cases the ice coated wires caused the breaking of the poles. There are about 2,000 telephones out of service in Plainfield today. The entire electric lighting system here and hereabouts is out of commission. No coal can be moved. Milk is at a premium among householders. Train schedules are a thing of the past. Plainfield, for the most part, is isolated from the rest of the world so far as transportation and other communication is concerned. The Western Union is forwarding its messages by train service which is irregular. The first train to reach the city from New York arrived about noon today. It was the first sent out since 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

The storm, it is feared, will cause great suffering among the poor. No trolley cars moved a wheel in Plainfield today, nor will for several days. It will be fully as long before lighting service will be restored. Lamps and candles are in great demand. Some streets are impassable.

The street department is utterly unable to cope with the task of clearing the streets today.

Two slight fires have occurred. The home of Robert Kenney, on West Third street, caught fire last night through the crossing of electric wires. The other was a chimney fire today, at 321 East Front street. Both were extinguished with little trouble by the firemen.

Every telegraph, telephone and electric light pole is down on South avenue, between Berkman street and Woodland avenue. Traffic is impossible on many thoroughfares because of tangled wires and fallen poles. Many windows of stores and houses have been broken.

Scores of Plainfield people were marooned in the railroad station in Jersey City all night. The food supplies of the lunch room were soon exhausted. It was a hungry crowd that reached home at about noon today.

Mary Elizabeth, wife of Rev. Levi U. Moyer, died yesterday. She was 63 years old.

Inability to get power to drive linotypes or press made it impossible to publish a regular edition of the Daily Press today. The Public Service Corporation give no assurance that power will be available before Wednesday or Thursday and until such time the local papers will have to be much condensed.

Arrangements have been made by which we can procure type to set a larger paper by hand tomorrow night, in case the power is not available by that time.

MRS. ISRAEL GODHUE

Mrs. Israel Goddue, aged about 65 years, formerly of West Fourth Street and Grant Avenne, died yesterday near Flemington, where she had been living for a few years.

FUNERAL OF SYLVANUS B. KEEN

Funeral services over the remains of the late Sylvanus B. Keen were held this afternoon at his late residence, at 414 New Street. Rev. F. L. Green, of Hope Chapel, conducted the services.

THE PLAINFIELD THEATRE

"The Spendthrift," by Porter Emerson Browne, is a dramatic brief against extravagance, and yet every night there rolled up, in front of the Hudson Theatre, New York, where it played for six months, nearly half a million dollars worth of automobiles bringing their owners to listen to the play's telling argument for economy—which is pretty good evidence that "The Spendthrift" appeals to that class of playgoers who are so financially fixed as to be possible beneficiaries of the lesson of the drama. The play will be seen here tomorrow, afternoon and evening.

The poet says "Music hath charms," but what would that poet have said had he heard the dainty, tuneful members of "The Red Widow," the late Astor Theatre, New York, success that is to be offered at the Plainfield Theatre, Tuesday night, March 10. This attraction, farthered by a triology of authors, Channing Pollock, Rennold Wolf and Charles Gebest, led all the metropolitan successes last season and its presentation here we are told will be on the same scale of magnificence, with all the wealth of scenic embellishments and dainty gowning and dressings that pleased the visual senses of its metropolitan beholders. The song numbers, some twenty, are said to be exquisite in their lyrics and the music accompaniments we are told offer the most tuneful melodies of this season. Of course, the story of the play abounds in comedy sensations that will be found teaming in laughter and the large company, said to number nearly three-score personages, will no doubt make the most of the talented authors' conceptions and dictions.

NEW BRUNSWICK STANDPIPE.

New Brunswick, March 6.—Common Council will be asked Tuesday night by the water commissioners for leave to engage an engineer to submit plans and an estimate for the construction of a standpipe. The present one is insufficient to meet demands. It is thought that with another standpipe the insurance rates will be lowered. The cost may be about $20,000.

RICHARD SCUDDER'S FUNERAL.

The funeral of the late Richard Scudder will be held tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock, at 200 West Second street. The services will be in charge of Rev. Mr. Bailey.

NEEDLEWORK

By MARGARET LAWRENCE

A CENTERPIECE IN LAZY-DAISY-STITCH AND FRENCH KNOTS

This effective centerpiece may be very quickly embroidered as it is worked in the easy lazy-daisy-stitch and large French dots with coarse mercerized cotton or rope silk. The pattern, 14468, is 22-inches in diameter and may be stamped on white linen, if it is to be used in the dining-room, or on brown, green, yellow or blue if it is to be used as a doily mat or under a jardiniere in the hall or living-room [illegible] to be used in the dining-room, it should be worked entirely in white, using No. 20 mercerized cotton for the scalloped edge and stems with No. 12 for the leaves and French knots. On light green linen it is effective with the leaves worked in dark green and the berries in blue or purple, while on natural colored linen it may be worked in red and green.

Practical Fashion Hints

By Alice Gibson

7254 - 14133 - 14134

For the Bride's Underwear.

Perhaps you are planning to make sets of embroidered underwear, and if you have looked longingly at the beautiful, French hand-made garments in the department stores, feeling that the price was too high for a limited purse, you can nevertheless have lingerie quite as dainty and fine and exclusive if you can find time to make it yourself. The material may be batiste, Nainsook, handkerchief linen or very fine long cloth, which, by the way, is the most serviceable. You need not spend any money for lace as the embroidery is the only finish necessary, and this can be done at practically no expense as the working cotton and transfer patterns, for the entire set can be purchased for very little. The design for embroidering a chemise 14133 can be used on a slip-over chemise, combination, corset-cover and drawers, on corset-cover and petticoat. The border 14134 used for finishing the bottom is 4 inches wide and includes 2¼ yards. This is appropriate for trimming a chemise, drawers or long petticoat. If you wish a night gown pattern to match this set order No. 14463.

The cutting patterns for making underwear are so simple that the most inexperienced home dressmaker need not hesitate to use them. The chemise illustrated may be cut with pattern 7254, which can be supplied at 10 cents.

This Is a Perfect Pattern.

Guaranteed, hot iron transfer patterns 14133, 14134 and 14463 can be supplied to readers on receipt of price, 15 cents each. Fill out the coupon and inclose stamps or coin to the Pattern Department of this paper.

Some Cookery Suggestions

MODEL MINCEMEATS.

MINCEMEAT should be made, if possible, several weeks before it is to be used. A little ripening improves it. In households where brandy or sherry is prohibited cider may be used instead. Mincemeat that contains too much suet or butter is indigestible. Too much spice is also unwholesome.

The best of puff paste is essential for the success of mince pies. Deep pie plates should be filled with the crust, then the mincemeat may be added and a lattice work of the puff paste arranged across the top. The pies should be baked in an oven which is uniformly hot.

An Old Fashioned Kind.

Grandma's Mincemeat.—Take two pounds of lean boiled beef chopped fine, a pound of beef suet reduced to a powder, two pounds of halved and seeded raisins, five pounds of peeled and chopped apples, two pounds of cleaned and washed currants and three-quarters of a pound of minced citron. Mix these together and add two tablespoonfuls each of mace and cinnamon, one tablespoonful each of cloves and allspice, a teaspoonful of ground nutmeg, a tablespoonful of salt and two pounds and a half of brown sugar. Mix these well together; then add a quart of sherry and a pint of brandy. Mix well and place in a covered stone crock to keep.

Vegetable Mincemeat.

Green Tomato Mincemeat.—If you can get green tomatoes the following is an economical way to make mincemeat: Take one peck of green tomatoes, chopped fine, four pounds of brown sugar and boil these for three hours. Twenty minutes before removing from the stove add one cupful of boiled cider, two tablespoonfuls of cinnamon, one tablespoonful each of allspice and cloves, with nutmeg to taste, and two teaspoonfuls of salt.

Carrot Mincemeat.—Take eight pounds of carrots, wash, scrape, clean and boil until tender, changing the water when half cooked. Rub the carrots through a coarse sieve. Put into a pan with three pounds of sugar, glassful of orange marmalade or the rind and juice of two oranges, the rind and juice of three to five lemons and two cupfuls of cider. Cook slowly until thick, then add four pounds of chopped raisins, two tablespoonfuls of cinnamon, one tablespoonful each of allspice, cloves, mace and grated nutmeg, one tablespoonful of salt, half a teaspoonful of ginger, one cupful of blanched and chopped almonds and a few drops of almond essence.

Daddy's Bedtime Story — Why the Shamrock Is Worn on St. Patrick's Day.

The Idol Turned to Dust.

"DADDY, why does every one wear a shamrock on St. Patrick's day?" asked Evelyn. "Today I saw a parade. They had bands and ever so many people marching. Leading the parade were a lot of little girls wearing green frocks. They all carried small harps, on which they were playing lovely Irish songs, and every one wore a piece of shamrock."

"You see," said daddy, "the shamrock is very much like a small clover. Its leaf was used by the Irish patron St. Patrick when explaining his religious beliefs to the Irish people. So that ever since then the Irish people have loved to wear the Irish shamrock on St. Patrick's day. There have been many poems and songs written about the shamrock and the wearing of the green.

"It is said the shamrock keeps away the snakes which St. Patrick drove out of Ireland, for they cannot live and thrive where the shamrock grows.

"There is a legend about St. Patrick which I think I'll have to tell you.

"What are said to be St. Patrick's footprints can be seen on the rocks off the shore by the Skerries harbor. The story goes that once a chieftain named Dichu drew his sword to strike St. Patrick. When he was about to do this cruel deed his own arm became perfectly stiff until he said he'd be obedient to St. Patrick. Then St. Patrick taught him to be good and kind.

"St. Patrick was a very simple man in his tastes. He wore very plain clothing and spent his time either helping people and preaching to them or in praying.

"Still another interesting story is that of the idol worshipers. St. Patrick went into the place where these people were and found them worshiping the idols. There was a huge pillar of stone with the chief idol on top of it. It was covered with slabs of gold and silver, and around it in a circle were twelve other idols. St. Patrick smote the chief idol with his crozier, and the idol crumbled to dust at once. Then the other idols fell to the ground.

"St. Patrick traveled about Ireland a great deal, going hither and thither converting the people and teaching them. He was a very hard worker and did a great deal of good for all people.

"The Irish have never forgotten all this, and so it is no wonder that they are proud of their saint and that on St. Patrick's day they like to celebrate it to his memory.

"The parade which you saw was interesting, wasn't it, children?"

"Yes, indeed," said the children.

"And, daddy," said Jack, "the Irish music was so lovely."

WOULD STOP LAW BREAKERS.

Trenton, March 6.—Seeking the co-operations of the Motor Vehicle Department in enforcing the federal statute prohibiting autoists from starting their engines on ferry boats before they are docked, N. L. Cullin, general agent of the associated marine department, New York, has communicated with Job H. Lippincott, of the motor vehicle department. The letter stated that a number of autoists holding New Jersey licenses were violating the law. Commissioner Lippincott informed Mr. Cullin that his department was doing everything in its power to stop the practice. It was suggested by Mr. Lippincott that the marine department issue a public statement which will notify the autoists as to the provisions of the statute.

The Abysmal Brute

By JACK LONDON

Copyright, 1913, by The Century Co.

PROLOGUE.

Few authors living today have the force and directness, the rugged strength and vitality of style of Jack London. This new novel is one of his best. It is a story of the prize ring, a real man's story, big and vigorous and thrilling. Behind the tense life, the excitement of the fight itself, one can see in reading it the crookedness, the devious ways of the keen witted men who stage the big fight and reap the profits. More than this, one can see into the soul of the Abysmal Brute himself, one of the strangest, most human and fascinating characters London has ever drawn, a bruiser who is a scholar as well, who is honest and clean and innocent up to the moment of his disillusionment—a veritable cross section of a strange phase of American life.

CHAPTER I.

SAM STUBENER ran through his mail carelessly and rapidly. As became a manager of prize fighters, he was accustomed to a various and bizarre correspondence. Every crank, sport, near sport and reformer seemed to have ideas to impart to him.

From dire threats against his life to milder threats, such as pushing in the front of his face, from rabbit foot fetishes to lucky horseshoes, from dinky jerkwater bids to the quarter of a million offers of irresponsible nobodies, he knew the whole run of the surprise portion of his mail. In his time having received a razor strop made from the skin of a lynched negro and a finger, withered and sun dried, cut from the body of a white man found in Death valley, he was of the opinion that never again would the postman bring him anything that could startle him.

But this morning he opened a letter that he read a second time, put away in his pocket and took out for a third reading. It was postmarked from some unheard of postoffice in Siskiyou county, and it ran:

Dear Sam—You don't know me, except my reputation. You come after my time, and I've been out of the game a long time. But, take it from me, I ain't been asleep. I've followed the whole game, and I've followed you from the time Kai Aufman knocked you out of your last handling of Nat Belson, and I take it you're the niftiest thing in the line of managers that ever came down the pike.

I got a proposition for you. I got the greatest unknown that ever happened. This ain't con. It's the straight goods. What do you think of a husky that tips the scales at 220 pounds fighting weight, is twenty-two years old and can hit a kick twice as hard as my best ever?

That's him, my boy, Young Pat Glendon, that's the name he'll fight under. I've planned it all out. Now, the best thing you can do is hit the first train and come up here.

I bred him, and I trained him. All that I ever had in my head I've hammered into his. And maybe you won't believe it, but he's added to it. He's a born fighter. He's a wonder at time and distance. He just knows to the second and the inch, and he don't have to think about it at all. His six inch jolt is more the real sleep medicine than the full arm swing of most geezers.

Talk about the hope of the white race. This is him. Come and take a peep. When you was managing Jeffries you was crazy about hunting.

Come along and I'll give you some real hunting and fishing that will make your moving picture winnings look like 30 cents. I'll send Young Pat out with you. I ain't able to get around. That's why I'm sending for you.

I was going to manage him myself, but it ain't no use. I'm all in and likely to pass out any time. So get a move on. I want you to manage him. There's a fortune in it for both of you, but I want to draw up the contract. Yours truly,

PAT GLENDON.

Stubener was puzzled. It seemed, on the face of it, a joke—the men in the fighting game were notorious jokers—and he tried to discern the fine hand of Corbett or the big friendly paw of Fitzsimmons in the screed before him. But if it were genuine, he knew it was worth looking into.

Pat Glendon was before his time, though, as a cub, he had once seen Old Pat spar at the benefit for Jack Dempsey. Even then he was called "Old" Pat and had been out of the ring for years. He had antedated Sullivan in the old London prize ring rules, though his last fading battles had been put up under the incoming Marquis of Queensberry rules.

What ring follower did not know of Pat Glendon?—though few were alive who had seen him in his prime, and there were not many more who had seen him at all.

Yet his name had come down in the history of the ring, and no sporting writer's lexicon was complete without it. His fame was paradoxical.

No man was honored higher, and yet he had never attained championship honors. He had been unfortunate and had been known as the unlucky fighter.

Four times he all but won the heavyweight championship, and each time he had deserved to win it. There was the time on the barge, in San Francisco bay, when, at the moment he had the championship going, he snapped his own forearm, and on the island in the Thames, sloshing about in six inches of rising tide, he broke a leg at a similar stage in a winning fight. In Texas, too, there was the never to be forgotten day when the police broke in just as he had his man going in all certainty.

And finally, there was the fight in the Mechanics' pavilion in San Francisco, when he was secretly jobbed from the first by a gun fighting bad man of a referee backed by a small syndicate of bettors. Pat Glendon had had no accidents in that fight, but when he had knocked his man cold with a right to the jaw and a left to the solar plexus, the referee calmly disqualified him for fouling. Every ringside witness, every sporting expert, and the whole sporting world knew there had been no foul.

Yet, like all fighters, Pat Glendon had agreed to abide by the decision of the referee. Pat abided and accepted it as in keeping with the rest of his bad luck.

This was Pat Glendon. What bothered Stubener was whether or not Pat had written the letter. He carried it downtown with him.

"What's become of Pat Glendon?" Such was his greeting to all sports that morning. Nobody seemed to know. Some thought he must be dead, but none knew positively. The fight editor of a morning daily looked up the records and was able to state that his death had not been noted. It was from Tim Donovan that he got a clew.

"Sure an' he ain't dead," said Donovan. "How could that be—a man of his make that never boozed or blew himself? He made money and, what's more, he saved it and invested it. Didn't he have three saloons at one time? An' wasn't he makin' slathers of money with them when he sold out?

"Now that I'm thinkin', that was the last time I laid eyes on him—when he sold them out. 'T was all of twenty years and more ago. His wife had just died. I met him headin' for the ferry. 'Where away, old sport?' says I. 'It's me for the woods,' says he. 'I've quit. Goodby, Tim, me boy.' And I've never seen him from that day to this. Of course he ain't dead."

"You say when his wife died—did he have any children?" Stubener queried.

"One, a little baby. He was luggin' it in his arms that very day."

"Was it a boy?"

"How should I be knowin'?"

It was then that Sam Stubener

The Fight Editor Was Able to State That His Death Had Not Been Noted.

reached a decision, and that night found him in a Pullman speeding toward the wilds of northern California.

Stubener was dropped off the overland at Deer Lick in the early morning, and he kicked his heels for an hour before the saloon opened its doors.

No, the saloon keeper didn't know anything about Pat Glendon, had never heard of him, and if he was in that part of the country he must be out beyond somewhere. Neither had the one hanger on ever heard of Pat Glendon.

At the hotel the same ignorance obtained, and it was not until the storekeeper and postmaster opened up that Stubener struck the trail. Oh, yes; Pat Glendon lived out beyond. You took the stage at Alpine, which was forty miles and which was a logging camp. From Alpine, on horseback, you rode up Antelope valley and crossed the divide to Bear creek. Pat Glendon lived somewhere beyond that. The people of Alpine would know.

Yes, there was a young Pat. The storekeeper had seen him. He had been into Deer Lick two years back. Old Pat had not put in an appearance for five years. He bought his supplies at the store and always paid by check, and he was a white haired strange old man. That was all the storekeeper knew, but the folks at Alpine could give him final directions.

It looked good to Stubener. Beyond doubt there was a young Pat Glendon, as well as an old one, living out beyond.

That night the manager spent at the logging camp of Alpine, and early the following morning he rode a mountain cayuse up Antelope valley. He rode over the divide and down Bear creek. He rode all day through the wildest, roughest country he had ever seen, and at sunset turned up Pinto valley on a trail so stiff and narrow that more than once he elected to get off and walk.

It was 11 o'clock when he dismounted before a log cabin and was greeted by the baying of two huge deerhounds. Then Pat Glendon opened the door, fell on his neck and took him in.

"I knew ye'd come, Sam, me boy," said Pat, the while he limped about, building a fire, boiling coffee and frying a bear steak. "The young un ain't home the night. We was gettin' short of meat, and he went out about sundown to pick up a deer. But I'll say no more. Wait till ye see him. He'll be home in the morn, and then you can try him out. There's the gloves. But wait till ye see him.

"As for me, I'm finished. Eighty-one come next January an' pretty good for an ex-bruiser. But I never wasted meself, Sam, nor kept late hours an' burned the candle at all ends. I had a dashed good candle an' made the most of it, as you'll grant at lookin' at me. And I've taught the same to the young un. What do you think of a lad of twenty-two that's never had a drink in his life nor tasted tobacco? That's him.

"He's a giant, and he's lived natural all his days. Wait till he takes you out after deer. He'll break your heart travelin' light, him a-carryin' the outfit and a big buck deer belike. He's a child of the open air an' winter nor summer has he slept under a roof. The open for him, as I taught him.

"The one thing that worries me is how he'll take to sleepin' in houses an' how he'll stand the tobacco smoke in the ring. 'Tis a terrible thing, that smoke, when you're fighting hard an' gaspin' for air. But no more, Sam, me boy. You're tired an' sure should be sleepin'. Wait till you see him, that's all. Wait till you see him."

But the garrulousness of age was on old Pat, and it was long before he permitted Stubener's eyes to close.

"He can run a deer down with his own legs, that young un," he broke out again. "'Tis the dandy trainin' for the lungs, the hunter's life. He don't know much of else, though he's read a few books at times an' poetry stuff. He's just plain pure natural, as you'll see when you clap eyes on him. He's got the old Irish strong in him.

"Sometimes, the way he moons about, it's thinkin' strong I am that he believes in the fairies and such like. He's a nature lover if ever there was one, an' he's afeard of cities. He's read about them, but the biggest he was ever in was Deer Lick. He misliked the many people, and his report was that they'd stand weedin' out. That was two years agone—the first and the last time he's seen a locomotive and a train of cars.

"Sometimes it's wrong I'm thinkin' I am, bringin' him up a natural. It's given him wind and stamina and the strength of wild bulls. No city grown man can have a look-in against him. I'm willin' to grant that Jeffries at his best could 'a' worried the young un a bit, but only a bit. The young un could 'a' broke him like a straw. An' he don't look it. That's the everlasting wonder of it. He's only a fine seeming young husky; but it's the quality of his muscle that's different. But wait till ye see him, that's all.

"A strange liking the boy has for posies, an' little meadows, a bit of pine with the moon beyond, windy sunsets or the sun o' morns from the top of old Baldy. An' he has a hankerin' for the drawin' o' pitchers of things, an' of spouting about 'Lucifer on night' from the poetry books he got from the red headed school teacher.

"But 'tis only his youngness. He'll settle down to the game once we get him started, but watch out for grouches when it first comes to livin' in a city for him."

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

Take a Glass of Salts to Flush Kidneys if Bladder Bothers You.

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

Unfavorable Comment Passed by Some Leaders.

O'GORMAN LEADS MUTINY

Construe President Latest Message as a Bid For Great Britain's Friendship. New York Senator Says He Withholds Approval With Regret.

Washington, March 6.—It has become apparent here that President Wilson's appeal for legislation repealing the tolls exemption clause of the Panama canal act has failed to impress the Democratic party in congress on this issue.

Such important leaders as Chairman Underwood of the ways and means committee, Chairman Doremus of the Democratic congressional committee, Chairman Fitzgerald of the house appropriations committee, Senator O'Gorman of the senate foreign relations committee and possibly Speaker Clark are still standing out against the repeal and will oppose it.

The first evidence of the sharp break that the president is likely to have with some members of the party on this question was indicated in a formal statement by Senator O'Gorman in which he charged in effect the action proposed by the president is an effort to purchase Great Britain's friendship."

Mr. O'Gorman's Statement.

Senator O'Gorman's statement follows:

"I yield to no one in respect for the president's motives of patriotism and I withhold my approval of his recommendation with regret. Believing his proposal unwise, unnecessary and destructive of the best interests of the American people, my duty as a senator of the United States offers me no alternative but resistence to the proposed repeal.

"Ex-President Taft, Philander C. Knox, ex-secretary of state; Oscar W. Underwood, Democratic leader in the house of representatives, and Richard Olney, ex-secretary of state in Mr. Cleveland's administration, have asserted that in their opinion the exemption of coastwise vessels from the payment of tolls in the Panama canal does not violate the Hay-Pauncefote treaty.

"These gentlemen are lawyers of recognized ability and the president does not express an opinion to the contrary. He asserts, however, that no one outside of the United States defends our course.

"If he will read the London Law Record he will learn that even English lawyers have conceded that the tolls exemption is in harmony with our treaty obligations. German and other continental writers have expressed the same view.

"Moreover, this opinion is shared by ex-President Roosevelt, during whose administration the Hay-Pauncefote treaty was framed and adopted. The president now states that the tolls exemption constitutes a mistaken economic policy, but I prefer to accept his judgment announced when he was a candidate for the presidency, when he pointed out the obvious economic advantages of this legislation.

"The platform of the Democratic party as well as the platform of the Progressive party declared that American ships engaged in coastwise trade should pay no tolls to the end that cheap transportation by water will enforce cheaper transportation by the competing transcontinental railroads."

PLEA FOR RAILROADS' RIGHTS

President Loree Asks Exemption From Interlocking Directorates.

Washington, March 6.—President L. F. Loree of the Delaware and Hudson railroad told the house judiciary committee they should exempt railroads from operation of the proposed interlocking directorates bill.

President Loree held that checks upon such organization might tend to lessen the roads' ability to gain the confidence of capitalists from whom they sought to borrow money, might cripple the roads and would cause infinite confusion.

"It is our duty to guard well against any injury to the corporate method of management," the railroad head told the committee, "unless abandonment of the present system of private ownership of property is contemplated."

UNDERWOOD SILENT ON TOLLS

Democratic House Leader Refuses to Comment on Message.

Washington, March 6.—Democratic Leader Underwood of the house would not comment on the president's address. He said that a party caucus on the question was not likely and that he would reserve his comment until he makes a speech on the subject. He indicated plainly that he is in complete disagreement with the president "on the facts of the case."

Chairman Adamson of the interstate commerce committee said:

"The message pleases me because it is a square thing at home and abroad, especially at home. The charge that we are surrendering to Great Britain is false. We will now repeal that piece of rascality."

You Help in Rendering Good Telephone Service

THERE are three important factors necessary in rendering good telephone service:

1. The Party who is calling.
2. The Telephone Operator.
3. You.

When a customer desires to reach you by telephone, and the operator finds that your telephone is busy, she is obliged to report: "Line's busy." It is her way of saying: "His telephone door is closed." She has done her part; the person calling has done h.

You can help in rendering good telephone service by providing telephone facilities adequate to prevent frequent "Busy" reports.

Upon request we shall be glad to furnish a record showing the number of times your line has been reported "Busy" and recommend the facilities necessary in order to KEEP YOUR TELEPHONE DOOR OPEN AT ALL TIMES.

WATER COMPANY LOSES ITS APPEAL

Paterson Dyeing Firm Awarded $22,000 Damages.

UPHELD BY SUPREME COURT

Decision Is Important In View of Agitation to Have State Water Supply Commission Take Over Plant of East Jersey Water Company—Officials Make Offer.

Paterson, N. J., March 6.—In an opinion handed down the New Jersey supreme court refuses to set aside the verdict for $22,000 damages obtained by the Weidmann Silk Dyeing company against the East Jersey Water company for diversion of the waters of the Passaic river. The water company contended that it was within its rights because the diversion of the water had gone on for a long term of years. The court refused to uphold this contention.

The decision is important in view of the agitation to have the state water supply commission take over the entire plant of the East Jersey Water company at a price to include recognition and payment for certain rights of diversion claimed by the East Jersey and its subsidiary companies which supply water to Paterson, Passaic, Nutley, Montclair, Kearny, the Oranges and half a dozen other municipalities.

The East Jersey officials have offered to turn over their plant, estimated to be worth about $9,000,000 or $10,000,000, to the state water supply commission and the dozen municipalities interested without the payment of a cent, but the municipalities are to meet the company's outstanding bonds amounting to $7,500,000 and also to take the bonds of the company for $1,300,000 which they will have to raise as a fund for maintenance and operation the day they start in the water business for themselves.

The Weidmann company has obtained judgment for $22,000 against the Jersey City Water company and one against the city of Newark for $17,000 in suits similar to that decided. No report has yet been made on the appeals of these companies.

5,000 ARE IDLE IN PATERSON.

Figures Are Compiled For Mrs. J. Borden Harriman.

Paterson, N. J., March 6.—Paterson has an army of 5,000 unemployed men, according to figures compiled by John McCutcheon, secretary to Mayor Robert H. Fordyce, for Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, who is a member of the commission of industrial relations. Secretary McCutcheon estimates that 1,800 men in the building trades, 2,000 dyers' helpers and 700 laborers are idle.

The severe winter, together with depression in the building trades, is given as the reason for the 1,800 unemployed carpenters, masons, plumbers, bricklay and ironworkers.

Negro Kidnaped by Burglar Intends to Leave Summit.

Summit, N. J., March 6.—Unable to stand the gibes of his friends, Russell Bland, the negro chauffeur who was kidnaped with Patrolman George recently by a burglar, is going to quit Summit forever. He has notified his employer, G. Howard Escher, that he will leave next week, saying he "would be bugs if the fellows didn't stop kidding."

Patrolman George continues on duty, although a crowd of young men now and then ask him if his mother knows he's out and "Where's your nurse?"

Innkeeper and Family Safe on Nearby Farm.

Oakland, N. J., March 6.—A. N. Allen, proprietor of the Brookside inn, which was burned on Sunday night during the height of the storm, and his wife and mother are safe.

It was feared they had perished, but they escaped from the burning building and took refuge in the Gass farm, some distance away. Brookside inn was at Campgaw.

BRIEF STATE NOTES.

The first license in West Hudson for a Chinese marriage was issued at Harrison. The bride to be is Miss Ching Sing, twenty years old, of Harrison, and the bridegroom is Fong Ching, twenty-seven years old, of Manhattan.

William A. Galligby and John H. Cain, two Hoboken hackmen, were sentenced in Jersey City to not less than ten years nor more than thirty for assaulting and robbing Mrs. Nora Dillon, a widow living at Oradell, last Christmas night.

A committee of the Central Presbyterian congregation of Montclair has been empowered to have plans drawn for a new church. The congregation was formed by the union of the First and Trinity Presbyterian societies about six months ago.

Despondency over the death of his mother, the illness of his sister and the fact that he had been making little money as a brakeman caused Charles Crisbell, twenty-two years old, to end his life at his boarding house in Weehawken by taking poison.

NOSTRILS AND HEAD STOPPED UP FROM COLD? TRY MY CATARRH BALM

Instantly Clears Air Passages; You Breathe Freely; Dull Headache Goes; Nasty Catarrhal Discharge Stops.

Get a small bottle anyway, just to try it. Apply a little in the nostrils and instantly your clogged nose and stopped-up air passages of the head will open; you will breathe freely; dullness and headache disappear. By morning the catarrh, cold-in-head or catarrhal sore throat will be gone.

End such misery now! Get the small bottle of "Ely's Cream Balm" at any drug store. This sweet, fragrant balm dissolves by the heat of the nostrils; penetrates and heals the inflamed, swollen membrane which lines the nose, head and throat; clears the air passages; stops nasty discharges and a feeling of cleansing, soothing relief comes immediately.

Don't lay awake tonight struggling for breath, with head stuffed; nostrils closed, hawking and blowing. Catarrh or a cold, with its running nose, foul mucous dropping into the throat, and raw dryness is distressing but truly needless.

Put your faith—just once—in "Ely's Cream Balm" and your cold or catarrh will surely disappear.—Adv.

WHITMAN REFUSES TO AID THE GUNMEN
Relatives of Doomed Men Plead In Vain.

New York, March 6.—Jacob Rosenberg, father of "Lefty Louie;" Michael Horowitz, father of "Gyp the Blood," and Miss Antoinetta Cirofici, sister of "Dago Frank," stood before District Attorney Whitman and heard him say reluctantly that no reason had been presented to him why he should join in any application for clemency for the men sentenced to die in the electric chair April 13 for the murder of Herman Rosenthal. The two fathers and sister, supplemented by the plea of Charles G. F. Wahle, counsel for the gunmen, had prayed Mr. Whitman to join in a petition for a reprieve at least.

All asserted their belief that the men in the death house had not done the actual shooting and that sooner or later witnesses would be found to prove that some other men did it. Rosenberg, the father of "Lefty," had seen his son Monday; so had Horowitz and Miss Cirofici. Only "Whitey" Lewis appeared to be without relatives. The boys had declared they could not change their testimony even to save themselves. They had not done the shooting. They were told that clemency now is for the governor to exercise.

Mr. Whitman announced at the same time that it will be necessary for some of the witnesses who are to testify at the second trial of Charles Becker to go to the death house and make new identifications of the four men. They will go some time around April 1, but it was not said how many will go nor on what date. The witnesses will be taken up to Sing Sing and will be escorted to the place by Warden Clancy. It is not possible for Mr. Whitman to have them brought to New York as witnesses.

HOME RULE BILL UP AGAIN.
Twice Rejected Irish Measure is Once More Before Commons.

London, March 6.—The Irish home rule bill, twice passed by the house of commons and as often rejected by the house of lords, was introduced for first reading in parliament by Augustine Birrell, chief secretary for Ireland. The debate on the bill will come up on Monday with the second reading.

If home rule is enacted a third time by the commons it will become law by virtue of the veto act despite the rejection of the lords.

"In the minds of physicians and nurses, who see every day the administration of anaesthetics, such stories only excite mirth," says the Journal.

INCREASE PAY OF BORO POLICE

After April 1 the Marshals Will Receive $5 More a Month.

SEWER APPROPRIATION

Borough Council Sets Aside $5,000 Toward Purchase of Darling Farm If Deal Goes Through—Numerous Reports Received.

As the result of the recent agitation to increase the salaries of the members of the police force a resolution was adopted at the March meeting of the Borough Council, last night, which provides for an increase of $5 a month in the salaries of men in all classes. Under this new agreement, which will take effect April 1, the chief will receive a monthly wage of $90, roundsmen will get $80, marshals will receive $75 after the second year of service and $70 during the first.

Charles Dolliver, the borough clerk, was appointed by Mayor Robert Clark, Jr., to act as secretary to the borough sanitary sewerage committee at an annual salary of $250. This was done at the suggestion of William J. Butfield. As was the case last year, the Plainfield Trap Rock Company was the only bidder for furnishing crushed stone and the bid, which was practically the same as that of last year, was accepted.

L. R. Coddington, of Somerville, through Sheriff Charles P. Sebring, appealed to the borough to have the assessment made on some property of which he was the owner at one time, satisfactorily adjusted. Since the commissioners assessed the property in question, Mr. Coddington has disposed of the land to the Union County Investment Company and upon the acknowledgement of that company the assessment was transferred from Mr. Coddington's bill. He claimed to have been assessed for 53.46 feet to a 153.46 foot strip that does not belong to him at the present time.

Ex-Sheriff Frank Mobus appeared at the meeting and wanted to know whether the section of Watchung avenue which had recently undergone repairs at the hands of the street department had been passed by the borough engineer, and when answered in the affirmative he intimated that the job had not been satisfactorily completed and did not come up to the specifications. The street commissioner reported favorably on the matter, however, and the street was accepted by the Council although the contention was that it still remained unfinished.

During the month is was necessary to expend $261.71 for street work and with this sum the street commissioner and his force of helpers have kept the thoroughfares and walks in a satisfactory condition during one of the most trying periods of the year. The expenses for the police department during February amounted to $430.96.

The Council authorized the payment of $200 to Fred Becker on the poor account. A petition was received from the residents of Greenbrook road living between Duer street and Somerset street, requesting that something be done immediately in that section toward improving the present drainage conditions along Stony Brook. This work will be continued and made satisfactory as soon as sufficient funds can be secured by the borough officials for the work. The citizens' commmittee of the borough Parent-Teacher Association, of which Mrs. Herbert E. Parker is chairman, submitted an invitation to member of the Council to be present at an open meeting to be held in the Somerset street school next Tuesday night.

During the month $262.42 was expended by the fire and water committee. The Council authorized the drawing of a warrant for $5,000 for the payment of the borough's share in the purchase of the Darling farm in the event of the passage of this resolution at the joint sewerage disposal meeting to be held tonight. A total of $705.39 was expended by the borough during February, and the Council last night order $70 to be paid to Donald McLean for work during a recent sewerage hearing at Trenton.

COMPLETE TWENTY FIVE YEARS' SERVICE

Crescent Avenue Church Mission Society Honors Two of Its Officers.

The annual meeting of the Women's Home Missionary Society of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, held in the chapel, yesterday afternoon, was marked by two incidents of unusual interest. Mrs. I. C. Pierson, the president, and Mrs. Henry R. Halloway, secretary of literature, completed a quarter of a century of service in their respective offices, and suitable recognition was made of the event by the members of the society.

Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, pastor of the church, on behalf of the society, presented to Mrs. Pierson a handsome solid silver service, and to Mrs. Halloway also a silver service of a different design. The presentations were a complete surprise to the recipients. Dr. Zelie referred in an appropriate way to the long and faithful service of Mrs. Pierson and Mrs. Halloway, adding that the success of the society was due in no small measure to their untiring efforts. They both made a happy response, thanking their fellow-members.

Mrs. Pierson accepted a re-election to her office, but Mrs. Halloway declined. The officers for the coming year are as follows: President, Mrs. I. C. Pearson; vice president, Mrs. William E. Honeyman and Mrs. Townsend Rushmore; secretary, Mrs. Eugene H. Hatch; treasurer, Mrs. W. W. Myers; secretary of literature, Mrs. Frederick Conlin.

The reports showed that the society has a membership of two hundred and that during the past year there was raised for missions, $1,000. The annual meeting of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society will be held Tuesday afternoon, March 10.

BORO STREET DEPARTMENT WILL GET NEW EQUIPMENT

In the anticipation of the coming of spring and the need for adequate equipment to keep the borough roads in condition, the North Plainfield Council, at is meeting last night, authorized the purchase of a new Studebaker sprinkling wagon of the most approved type. The new sprinkler will cost the municipality $285 and will be delivered sometime within the next month.

At the present time the borough owns two sprinkling carts but both are sadly in need of repairs and will have to undergo a thorough overhauling before being used again. One of the wagons will be converted into a dump cart for the borough's use. The Council authorized the expenditure of $75 for repairs to the best of the two wagons now in use. Bids for the latter will be received at the next meeting.

"THE COLORED PREACHER AND SOLOMON" HIS THEME

Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong will preach at the First Baptist church tomorrow, morning and evening, as usual. The morning topic will be a somewhat peculiar one, "The Colored Preacher and Solomon," the text being suggested by a humorous story recently told Dr. Strong. A negro clergyman as he closed the Bible concluded his discourse with the following words: "Brederin, dar am no use talkin'," which statement he repeated several times, finally declaring with utmost impressiveness, "Brederin, dar am no use talkin', what is to be, was;" unconsciously quoting a statement of the learned King of Israel, from which statement the pastor will preach a sermon of special interest and, he believes, helpfulness.

C. E. MEETING MARCH 17.

The annual supper and conference of the Union County Christian Endeavor fresh air department will be held in the Roselle Baptist church, Tuesday evening, March 17. The conference and business meeting will begin at 8 o'clock. After postponement from the first date, March 3, it was decided to hold the meeting March 10, but this had been found impossible, and March 17 was finally chosen for the meeting.

These cards may be obtained by application to the company.

THE TEMPERATURE.

The temperature report from The State Trust Company today is as follows: 9 a. m., 33 degrees; 11 a. m., 36 degrees; 12:30 p. m., 37 degrees.

CONTEST FOR RUNKLE MILLIONS

Brother Holds That the Will Offered is Not the Last One.

LARGE SUM INVOLVED

Several Charitable Institutions May Lose Bequests—Question About Shreds of Paper Raised at First Day's Hearing.

Several religious, charitable and educational institutions may lose bequests as a result of the contest over the $2,000,000 will of William Runkle, of Orange, which began in Newark, yesterday, before Judge William P. Martin. The amount involved is the largest ever at stake in the Orphans Court. Harry G. Runkle, of this city, a brother of the testator, brought the action. He is the only living relative.

No ground for the contest is mentioned by Mr. Runkle in his caveat, but he believes that his brother made a later will. There is a bequest of $100,000 to Lafayette College in the document now attacked. Other beneficiaries are the Board of Home and Foreign Missions, the American Sunday-school Association, the college board of the Presbyterian Church, several Presbyterian churches, the Orange Memorial Hospital, St. Mary's Hospital in Orange, the Orange Homeopathic Hospital and the Children's Aid Society of the Oranges.

Ex-Gov. John W. Griggs, who represents the contestant, pointed out at the opening of the case that when the will was offered for probate there were shreds of paper beneath metal clasps that held the pages of the document together. These shreds, the lawyer said, showed conclusively that the first page was not part of the will.

When the will was admitted as evidence yesterday there were no shreds of paper under the clasps. Miss Ray V. Gluck, stenographer in the surrogate's office, who copied the will, testified that she removed the clasps, but did not notice any shreds of paper. She said that when the will was offered for probate all the pages with the exception of the first were held together with metal clasps and that the first page was in no way attached to the rest of the document.

John A. Burkhardt, receiving teller of the First National Bank, of Orange, and Charles Hasler, the bank's assistant cashier, who witnessed the will, testified that they signed it in the directors' room at the bank. They said that Mr. Runkle saw them sign it, but they read no part of the will except the last page. They said they did not know what it contained. They identified their signatures and Mr. Runkle's. They further testified that they later signed a codicil to the will, but did not read that document and did not see Mr. Runkle sign it.

Robert H. McCarter, who appeared as one of many lawyers for the beneciaries, offered the will in evidence After the witnesses had been heard Judge Martin fixed April 2, 3 and 6 as dates for the hearings.

Under the provisions of the will Mr. Runkle is to receive one-fourth of the estate. The rest is left to charities and friends.

SEVEN PATIENTS RECEIVED AT BONNIE BURN SANITORIUM

The report of Dr. J. E. Runnells, superintendent of Bonnie Burn, for the month of February, shows that seven patients were received at the sanitorium, five men and two women. One was an incipient case, two were moderately advanced, three far advanced and one suffered from bone tuberculosis.

There were eleven discharged and seven deaths. The largest number present during the month has been 81, the smallest number 76 and the daily average, 78.7.

MRS. SAMUEL CARTER SUCCEEDS MRS. F. G. MEAD

The Plainfield Auxiliary of the McAll Association at its annual meeting this week elected these officers: President, Mrs. Samuel Carter, succeeding Mrs. Frederick G. Mead, who was unable to continue in the office; vice-president, Mrs. Isaac L. Miller; treasurer, Mrs. John G. Foster; secretary, Miss Ethel Millar. The reports were all encouraging. Mrs. James Speer, of Montclair, made an interesting address on the work of the association.

LESSONS FROM THE STORM.

"Wind and Storm Fulfilling His Word," will be the subject of Rev. C. H. Mallery's sermon at the Church of the Heavenly Rest, tomorrow morning.

SNEAK THIEVES BUSY AMONG LOCAL STORES

Sneak thieves have been operating with marked success in this city during the past few nights, carrying on their looting in the business section of the town and selecting small stores as favorite places. While a majority of the cases reported to the local police were in the east end of town, several stores in the central portion of the city were looted last night and small articles taken.

It is the supposition of the police that the thieves are local characters and that they are after money. Thursday night two Netherwood stores were entered and last night four petty burglaries were reported. Wadley & Goodenough's coal office on Madison avenue was broken into and an overcoat valued at $25 taken. S. S. Sharkey's grocery store on Richmond street, and a butcher shop owned by James McCarthy, situated next to Sharkey's, was also broken into. In both places a quantity of eatables were taken and $4.60 was taken from McCarthy's cash register. Philip Mechanic's bicycle store at 325 Park avenue was entered but nothing was taken from the place.

Detective-Sergeant Flynn and Sergeant Higgins are working on the cases today.

BROKE BEER BOTTLE ON BROTHER'S HEAD

McGrath Boys Have Bedroom Argument and One Goes to Hospital.

William McGrath, a young man living with his parents at 664 South Second street, was removed to Muhlenberg Hospital at 2 o'clock this morning, suffering from scalp wounds and loss of blood, the result of a "friendly" argument at his home. He retired early last night in a peaceful frame of mind and when roused from slumber by the noisy entrance of his brother a couple of hours later he was not genially disposed. The brother, James, on the contrary, was quite facetious and got off a lot of fool stuff that only increased William's anger. He finally hopped out of bed to cuff the intruder, not noticing that he was armed with a life-size beer bottle. James seemed to know just how to use it and playfully tapped the brother all over his dome. The bottle broke in the midst of the melee but James continued to use it as a pole trimmer plies his adze. When he finally desisted William was hors de combat on the floor.

The parents of the brother yelled for the police and Patrolman George Muir responded. As the officer entered the house by the front, James left by the rear door. He has not been seen since, but is being sought. The injured man was taken to police headquarters and from there to the hospital. At the latter place at noon today it was said that he was very weak from loss of blood, but would be all right in a day or two.

MANY ENJOYED NOVEL MAPLE SUGAR PARTY

Dr. H. V. Hubbard Describes the Process Used in the Manufacture of Product.

Dr. H. V. Hubbard, of Central avenue, a native of Vermont, gave an interesting stereopticon lecture to a large audience assembled in the parish house of the Congregational church, last night, the affair being called a "Sugaring-off." The speaker described the methods of taking the sap from the large sugar maples of that State and views were thrown on the screen illustrating the lumber industry so typical of that section of the country.

A number of pictures were shown of the huge trees of the Vermont forests and the scenes in the wooded districts of the granite stone State. The manufacture of maple sugar and other products from the tree sap was described by the lecturer in an interesting way.

Following the lecture the guests were served with maple syrup on snow which had been boiled to the right consistency while the lecture was in progress. The syrup used in the boiling process was sent here from Vermont by Dr. Hubbard's mother.

MISS JOHNSON HEIR TO $25,000

But She Must Marry Within a Year to Get the Money.

WILL SEEK A PARTNER

Windfall Comes to Plainfield Woman Through Death of an Uncle in Sweden—Unless She Weds Bequest Goes to Brother.

Provided she marries within one year, Miss Alma A. Johnson, a domestic in the employ of a local family, will receive $25,000 that was left to her recently in a bequest by her uncle, Gustav Waling, of Stockholm, Sweden. The news of the windfall came to Miss Johnson this morning, as a pleasant surprise and she immediately set out in search of a life partner. Although it does not happen to be leap year, Miss Johnson is confident of fulfilling the terms of the will and expects to come into possession of the money within the next couple of months.

If the local young woman fails to comply with her uncle's last wishes she will be cut-off without a cent and the entire bequest will go to her brother, August Lenus Johnson, of San Francisco. Miss Johnson is a native of Sweden and came to this country some years ago, settling in Plainfield, where she has lived since. She has no definite plans for the future, owing to the fact that her sudden good fortune has taken her completely by surprise.

Miss Johnson has been a resident of Plainfield for several years, coming here from her native home in Sweden. She has always been a favorite niece of her uncle, it is said, and since coming to this country letters have frequently been exchanged. Owing to the fact that the uncle had been ill, Miss Johnson missed the accustomed letters, and the first intimation of his death and her fortune was received in the letter which was received today.

NORMAL CONDITIONS BEING RESTORED

P. S. C. and Telephone Company Rapidly Recovering From Recent Storm.

General conditions about this city and vicinity, following the storm, are greatly improved today, although the residential section is still without house and street lights, and there are still a great many telephones out of commission. Large gangs are being employed by both utilities in an effort to restore normal conditions. The trolley cars are now running on schedule time again.

Street Commissioner A. J. Gavett has been having his troubles. With a large gang of men, horses and carts, determined efforts are being made to remove the surplus snow and ice from the principal streets and crosswalks, while property-owners have been given timely warning as to what will happen in case they fail to comply with the law.

Except in cases where gas is available for illuminating purposes it is doubtful whether church services will be held tomorrow, owing to the fact that the electric light is still cut-off. The Public Service Corporation is doing all in its power to restore this service at the earliest possible moment.

Under the auspices of Mrs. Lucie E. Rising's three Bible classes of the First Baptist Bible School, a pleasing social and entertainment was held last night at the home of Arthur M. Harris, of Central avenue, superintendent of the school. The general subject was "Religious Art," and through the exhibition of a large number of fine pictures of art by means of a sterescope, the relation of art to religion was emphasized. Mrs. Rising directed the exhibition, explaining the pictures.

After the entertainment there was a social hour, during which refreshments were served by the host of the evening. There were about forty persons present to enjoy the hospitality of Mr. Harris.

GRANTED TWO PERMITS.

Two building permits were granted by the Borough Council at is meeting last night, one to Allen Coddington for the erection of a carpenter shop in the rear of his property on Fairview avenue and the other to the firm of VanZant & Doeringer for a small shop in the rear of the property located at 30 Chatham street.

BOROUGH RESIDENTS MUST CLEAR WALKS

Council Will Provide a Fine For Failure to Comply With Ordinance.

An amendment to the ordinance regarding the removal of snow from sidewalks in the borough by property owners was authorized at a meeting of the Borough Council, last night, and prior to the April session some agreement will be drawn up whereby delinquent property owners will be liable to a fine for failure to comply with the law. At the present time a majority of the borough property owners are not aware of the existence of an ordinance effecting the removal of snow and as a consequence after each fall the street department is kept busy clearing up places that should be taken care of by the owner.

The present ordinance provides for the cleaning away of snow within five hours after the storm abates but no penalty for delinquency has been affixed, other than a charge which is made by the street department for clearing it away. Many property owners, some in good faith, have relied wholly on the street commissioner to take charge of this work and the limited force of city employes in the borough has been kept busy after every storm. In a majority of cases the city employes have done the work cheaper and in a more satisfactory manner than it would have been done by a laborer.

Councilman Milne introduced a resolution for the drawing up of an amendment which will provide a fine for offenders. While the new arrangement will probably not be ready for enforcement this year it is planned to make it a permanent one to be put in effect at once upon passage.

JUST RECEIVED WORD OF HIS MOTHER'S DEATH

William Gould, of Rock avenue received word yesterday that his mother had died at Rocksburg, near Belvidere, Warren county. Mrs. Gould died on Wednesday, but owing to a lack of communication the information did not reach the son until yesterday. On account of severe storm conditions it was impossible to make arrangements for the funeral until yesterday. Mrs. Gould recently visited relatives in this city. She was well advanced in years.

MRS. ELIZABETH BOYD EDGAR SOLOIST AT MUSICALE

Mrs. Elizabeth Boyd Edgar, of West Sixth street, this city, was the principal soloist at a large and fashionable musicale given by Mme. Marie Cross Newhaus, of the Nevada, 70th street and Broadway, New York city, on Thursday. Her perfect rendition of "Cavatina," from Duvernoy's opera of "Halle," received enthusiastic applause and as an encore she sang Hammond's "Recompense."

At the conclusion of the program of ten numbers by various artists, Mrs. Edgar by request sang the soprano solo from "In a Persian Garden," and her work was favorably commented upon. There were more than one hundred at the musicale and supper which followed.

PHILLIP KOECHLEIN LOSES HAND BY ACCIDENT

Phillip Koechlein, of Liberty Corner, who is well known throughout Somerset county as a well driver, met with a serious accident yesterday at Far Hills, while following his usual occupation. The machinery used in driving the well suddenly stopped and as Mr. Koechlein climbed the rigging it started abruptly as it had stopped. Koechlein, in making a grab for a beam in order to balance himself, stuck his hand between two gear wheels, almost severing his right hand at the wrist. A fellow-workman called a doctor upon hearing the victim call for help and the wounds were properly dressed after Mr. Koechlein had bee removed to his home. Little hope is held for the saving of the injured hand.

MANY NEW CANDIDATES.

Fifteen new applicants for the vacancies on the local police force were given the physical examinations in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium yesterday afternoon. Among the new batch of candidates were two colored men. The second tests were highly encouraging to those interested in the effort to get new men on the force and a sufficient number will probably be secured from the second lot.

LARGE LOSS OF LIFE REPORTED

Belief That Steamship Charlemange Tower, Jr., With Crew Went Down.

FIND WRECKAGE AT SEA

Vessel Loaded With Coal Was Bound From Norfolk to Boston—Thought to Have Sprung a Leak in Storm.

That the crew of twenty-five of the Steamship Charlemange Tower, Jr., which was reported in distress signals, sinking off Barnegat, are all lost is feared, following the discovery today of wreckage from the vessel picked up near Barnegat by M. L. Gilbert, agent of the Southern Steamship Company, the owners. Mr. Gilbert is convinced the steamship has gone to the bottom. While cruising on board the tug Moran, in search of the vessel, he picked up pieces of her furniture, the log book, letters written to one of the crew by his wife, and several pieces of clothing.

"There is no doubt now in our minds that the Tower has sunk," said Mr. Gilbert. "I have positively identified this wreckage as belonging to the steamship. It is evident that the furniture and other articles I have recovered and seen could not have floated off unless the Tower sank. Off Barnegat there is an abundance of wreckage.

"The fate of the steamship no longer concerns us, but that of the crew does. For hours we cruised about on board the Moran searching for some trace of life boats. A blinding snow storm was raging. Mountainous waves were breaking on the shore. We obtained absolutely no sight of a life boat. Neither did we see any bodies."

Mr. Gilbert became convinced that the Tower had gone down when he picked up a bundle of letters which had been written to Wilbut, one of the engineers, by his wife. They either floated, Mr. Gilbert believes, out of the engineer's cabin when the vessel sank or he had to throw them away after trying to save them to fight for his life.

Hours of searching by the Moran and the revenue cutter Itasca along the New Jersey coast disclosed no trace of the steamship except the wreckage, which was floating around in large quantities, especially a few miles north of Barnegat, where the Tower was last reported. The two vessels ventured as near the coast as possible. No light of any kind showed off shore.

"There is only one hope for the men," said Mr. Gilbert. "That is that they were rescued by one of the life-saving crews. It is possible that a crew was able to get out to them or get a line out, but the fact that a tremendously big sea had been raging causes me to doubt it.

"Because of the storm it would have been difficult for a lifeboat to live in the water. It may be that the men put off in lifeboats and are waiting to be picked up. We covered so much distance without finding them that I am doubtful about that.

"I hardly think it possible that they got ashore in lifeboats through the surf that was running. The waves were of a tremendous size. The steamship was on its way from Norfolk to Boston."

ENGAGEMENT OF MISS MANNING AND C. H. ROGERS

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Manning, of West End avenue, Trenton, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Kathryn L. Manning, to Charles Harold Rogers, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Rogers, of Madison avenue, this city. The marriage of the couple will take place during April. Following their wedding trip they will reside in Plainfield.

Miss Manning has a large circle of acquaintances in Trenton and this city. Mr. Rogers is the proprietor of the Gerston Poultry Farms, this city, and is also widely known.

W. T. CARR'S FUNERAL.

The funeral of William Thayer Carr was held at the late home on West Fifth street at 8 o'clock last night, Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, of Grace church, of which Mr. Carr was a member, officiating. There was a large attendance of friends, including members of Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum, with which Mr. Carr was identified for several years. The remains were taken today to Elmira, N. Y., for burial.

TO VISIT IRELAND.

Miss Rose Spillane, of Madison avenue, a member of the 1912 graduating class of the Muhlenberg Hospital Training School, will sail on the Steamship Baltic next Thursday for her former home in Ireland. She will remain abroad for at least six months.

Miss Victoria Borkosky has returned to her position at the Elite Millinery Shop, after a month's stay in New York city.

Dunellen & Vicinity

The first pay-as-you-enter car on the main line of the eighteen hundred type passed through town yesterday afternoon. The Public Service Railway Company will install this type of car on the main line in place of the two thousand type that has been operating over the routes for the past few years.

The telephone cables that are being laid from New York city through this State, along the Central Railroad tracks in place of the cables damaged by the storm last Sunday and Monday have been put into position. The linemen who are laying the cables say that they expect to be as far as Bound Brook by Sunday night.

Peter Fritz, of New Market road, who has been detained at his home for the past week by a severe illness, has fully recovered and is again able to be out and around.

Although the town is still in darkness at night, due to the lack of electric lights, the merchants and residents who have greatly missed the use of their telephones are now rejoicing because all the instruments in town have been placed in commission and connections with other towns and cities have been restored.

The demand for candles and kerosene, by all teh residents of town, on the merchants still continues, as there has been no current turned on in the borough limits by the Public Service Corporation for either private of public lighting. According to the news dispensed by some of the officials of the corporation lights will not be available in town before the middle of next week.

Borough Engineer Lewis T. Churchill, of Fourth street, who has been confined to his home for the past few weeks by typhoid fever, is reported as improving steadily and is throwing off the effects of the disease.

'Plains & Fanwood.

Harry Paff, of Forest road, who was injured by a fall from his bobsled while coasting on Meyer's Hill last week, is now the victim of blood poison. The wounds on his face became infected. The left side of the young man's face is badly swollen, but is not of a very serious nature.

As for telephonic connections, Scotch Plains is as bad off now as she was Monday night. Every 'phone in the town is out and the prospects of having them fixed within the next few days is very slight. Fanwood, which has almost as many subscribers as Scotch Plains, is very little better off. Out of the eighty-two 'phones in Fanwood about ten of them are working, while none of the forty-five used by the Scotch Plains subscribers has the remotest sign of life in them.

Owing to the great demand for electric lights at Bonnie Burn Sanitarium, as soon as the heavy gale and snow storm of the first of the week was over, a gang of linemen and electricians were sent from Plainfield and Westfield to the institution and made repairs to the wires supplying the buildings with electric lighting current. As a result, while none of the residences in either Scotch Plains or Fanwood have any electric lights, that institution has been connected up and the light problem necessary during the night has been solved.

Owing to the lack of electric lights, the meeting of Twilight Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., scheduled to be held last night, was postponed until next week, when it is hoped the lighting facilities of this town will be restored.

The Scotch Plains Pleasure Club, of which Joseph Albert is the president, has planned to hold a dance in the fire hall, Tuesday, St. Patrick's Day night, March 17. Professor Dow's orchestra, of Garwood, has been obtained to furnish music for the dancing.

Owing to the lack of lights, there will be no basketball games played in the Parish House tonight.

The annual school election of Fanwood Township will be held Tuesday, March 17. Besides the election of three new members of the Board of Education an appropriation of $7,200 for the year will be asked for, $200 for repairing of school building and $7,000 for current expenses.

Mr. and Mrs. S. W. McAneny are entertaining Miss Gustava Sands, of South Orange.

The Saturday Night Club will meet tonight. As there will be no electric lights the hall will be artistically decorated with Japanese lanterns. Cards and dancing will feature the program with refreshments.

The Y. G. B. C., of the Reformed church, has elected the following officers: President, Miss Esther Amerman; vice-president, Miss Florence Haas; secretary, Miss Mabel Reger; treasurer, Miss Gertrude Becker; teacher; Mrs. John F. Reger.

William Brown, who has been employed for a long time in the woolen mills at this place, has gone to North Adams, Mass., where he will engage in work of a similar nature.

About thirty young people of this place enjoyed a straw ride to North Branch, last night, where a dance was indulged in.

Miss May Traynor has returned from a visit with friends at Greenwich, Conn.

Westfield.

Frederick W. Ellsworth addressed pupils of the Washington School, Thursday, on the subject, "Publicity in Banking." The talk was one of a series of vocational lectures that the Board of Education has provided.

An every-member canvass of the Presbyterian church will be made the last week of this month.

Dr. Joseph B. Harrison addressed the local medical association Wednesday on "The Diet in Typhoid."

The Woman's Club next Monday will be addressed by William R. Guthrie on "The Ideals of Democracy."

Warrenville.

The Township Committee has after a most strenuous campaign succeeded in opening all of the sixty-four miles of road in Warren Township. While the storm was still raging on Monday they were out with three gangs of snow shovelers recruited from the men and boys of the neighborhood and any of their friends who might have been kept from their business in the city. The relief corp made up of ten men in a bob sled drawn by four horses and under the management of W. Gill Cooper, patrolling the highways giving aid to those whose business made it necessary to be out with their teams and in search of pedestrians who might need assistance, and while so engaged at the same time breaking the road, was the most noteworthy feature of the work. After having completed their work they met yesterday to pay bills. Checks to exceed the amount of $600 were given out.

A sleigh-ride was enjoyed Thursday night when A. L. Ortman and John Cooper took about thirty young people over to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Bowers, of Dead River. Upon the arrival of the guests the house was thrown open and given over to the enjoyment of dancing, cards and songs. Mrs. Bowers played several selections on the piano accompanied by Mr. Bowers on the violin, and Mrs. A. Ortman also gave several instrumental selections on the piano. Music for dancing was furnished by John Cooper. Those in the party were the Misses Lillian Williams, Sadie Bornmann, Viola Hauser, Minnie Steffens, Myrtle Cooper, and Leslie Toms, Charles Jennings, Louis Stout, Carl Hauser, Percy Reinmann, Herman Meyers, Herbert Toms, Raymond Bornmann, Peter Reinmann, Erhardt Hauser, Irving Toms, August Parillard, Willie Cooper, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Ortman, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Williams, Henry Williams, Franw Cleaves and John Cooper.

The Board of Education will hold its monthly meeting at the Warrenville School tonight at 8 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Binz are visiting Mrs. Binz's parents in Canada.

Mr. Arthur Hofheimer has returned home after a week's visit with friends in New York.

Miss Florence Voorhees, who has been visiting Miss Ruth Miller, has returned to her home in Dunellen.

ARE YOUR KIDNEYS WELL?

Many Plainfield People Know the Importance of Healthy Kidneys.

The kidneys filter the blood.

They work night and day.

Well kidneys remove impurities.

Weak kidneys allow impurities to multiply.

No kidney ill should be neglected.

There is possibly danger in delay.

If you have backache or urinary troubles.

If you are nervous, dizzy or worn out,

Begin treating your kidneys at once:

Use a proven kidney remedy.

None endorsed like Doan's Kidney Pills.

Recommended by thousands.

Proved by Plainfield testimony.

Mrs. Patience Manchester, 120 Lafayette place, Plainfield, N. J., says: "For a long time I doctored and tried various remedies for my kidneys and bladder, but didn't get a cure. Doan's Kidney Pills brought me good results from the first and before long rid me of the trouble. I still use this remedy occasionally and it always relieves me of serious trouble. I willingly recommend Doan's Kidney Pills."

AGAINST REFERENDUM ON APPOINTIVE EXCISE BOARD

Elizabeth, Feb. 7.—Members of City Council, who are opposed to an appointive board of excise, were again victorious Thursday night, when the question of endorsing Councilman Bartram Woodruff's bill, providing for a referendum vote on the question, was decided in the negative, by a vote of twelve to eleven. President Dennis F. Collins voted in favor of the proposed change. Edward Nugent, his party opponent, attacked the measure as undemocratic.

Councilman Nugent criticized the recent adoption of the pay-as-you-enter plan on local trolley cars, saying that more and better cars were needed and that the "improvement" was not a convenience for the public. He also attacked the Public Service Corporation for not removing snow from near its tracks.

The committee which investigated the Socialists complaint that the police broke up their meeting, exonerated the police in a report.

News of Interest in Building World

FEBRUARY DULLEST MONTH IN TEN YEARS

Only $4,500 Worth of Permits of All Kinds Were Granted by Inspector.

The total amount of permits in the various wards for February compared to those during the same period in 1913 were:

New Buildings.

First ward	$38,875	.....
Second ward	17,300	.....
Third ward	10,800	.....
Fourth ward	14,800	$2,500
Total	$81,775	$2,500

Alterations.

	1913	1914
First ward	$ 400	.....
Second ward	$ 200	.....
Third ward	1,050	$1,000
Fourth ward	2,800	1,000
Total	$4,450	$2,000

February was the worst month that has been encountered by the local building trades during the past ten years. During the month there have been very few permits issued by Building Inspector Doane, and the majority of those taken out were for alterations and repairs.

Every line of the building trades, with the exception of the plumbers, have been closed up completely by the fall of snow, which has blanketed all materials used in the construction of buildings. The contractors who have been fortunate enough to have interior work to do during the past six weeks also feel the effects of the storms that have struck this section of the country within the past three weeks. The interior of houses that have not been equipped with heating apparatus are so cold that no interior decorative work can be carried out and those that have heating equipment installed have been tied up on account of the inability of the men to get to work.

Comparing the total amount of money involved in the building trades last February and February of this year, it is seen that the amount involved this year is greatly excelled by the value of last year's work.

Against the $39,275 for improvement of real estate in the First ward in February last year, there has been absolutely nothing done this year. All the other three wards, although nothing large, has had at least $1,000 worth of improvements done during the past month.

The prospects for the coming few weeks is such that none of the many contractors in and around town care to discuss it or give their opinions as to what may be in store for the coming ten months of this year.

The $1,000 involved in the improvement of property in the Second ward during the past month was for the erection of an addition to the rear of a house at 109 Randolph road, owned by Mrs. Carrie Voorhees, of Martinsville. The alterations to the show window of the Woolworth store on West Front street, give a total amount for the Fourth ward of $1,000. The Fourth ward is the only ward in which a new building will be erected on permits taken out last month. This building is to be a two and a half story frame structure erected by Axel Lagstrom, of 429 John street, on his property at 338 Bergen street, as soon as the weatner moderates and the excavations and mason work can be carried on without danger of frost. This building gives the Fourth ward the lead over all the other wards by having a total of $2,500, which will be invested in the improvement of property.

ONLY ONE PERMIT, THAT FOR SMALL ADDITION, THIS WEEK

Conditions in the building world continue slack. With the heavy fall of snow that did so much damage practically all building activities have ceased. During the past week, the first in March, when usually many contractors are appearing before the building inspector at fire headquarters to secure permits for buildings in the city limits, there has been but one granted by Chief T. O. Doane. This permit was given to John Russo, of 1469 Terrill road, for an eighteen foot square addition to the front of his present building. The improvement is to cost not less than $450. S. Perretto has been awarded the masonry and plastering contract and Squiccairini & Otsanto, of Scotch Plains, the contract for the carpenter work.

Prospects for the future do not appear very bright for the numerous contractors of this town, especially in new building. There are several who have contracts for the erection of new buildings, but this work will not be commenced before April 1, unless the weather moderates greatly and all danger of frost troubles have passed.

CITY BUILDING TO HAVE APARTMENT FOR JANITOR

McCullough & Rhodier have been awarded the contract by the city to divide the loft floor of the City Building on North avenue, into living quarters for the janitor of the building. The plans call for dividing the space into four rooms and a bathroom, each of which is to be trimmed with cypress material finished in its natural color. The bathroom is to be equipped with white enameled fixtures which will include a tub, sidewall basin and small medicine cabinet.

Fire escapes will be placed at each window at both the front and rear of the building. The Kenard Iron Works, of East Fourth street, have been given the contract for this work. It is estimated that all the work to be done both inside and outside the building will not be more than $1,000. The work will be started as soon as supplies can be secured and will be rushed through so as to be completed by April 15.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES

The song service at the Y. W. C. A. tomorrow afternoon will be in charge of Miss Elizabeth C. Wetherell, the physical director. Mrs. Frederick G. Mead, the president of the association, will be present and tell of some interesting campaign experiences. Tea will be served at 5 o'clock, and all women of Plainfield are invited.

The monthly meeting of the board of directors will be held Monday morning at 10 o'clock. It was impossible to hold this meeting at its regular time, last Monday, because of the storm, and a full attendance is urged next week. Important matters relative to the work of the finance campaign so recently completed will be discussed.

Mrs. Percy Hamilton Stewart, the chairman of the junior department will entertain all junior members of the association at a party in the association parlor Saturday afternoon, March 14.

A St. Patrick's Day party for all senior members of the association will be held Thursday evening, March 19. It is especially urged that the new members of the association be present and meet those who have been members longer. Probably one hundred and seventy-five new members were admitted at the time of the finance campaign, and this party will afford an excellent occasion for them to become acquainted in the association.

Classes and clubs that have been omitted for two weeks, will resume their activities next week with renewed vigor. Especially are the members urged to attend the rehearsal of the Glee Club on Monday evening. This club is free to members. Mrs. H. V. Lewis is the director.

"CHILDREN OF INDIA."

"Children of India," was the subject for discussion at the meeting of the Young Women's Mission Band of Trinity Reformed church, held at the home of Mrs. Lorenzo Townley, on Watchung avenue, yesterday afternoon. Miss Elizabeth Brokaw led the devotional exercises. Plans for the coming year were discussed during the afternoon.

Dr. Edward I. Smalley, of Central avenue, is detained at home with an attack of grip.

STARTS SEARCH FOR OLD BALLADS

Bureau of Education Would Rescue Dying Folk Songs.

ISSUES NATION WIDE APPEAL

Sends Out List of 305 Compositions Sought In Various States—Work Put In Charge of Professor C. A. Smith, Who Deplores Present Substitution of "Catchy, but Empty," Songs.

A national search for old ballads has been inaugurated by the United States bureau of education.

Convinced that many of the English and Scottish popular ballads of olden times still survive in the United States and that immediate steps are necessary to rescue them from oblivion, the bureau has commissioned Professor C. Alphonso Smith of the University of Virginia, a prominent folklore investigator, to institute a nation wide search for versions of these old ballads that once helped to mold the character of the men and women who comprised the larger part of the colonial population of this country.

Says Now Is the Time.

"If our American versions are not collected immediately they can never be collected at all," says Professor Smith. "Many influences are tending to obliterate them. Catchy but empty songs not worthy of comparison with them, the decadence of communal singing, the growing diversity of interests, the appeal to what is divisive and separative in our national life, the presence of the artificial and self conscious in modern writing, are depriving our homes and schoolrooms of a kind of literature which is not surpassed in the whole history of English or American song."

Searching For 305 Ballads.

A list of 305 of the ballads has been distributed to teachers and others by the bureau of education. The plan is to start a ballad collection for each state, so that state folklore societies may be encouraged to keep up the work.

Among the ballads for which survivals are sought are the following:

"Robin Hood," "The Beggar Laddie," "Bonny Barbara Allan," "The Crafty Farmer," "Durham Field," "The Earl of Mar's Daughter," "Fair Annie," "Johnnie Armstrong's Last Good Night," "Ladie Isabel and the Elf Knight," "Child Maurice," "The Lass of Roch Royal," "The Mermaid," "Rob Roy," "The Three Ravens," "Trooper and Maid" and "The Wife of Usher's Well."

GIVES EMPLOYEES SCHOOLING

Business Concern Pays Expenses of Night Study.

Education by night in a business college to supplement the knowledge or to make up for the lack of knowledge obtained in the public schools has been found necessary by a Chicago firm in order to make its employees of much value. Members of the firm declare it is less costly than the mistakes made by the boys whom it takes fresh from their school training.

When a young man shows promising qualities the firm sends him to business college for a term in the night school. His supper, books, car fare and tuition are paid for.

The plan was first put into practice when it was discovered that the young men hired were not worth a great deal because of a lack of working knowledge of arithmetic and spelling and their inability to write.

WILSON'S AGE BY SECONDS.

Young Student Answers Question Almost on the Instant.

President Wilson learned a few days ago that his age computed in seconds was 1,800,489,600 at noon on Jan. 18. This information was conveyed to the president in a letter from Albert F. Gamble of Rochester, N. Y., a student at the University of Chicago. The student sent to the White House a clipping of a newspaper story which attributes to him a marvelous faculty for making rapid mathematical computations.

In his letter he informed the president that recently a group of friends seeking to test out his ability had asked the date of the president's birth and that he had instantly replied Dec. 28, 1856. A second question was as to the president's age computed in seconds. He was able, he said, to give a correct reply with scarcely a pause.

MONEY IN OSTRICH BREEDING

Department Expert Studying Feather Market to Boost the Industry.

A South African ostrich breeder, who recently told officials of the United States department of agriculture that the United States is twenty-five years behind South Africa in ostrich raising, has stirred the ambitions of agricultural experts. The department has an employee in New York studying the question of selection and proper grading of the feathers, and later he will be sent to Arizona to study questions that have arisen there.

Feathers from ostrich flocks in Arizona have sold for $90 a pound. Most of the ostriches in this country are in Arizona, and department officials believe there is a possibility of an extremely useful industry in American ostriches.

PLANFIELD, NEW JERSEY, MARCH 7, 1914.

On Saturdays the editorial columns of the Daily Press are conducted by citizens who are free to express their own views. The contributing editor for today is Miss Addie Parker Jackson, Supervisor of Physical Education of Plainfield Schools.

THE NEW GYMNASIUM OF PLAINFIELD HIGH SCHOOL —ITS USES AND BENEFITS.

The time is rapidly approaching when at the completion of the addition to the Plainfield High School we may reap the benefit rendered possible by such an equipment. We intend that the Department of Physical Education, as it will then be conducted in the new gymnasium, will vitally affect the lives and well being of our entire High School membership. As we are about to pass from our old equipment into our new, where we will have plenty of fresh air, an ample floor space sufficient to accommodate all, with every facility for greater service, I feel that it is incumbent upon the parent and incumbent upon the instructor thru these means to co-operate, rendering the student more efficient service than ever before. We hear much concerning a student meeting the requirements of his class, of his school, of his teacher, but in the gymnasium the instructor must recognize the necessity of the reverse, meeting the requirement of the student, taking him from where he is, not from the standpoint of where the instructor might perchance feel the student ought to be or from where he hoped to find him, but just from where he is, lifting him into a higher grade of efficiency, physically, mentally and morally.

The spirit of the Physical Education Department must be first that of recreation. This is a strenuous age, nervous tension is high, pressure is great, the younger people feel it as well as the old—from it there is no relief which can equal the reaction caused by well supervised, well organized and well directed play. For this reason, aside from the opportunity for the cultivation of endurance and of co-operation, recreation should be a dominant factor in the use of the new gymnasium. Also the spirit of re-creation—to explain: a chain is only as strong as its weakest link, therefore it is the duty of the instructor to detect that link, reinforce it, that the whole body may be rendered more efficient by thus strengthening its weakest part. Equally important is the development of reserve force, that capital upon which the student must draw to a greater or a less degree all his life, and by possessing an abundance thereof he is carried unawares over many crises, moral, mental and physical; energy that supplies ever over balancing energy that wastes. This reserve force is accumulated in the gymnasium by hygienic exercises properly administered, it is accumulated in the home by well ventilated rooms, by regular periods of open air exercise, by long hours of sleep—eight to nine hours being none too long even for our high school students, and by nutritious food at regular intervals; no day should be so hurried that the hour for proper nutrition is neglected for all these factors go toward the making of red blood, so necessary to body and brain.

The function of the physical education department should be that of a preventive. Doctor Montessori was asked this question soon after her arrival in New York: "Do you not believe, in spite of all your new theories and ideals for child welfare, that humanity will go on at about the same pace, falling prey to the same ills as long as this old world exists?" She replied: "No! most emphatically no! For what are we doing? We are now beginning with the children of today, setting right mentally, morally, physically, the children of today; and it is the children of today who will constitute the great world of tomorrow, so in setting right the children of today we are setting right to a wide extent the world of tomorrow." Thus going back to the principle contained in the old adage, "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." Here in our Plainfield schools much corrective work necessarily preceded the period of preventive which we are now enjoying, because formerly the molding influences of school life were such, physically, that defective spines, hips, shoulders and shoulder blades were conspicuous, and that I might meet this need of the student, the work for the time being took the form of a corrective with the result given below.

GRAMMAR GRADES.

Year	Grades	Pupils Examined	Defective Cases
1912-'13	5, 6, 7, 8	1050	72

The above figures proving that as the work progresses the corrective work may be supplemented by the higher field of the preventive, showing we are in this branch passing our first milestone. To accomplish this prevention from defects physical training is started in our Fifth Grammar Grade, where such defects first appear. If in the physical examination defects are noted the child is given a prescription for home practice. Seats and desks are adjusted to the stature of the child and exercises are given daily in the class rooms and arranged progressively thru the grades that the correct method of carriage and good structure of body may be formed. Believing that the physical side without the mental is useless in such training these young students are taught its meaning and its results in health, strength and grace. They are given the added thought that as they live from day to day, so they will grow, their daily mode of doing things forming the habits which work into the structure of their bodies.

This department must also be a preventive from disease and an upbuilder of health. Entering the High School the student is in need of even closer supervision along these lines as he is now in the adolescent period—a period of rapid increase in height, yet a time when vital force is apt to be low as the vital organs have not yet reached their full maturity and thus are not yielding a maximum supply to meet present needs of structure and change. Adjoining the gymnasium an office is equipped with facilities for a more complete physical examination and that the student may be intelligent thereof, such dimensions are entered upon a physical examination card and in a column beside the one outlined, a health standard is given; here are entered the dimensions as they ought to be at the student's present age and height, at the present period of development. If below the health standard in any item he is given prescription of exercise along the line needed and when above, as is now the case with the majority he receives the incentive which such condition creates—a brief summary of result of such examnation is given below.

HIGH SCHOOL.

Year	Pupils having complete examination	Cases needing corrective work	Cases corrected
1906-'07	152	150	111

These figures give an idea of the result of a persistent corrective department and prove that in the High School also our work may be more extensively along preventive lines.

That the department may reach the objective points outlined, each period of training is divided into three parts—one for recreation including games and Folk Dances, one for body building including development of correct structure and carriage and one for health and strength including gymnastics and talks on hygiene. Beside these regular periods there will be the activities of the swimming pool and various branches of athletics under expert supervision.

There is no state law compelling a parent to place a student in this department; a student may graduate, receiving a diploma indicating brilliant mental equipment, yet perchance, without the requisite physical energy, thus to a certain extent limiting his career. But higher than the law of the state is nature's law, which we may well consider the law of our Creator—that for highest usefulness, harmonious development and greatest joy of living there must be the yoking together of strong mind with strong body, the latter furnishing the vitality and the force necessary both to mind and morals for the attainment of the high ideals, the efficient service and the future success which we all wish for every one of our High School girls and boys.

STATE BOARD OPPOSES LEGISLATIVE BILLS

(By Telegraph to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, March 7.—At a meeting held here today the State Board of Education went on record as being opposed to two bills now pending before the Legislature. One was introduced by Assemblyman Fishler, of Essex county, and prohibited the teaching of sex hygiene in the schools, and the other was by Mr. Hammond, increasing the membership of the Board to 21 men, one from each county. The latter act would abolish the present State Board of Education, and create twenty-one positions paying $1,200 each. It was the salary feature which aroused the ire of the present members, and caused their greatest opposition. The protests will be forwarded to the Legislature.

SENTENCE FRANK TO DIE.

(By Telegraph to The Daily Press.)

Atlanta, Ga., March 7—Leo M. Frank was resentenced to death here today for the killing of Mary Phagan, a young factory girl, who worked in the plant of which he was the head. He will be hung on April 17. His attorneys are still trying to secure a new trial.

EXPECT INCOME TAX TO REACH $50,000,000; POSSIBLY MORE

(By Telegraph to The Daily Press.)

Washington, Mar. 7—Although the treasury officials refuse to give out the amount which it has been found the government will receive from the new income tax law, as figured from the first reports of the sixty-three revenue collectors throughout the country, it is understood on good authority that the amount will reach $50,000,000, which will be paid by 425,000 people. It is said that the reports thus far received are from 400,000 people, and involve $40,000,000 of tax, and that fully 25,000 more are to be heard from during the month of grace which has been allowed, who will swell the amount $10,000,000. Including the receipts from the corporation tax, it is estimated that the annual revenue of the country from this source will reach $85,000,000.

CHAMP CLARK'S BIRTHDAY.

Washington, D. C., Mar. 7.—A huge bouquet graced the Speaker's desk in the House today in token of Champ Clark's sixty-fourth birthday anniversary. Speaker Clark was further reminded of the anniversary by the receipt of a number of congratulatory messages from friends throughout the country.

DIETZ MURDER TRIAL.

Chicago, Ill., Mar. 7.—After several postponements the trial of Mrs. Augusta Dietz and George Nurnberg, under indictments for the murder of the woman's husband, George Dietz, is to begin in Judge Kersten's court Monday. Dietz was found murdered in his home on April 14, 1913, his skull having been beaten in with a hammer. Both Mrs. Dietz and Nurnberg have manitained their innocence of any complicity in the murder, though the latter is alleged to have admitted a criminal intimacy with Mrs. Dietz.

WEDDING IN MILITARY CIRCLES.

Washington, D. C., March 7—The army and navy contingents in Washington society turned out in force today for the wedding of Miss Frances Elward Smith, daughter of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Robert Gibson Smith, and Lieut. Harry Alexander Baldridge, U. S. N. The ceremony was performed at noon in the fashionable St. Thomas' church. Lieut. Baldridge and his bride will spend their honeymoon in Japan.

BENJAMIN DUFFIELD TAKES HIS LIFE

Somerville, March 7.—Benjamin Duffield, fifty-five years of age, committed suicide here at 1 o'clock this afternoon, by hanging in the cellar of a house on Maple street. Mr. Duffield has been a resident of this town for the past twenty-three years and was a carpenter by trade. He is survived by a widow and one daughter. This is the second suicide by hanging in this house, the last one occurring nineteen years ago.

PLAINFIELD COUPLE IS SAID TO HAVE ELOPED

Miss Ella VanArsdale, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. VanArsdale, of 1004 West Third street, has been missing from home since last Thursday night, and rumor has it that she has eloped with John Boise, of Westervelt avenue. Friends say that the couple met at the Company K fair for the first time, one night last week, and that it was purely a case of "love at first sight."

When interviewed this morning, a number of the young woman's associates in the store where Miss VanArsdale was employed, said that they understood she had eloped with Boise. The family of the missing young woman refused to commit themselves in the matter, but a brother admitted over the 'phone that she had left home.

She left home last Thursday evening saying that she was going to attend a performance at the Plainfield Theatrer. Boise is also said to be absent from the city.

PREPARES FOR BOWLERS.

Buffalo, N. Y., March 7.—When the annual tournament of the American Bowling Congress is opened in this city next Monday the visiting bowlers will be greeted with a perfection of arrangements that has seldom been equalled in the history of the big annual tournaments. The officials in charge confidently predict that the event will establish a new standard of success for the tenpin game. The number of contestants is expected to smash the previous high record. Buffalo's location is expected to attract more bowlers from Canada and the East than have ever competed before in the A. B. C. tournaments, while the middle West is counted upon to send its customary large delegations.

BOSTON AUTOMOBILE SHOW.

Boston, Mass., March 7.—Four hundred of the latest models of automobiles, including all makes and sizes and numbers, are on display in the Mechanics Building, where the annual Boston Automobile Show opens tonight and continues through the coming week. The show is one of the most extensive of its kind that has yet been carried on in this country. Every available foot of space in the big building is covered by the exhibits of automobile firms or by the stock of supply houses. Motor vehicles propelled by steam, gasoline and electricity are all well represented.

ORGANIZE CIVIC CLUB.

NO DANCE TONIGT.

The Public Service Corporation has not been able to assure the Public Recreation Committee that the lights will be on at the Washington School for this evening. Consequently the regular dance announced will not take place.

"Sustenance Space."

When we estimate that the average inhabitant of New York may have but a few score square feet for his own use, we are apt to forget that he can only exist on them because somewhere in the country there are acres of ground producing for him, as really and definitely for him as if he owned them and hired the labor on them, what Professor Penck has called his "sustenance space."—Mark Jefferson in Atlantic.

CLIFF CASE WILL GO TO PHILLIES

Local Pitcher Gets Contract Through Influence of Former Plainfield Resident.

WELL KNOWN PLAYER

Somerville and Plainfield Teams Developed Swift Hurler Who Will Report at Once to Charlie Dooin's Philadelphia Nationals.

Cliff Case, one of the best known baseball pitchers in this section of New Jersey, who has won many diamond contests for the Plainfield Pets and has been a prominent figure in Somerville athletics, received a telegram from Manager Charlie Dooin, of the Philadelphia National League club, yesterday, instructing him to report at Wilmington, N. C., at once, the spring training quarters of the Quakers.

Case has been pitching for a number of years in this section and is well known to Plainfield fans. He first attracted attention while doing mound duty for local junior teams on Plainfield and Somerville sand-lots. During the past two years he has twirled with considerable success in the Connecticutt, P. and O. and Tri-State Leagues, and last season he was the mainstay of the Morrisville club in the Delaware River League.

The Jersey pitcher was recommended to Dooin by A. S. Olmstead, formerly of Westervelt avenue, vice president of the Barker Bond Lumber Company, of New York and Philadelphia. Mr. Olmstead was in Wilmington, yesterday, and gave Boss Dooin some pointers about Case. He said that he pitched on the same amateur team as Carroll Brown, of the Athletics, and that he would prove to be as good as Mack's tall pitcher after some seasoning.

Dooin heard the story and told him to wire to Case to report at once. There was one proviso, that in case he did not make good he would be released outright and not sent to a minor.

FIGHT IS WAXING WARM IN P. H. S. CLASS LEAGUE

Two teams are now tied for the lead in the Inter-class League of the Plainfield High School. The Sophomores and Juniors have each won three games and lost one, while the Seniors have broken even.

The Freshmen have not won any games as yet. The Sophomores have one more game to play with the Freshmen, while the Juniors have another game to play with the Seniors. This year's Junior team won the championship of the league last year and expect to do so again this year.

The standing of the teams is as follows:

	W.	H.	Pct.
1914	2	2	.500
1915	3	1	.750

KIELY'S PINNERS TOOK FIRST PAIR

After Setting Wide Margins in Opening Matches Team No. 6 Drops the Third.

P. J. Kiely's team of wood splitters took two in a row and dropped the third of an Elks' Club Bowling League series to the agregation captained by Frank Blatz last night, winning handily in the initial duo. Forty-seven pins separated the teams in the first game and in the second No. 6 managed to set up a margin of ninety-three pins.

Blatz's cohorts rallied in the final match and came out on top with forty-one pins to spare. Blatz set up the one double century score of the evening's competition and was high score man with a 222 to his credit.

WITH THE BOXERS

Joe Chick and Bill Fleming have been signed for a clash in Manchester, N. H., next week.

Champion Willie Ritchie expects to swell his bank account to more than $100,000 by next November.

After he was trimmed by Billy Murray in San Francisco, Leo Houck lost no time in beating it back to his home in Philadelphia.

Joe Jeannette, who is in Paris, says if he does not succeed in getting a match with Georges Carpentier, he will grab a boat for New York.

Mike (Twin) Sullivan is going to take hold of Johnny Boyle, the Lowell lightweight, and groom him for a 10-round bout with Johnny Duffy, of Buffalo.

There seems to be some hitch in the arrangements for the proposed bout between Johnny Coulon and Kid Williams. It is said that Coulon has boosted his price and declines to fight unless the promoters come across.

P. H. S. SENIORS TOOK ONE FROM FRESHMEN BASKETEERS

The senior class team of the Inter-Class League of the Plainfield High School defeated the freshman class team, yesterday afternoon, by the score of 22 to 19. In the first half the senior team played a much stronger game than their younger opponents and seemed to have the game sewed up.

At the end of the first half the score stood 16 to 8 in the seniors' favor, but with the beginning of the second half the freshies started playing and Zeek dropped in two baskets in the first few minutes of play.

NEEDLEWORK

By MARGARET LAWRENCE

DESIGNS FOR FINISHING HOUSEHOLD LINENS

There is an old saying that "A housekeeper is known by her linen chest," and it is more or less true to-day. Household linens of good quality are a good investment for they outwear, many times, the cheaper loosely woven cotton and linen mixtures. It is well worth while to spend one's time in embroidering fine linens with some such simple and dainty designs as those illustrated here, for the handwork adds much to their value. 13433, for instance, might be used on a complete set of bedroom linens, repeating the same motif on the top sheet, pillow-cases, bureau-cover and towels. This motif is 22 inches long and the pattern includes 2 transfers. The ends of the sheets and pillow-cases should be finished with hemstitched hems and the design may be placed about 1½-inches above the hemstitching. It may be developed entirely in solid embroidery or the bow knot may be done in outline-stitch and seeding with the flowers worked in eyelets and the rest of the design in solid embroidery. An initial or monogram may be placed 2 inches above the bowknot on each piece.

The pretty shamrock border, 13115, may also be used on an entire set of bedroom linens and this design is very effective for the amount of time necessary to work it. The border is appropriate for sheets, pillow-cases, bureau and table-covers, lingerie pillows and towels of any size. The leaves should be worked in solid embroidery with the stems in either outline or stem-stitch. This border is 1¾-inches wide, and the pattern includes 3 yards for 10 cents.

Guaranteed, hot iron transfer pattern 13433 can be supplied to readers at 15 cents and 13115 at 10 cents.

We no longer tie our heads up in a bandanna or towel to protect our hair from the dust when sweeping; each of our long aprons has a cap to match. No. 7184 shows an apron with a bib fastening in back, a round neck which is also perforated for a lower line and a sweeping cap.

Gingham, madras, chambray or cotton voile, may all be used equally well. If a plain chambray is used in a color, the cap may be trimmed a bit with soutache braid or white cotton rick rack; this would also be rather pretty to use around the neck and over the shoulders. The patch pocket will be found very convenient.

This apron may be made in size 36, with 4 yards of 36 inch material.

The pattern is cut in 3 sizes; 32-36 and 40.

This Is a Perfect Pattern.

Be sure to give right size, measuring over the fullest part of the bust for dimensions.

It may be obtained by filling out the coupon and enclosing 15 cents in stamps or coin, to the Pattern Department of this paper.

Some Cookery Suggestions

PLAIN CHRISTMAS PUDDINGS.

A GOOD suet pudding may take the place of the plum pudding when the latter is too rich or there is a desire to economize. The richness of the plum pudding is its great drawback. In partaking of a slice of the pudding one too often insures a nightmare of the worst description. There are many delicious puddings which may be served in its place.

Wholesome Puddings.

Lemon Sponge Pudding.—Take four tablespoonfuls of cornstarch, a pint of boiling water, two lemons, a cupful of sugar and the whites of three eggs. Moisten the cornstarch with a little cold water. Add it to the boiling water. Stir one minute. Then add sugar, grated rind of a lemon and the juice of two. Pour over well beaten whites of eggs. Mix thoroughly and pour into a mold. Serve cold with custard sauce and decorate with candied cherries.

Snow Pudding.—Take two eggs, a tablespoonful each of gelatin and lemon juice and a half cupful of sugar. Soak the gelatin in one-half cupful cold water ten minutes, dissolve in two cupfuls boiling water in which the sugar has been melted, add the lemon juice, beat the whites of the eggs until light. When the gelatin has cooled add slowly to the whites of eggs, beating until it begins to thicken; then pour into a mold which has been rinsed with cold water. Set aside until cold and firm. Turn out on a fancy dish, decorate with holly sprays and serve.

Substitutes For Plum Pudding.

Graham Fruit Pudding.—Take one-half cupful each of sugar and molasses, an egg, one-third cupful lard, one-fourth teaspoonful salt, a cupful sour milk, a teaspoonful soda, one-third teaspoonful baking powder, a teaspoonful cinnamon, one-half teaspoonful cloves, two cupfuls graham flour, one-half cupful raisins chopped fine. Mix together. Bake in moderate oven. Serve with cream and sugar.

A Nice Steamed Pudding.

Steamed Fruit Pudding.—Take two and a one-half cupfuls of flour, a cupful of chopped suet, a cupful of stoned raisins or currants, a cupful each of milk and molasses, a teaspoonful of salt, a saltspoonful each of nutmeg, cinnamon and cloves. Sift the salt, the spices and the soda into the flour, add the suet, rub it well in, mix the milk and molasses and add to the dry mixture, stir in the raisins, pour into a buttered mold and steam several hours.

Daddy's Bedtime Story — The Devoted Bunnie Bonnie Rabbit.

He Bounded on the Bed.

"BUNNY RABBIT was very young. He'd only just left home. His mother had been caught in a horrid, cruel trap and had been killed. So Bunny was left all alone. His daddy didn't care for such a little, ugly black and white rabbit, and his brothers and sisters considered themselves too grown up for him," daddy began.

"Poor Bunny was heartbroken at the death of his mother rabbit, and the tears fell fast from his little pink eyes.

"A little girl named Marjery happened to be taking a walk by herself. She was enjoying the wind and the cool air and thought walking was a splendid amusement. Suddenly she spied the lonely Bunny. 'Oh, you darling little Bunny!' she called. 'You look so lonely. Come with me. I've always longed for a pet Bunny rabbit. I shall call you Bunny Bonnie, and you'll come home and be my pet Bunny, won't you?' Bunny Bonnie couldn't answer, of course, but he nestled close in her arms as she picked him up. It felt so soothing to have some one comfort him and pet him again. And Bunny Bonnie lived in a home Marjery had made for him in her own little garden.

"Marjery still took many walks, but always brought back to Bunny Bonnie a present. It was something to eat, as they were the presents Bunny Bonnie loved best.

"But on one of these walks Marjery wandered into the woods where the snow was melting and got her feet very wet. When she came home she was sneezing frantically, and by evening she had developed a high fever and was aching all over. The next day she was so ill that the doctor had to be sent for.

"Marjery's mother promised her that she would feed Bunny Bonnie just the same as usual. But somehow Bunny didn't feel hungry. He couldn't understand why Marjery didn't come to him, and all day long he had no heart for playing.

"Marjery's mother had tried to tempt Bunny Bonnie with goodies to eat. But, no; Bunny Bonnie was a changed rabbit! He would not play nor would he eat, and finally Marjery's mother decided she'd take him to Marjery's bedroom.

"So she took Bunny Bonnie up in her arms and carried him into the house and up into Marjery's room. Never did you see such a changed rabbit! He bounded on the bed and frisked and jumped about with joy.

"He plainly showed his joy. He was more than happy, for in his little rabbit way he had worried frightfully over the absence of Marjery. He just got up by her on the pillow and nestled down by her shoulder. Then he ate the clover Marjery gave him."

CHAPTER

"A GOOD thing; he's woman shy. They'll not bother him for years," continued Old Pat. "He can't bring himself to understand the creatures, an' few of them has he seen at that. 'Twas the schoolteacher over at Samson's Flat that put the poetry stuff in his head. She was clean daffy over the young 'un, an' he never a-knowin'.

"A warm haired girl she was—not a mountain girl, but from down in the flat lands—an' as time went by she was fair desperate, an' the way she went after him was shameless. An' what d'ye think the boy did when he tumbled to it? He was scared as a jackrabbit. He took blankets an' ammunition an' hiked for tall timber.

"Not for a month did I lay eyes on him, an' then he sneaked in after dark and was gone in the morn. Nor would he as much as peep at her letters. 'Burn 'em,' he said. An' burn 'em I did. Twice she rode over on a cayuse all the way from Samson's Flat, an' I was sorry for the young creature. She was fair hungry for the boy, and she looked it in her face. An' at the end of three months she gave up school an' went back to her own country, an' then it was that the boy came home to the shack to live again.

"Women ha' been the ruination of many a good fighter, but they won't be of him. He blushes like a girl if anything young in skirts looks at him a second time or too long on the first one. An' they all look at him. But when he fights, when he fights! It's the old savage Irish that flares in him, an' drives the fists of him.

"Not that he goes off his base. Don't walk away with that. At my best I was never as cool as he. I misdoubt 'twas the wrath of me that brought the accidents. But he's an iceberg. He's hot an' cold at the one time, a live wire in an ice chest."

Stubener was dozing when the old man's mumble aroused him. He listened drowsily

"I made a man o' him! I made a man o' him, with the two fists of him, an' the upstanding legs of him, an' the straight seein' eyes. And I know the game in my head, an' I've kept up with the times and the modern changes. The crouch?

"Sure, he knows all the styles an' economies. He never moves two inches when an inch and a half will do the turn. And when he wants he can spring like a buck kangaroo. Infightin'? Wait till you see. Better than his outfightin', and he could sure 'a' sparred with Peter Jackson an' outfooted Corbett in his best. I tell you, I've taught 'm it all, to the last trick, and he's improved on the teachin'. He's a fair genius at the game.

"An' he's had plenty of husky mountain men to try out on. I gave him the fancy work and they gave him the sluggin'. Nothing shy or delicate about them. Roarin' bulls an' big grizzly bears, that's what they are, when it comes to huggin' in a clinch or swingin' roughlike in the rushes. An' he plays with 'em. Man, d'ye hear me? He plays with them, like you an' me would play with little puppy dogs."

Another time Stubener awoke, to hear the old man mumbling:

"'Tis the funny think he don't take fightin' seriously. It's that easy to him he thinks it play. But wait till he's tapped a swift one. That's all—wait. An' you'll see 'm throw on the juice in that cold storage plant of his an' turn loose the prettiest scientific wallopin' that ever you laid eyes on."

"He's comin' up the trail now," was the hoarse whisper. "Out with ye an' take your first peep at the biggest fightin' man the ring has ever seen, or will ever see in a thousand years again."

The manager peered through the open door, rubbing the sleep from his heavy eyes, and saw a young giant walk into the clearing. In one hand was a rifle, across his shoulders a heavy deer, under which he moved as if it were weightless.

He was dressed roughly in blue overalls and woolen shirt, open at the throat. Coat he had none, and on his feet instead of brogans were moccasins. Stubener noted that his walk was smooth and catlike, without suggestion of his 220 pounds of weight to which that of the deer was added.

The fight manager was impressed from the first glimpse. Formidable the young fellow certainly was, but the manager sensed the strangeness and unusualness of him. He was a new type, something different from the run of fighters.

He seemed a creature of the wild, more a night roaming figure from some old fairy story or folk tale than a twentieth century youth.

A thing Stubener quickly discovered was that young Pat was not much of a talker. He acknowledged old Pat's introduction with a grip of the hand, but without speech, and silently set to work at building the fire and getting breakfast.

To his father's direct questions he answered in monosyllables, as, for instance, when asked where he had picked up the deer.

"South fork," was all he vouchsafed. "Eleven miles across the mountains," the old man exposited pridefully to Stubener, "an' a trail that'd break your heart."

Breakfast consisted of black coffee, sour dough bread and an immense quantity of bear meat broiled over the coals. Of this the young fellow ate ravenously, and Stubener divined that both the Glendons were accustomed to an almost straight meat diet.

Old Pat did all the talking, though it was not till the meal was ended that he broached the subject he had at heart.

"Pat, boy," he began, "you know who the gentleman is?"

"Well, he'll be takin' you away with him and down to San Francisco."

"I'd sooner stay here, dad," was the answer.

Stubener felt a prick of disappointment. It was a wild goose chase after all. This was no fighter, eager and fretting to be at it. His huge brawn counted for nothing. It was nothing new. It was the big fellows that usually had the streak of fat.

But old Pat's Celtic wrath flared up and his voice was harsh with command.

"You'll go down to the cities an' fight, me boy. That's what I've trained you for an' you'll do it."

"All right," was the unexpected response, rumbled apathetically from the deep chest.

"And fight like —," the old man added.

Again Stubener felt disappointment at the absence of flash and fire in the young man's eyes as he answered:

"All right. When do we start?"

"Oh, Sam, here, he'll be wantin' a little huntin' and to fish a bit as well as to try you out with the gloves."

He looked at Sam, who nodded. "Suppose you strip and give 'm a taste of your ability."

An hour later Sam Stubener had his eyes opened. An ex-fighter himself, a heavyweight at that, he was even a better judge of fighters, and never had he seen one strip to like advantage.

"See the softness of him," old Pat chanted. "'Tis the true stuff. Look at the slope of the shoulders an' the lungs of him. Clean, all clean, to the last drop an' ounce of him. You're lookin' at a man, Sam, the like of which was never seen before. Not a muscle of him bound.

"No weight lifter or Sandow exercise artist there. See the fat snakes of muscles a-crawlin' soft an' lazylike. Wait till you see them flashin' like a strikin' rattler. He's good for forty rounds this blessed instant, or a hundred. Go to it! Time!"

They went to it, for three minute rounds with a minute rests, and Sam Stubener was immediately undeceived.

Here was no streak of fat, no apathy, only a lazy, good natured play of gloves and tricks, with a brusque stiffness and harsh sharpness in the contacts that he knew belonged only to the trained and instinctive fighting man.

This nettled Sam, as it was intended to do, and he played his most famous trick and favorite punch—a feint for a clinch and a right rip to the stomach. But, quickly as it was delivered young Pat saw it and, though it landed, his body was going away.

The next time his body did not go away. As the rip started he moved forward and twisted his left hip to meet it. It was only a matter of several inches, yet it blocked the blow.

And thereafter, try as he would, Stubener's gloves got no farther than that hip.

Stubener had roughed it with big men in his time, and, in exhibition bouts, had creditably held his own. But there was no holding his own here.

Young Pat played with him, and in the clinches made him feel as powerless as a baby, landing on him seemingly at will, locking and blocking with masterful accuracy and scarcely noticing or acknowledging his existence.

Old Pat's Celtic Wrath Flared Up.

Half the time young Pat seemed to spend in gazing off and out at the landscape in a dreamy sort of way. And right here Stubener made another mistake. He took it for a trick of old Pat's training, tried to sneak in a short arm jolt, found his arm in a lightning lock and had both his ears cuffed for his pains.

"The instinct for a blow," the old man chortled. "'Tis not put on. I'm tellin' you. He is a wiz. He knows a blow without the lookin', when it starts an' where, the speed an' space an' niceness of it. An' 'tis nothing I ever showed him. 'Tis inspiration. He was so born."

Once in a clinch the fight manager heeled his glove on young Pat's mouth, and there was just a hint of viciousness in the manner of doing it. A moment later, in the next clinch, Sam received the heel of the other's glove on his own mouth.

There was nothing snappy about it, but the pressure, stolidly lazy as it was, put his head back till the joints cracked, and for the moment he thought his neck was broken. He slacked his body and dropped his arms in token that the bout was over, felt the instant release and staggered clear.

"He'll—he'll do!" he gasped, looking the admiration he lacked the breath to utter.

THE PLAINFIELD THEATRE

There are three classes of women who should see "The Spendthrift," the new four-act drama by Porter Emerson Browne, which will appear at the Plainfield theatre this afternoon and evening. First—those women who are suffragettes or suffragists should hear the brief but pointed monologue which Gretchen Jans (Margaret Galagher) delivers to her niece, Frances Ward (Louise Price). Second—those women who consciously or unconsciously exceed the proper limitations of expenditures from the family purse and live at a rate more extravagant than they can afford because generous husbands fail to object as forcibly as they ought. Third—All other women who appreciate a well-written and well-acted play without a sentence to which fair objection may be made and without a situation meriting moral criticism. The story, the text and the moral of "The Spendthrift" are clearly and cleanly drawn from modern social life. Nor are its situations and its conditions, despite the fact that they are pictured in a family of social standing, inapplicable to households of every other class. Mr. Browne has drawn a remarkably truthful picture and painted a lifelike portrait of modern social conditions. His Frances Ward is typical of that large and in recent decades constantly growing proportion of women who provide for husbands, homes which are only houses, and association which means little of companionship whose social ambitions are not to be interfered with by the cares of motherhood nor made uncertain by homely duties.

The most massive production of the season is the Astor Theatre, New York, musical play "The Red Widow," which is announced for Tuesday night, March 10. The company numbers over fifty people and the scenic and electric effects are so heavy and numerous that it takes two sixty foot baggage cars to transport the same. The first act is laid in an English Music Hall with the unique effect of a theatre on the first night of a new production, carried out in all its full. There is seen a stage upon a stage and the play within the play with the effect of the raising and the lowering of the curtain, which is followed by the wealth and beauty of England in a Grand Promenade De Toilettes which is pleasing to both men and women as it shows the newest sensation of this fall seasons in all their magnificence. "The Red Widow" carries a working crew of eight grizzled old veterans of stage mechanics who never have had the glory of appearing before the public, but who, like the hidden hands of the marionettes stand and pull the strings of this gigantic production. The costuming which is of innumerable charm and splendor, and so extensive that four lady knights of the needle are constantly needed for its care. They too, like their co-workers, the mechanics, never appear before the public but linger in the shadows of the limelight with a wary eye, and a deft finger.

RADICAL REFORM PROPOSED.

Trenton, March 7.—Radical reform in Boards of Education throughout the State is the aim of a bill introduced in the Assembly by Mr. Barbour, of Passaic county. It provides that a member of the Board of Education shall be a citizen and a resident of the school district in which he serves for three years preceding his becoming a member of the Board. Also, he shall have completed his first eight years of work in the primary and grammar schools, or have received an education equivalent thereto.

TO SPREAD THE MINUTES.

Trenton, March 7.—In order that there should be no hitch in the movement for woman suffrage, Senator Egan yesterday introduced a resolution directing the spreading of the Suffrage Concurrent resolution in full upon the Senate Journal. He explained that the Constitution of the State requires such a proceedure, and he had noticed that it had not been done. Senator Hennessy requested the same action on the resolutions introduced by him, and which have passed the Senate.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Force, of Mountain avenue, have returned from Clinton, where they went to spend the week-end but were storm-bound.

Mrs. Leonard Smith, of Duer street, has returned after spending three weeks at Far Hills, where she was called because of the serious illness and death of her mother.

COMB SAGE TEA INTO GRAY HAIR

Darkens Beautifully and Restores Its Thickness and Lustre at Once.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant; remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic, costing about 50 cents a large bottle, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While wipsy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger.—Adv.

Stripes and Checks Conspicuous for Spring

FROM Monte Carlo comes word that small check materials are being worn in tailored suits having short loose coats and skirts in tunic effects. The idea of fancy fabrics varies from such unobtrusive goods to startling novelties in wide stripes, such as Redfer of Paris has sanctioned for American dressers.

Striking contrasts, conspicuous stripes, large and small checks, and flowered designs are the latest inventions which feeling persuade us what we should don to keep pace with the change of styles and seasons. In a few weeks the fashion devotee will emerge from her tailored chrysalis, a gay butterfly. Meanwhile, there is a craze for all black costumes, or black and white, with taffeta leading. The styles which are favored for these one-piece dresses are equally prominent in colored silks; but the black will be chosen with an eye for the balance it will give in the variety of summer wardrobes.

Clothes in general are departing from their extremely simple lines, and are becoming more complex and complicated. Tunics take on bustle modifications; and plain skirts take on flounces and frills galore. There is a hint at period dress revivals of the middle nineteenth century, and some picturesque panniers. The mannish tailored suit is now the exception, for fashion is emphasizing the eternal feminine characteristics of dress, and leaving the fitted uniform for most practical occasions. Gabardine, a close kindred of serge, is talked about and shown as the most durable material for general utility suits, while more noticeable are the fancy weaves of cottons, woolens and silks. The corded materials, such as poplin, faille and Ottoman, have first place among the plain color goods, in one class, with soft woolens in ratine, basket, and diagonal weaves in another. Cotton crêpes lead among wash goods, and the new golfine is creating a sensation among coatings. The latter is made up in every sort of coat and wrap, in colors grave and gay, though at first it appeared for sport coats. It is a ribbed cotton velour, resembling corduroy, but light in weight.

Printed designs on silk and cotton grounds will be worn very generally; and the leading novelties in these range from Futurist fruit and flower patterns in gaudy colors to the awning stripes manufactured in cotton crêpes and voile.

14598 Simple Hand Decoration for Child's Frock.

The little embroidered booties are easily made from silk, linen, or a piece of white kid. The pattern for cutting them comes with the design for stamping in No. 14464. 10 cents.

14647 Bag and Sewing Apron Combined.

Bits of ribbon or silk may be utilized in this way for flowers and sprays to give a touch of color.

MODEL suits and dresses for all daytime occasions display combinations of color in one way or another. Either a plain fabric is used with a contrasted one or two colors appear in conspicuous stripes, checks or plaids. Whatever the riot happens to be in coloring, the designs of the garments themselves are of almost greater concern to the woman about to plan her new clothes; for it rests with her to develop the styles in materials and colorings of her own choice. Incoming models from Paris emphasize the possibility for one to be individual in her dress, for their variety is extraordinary, without, as yet, introducing a decided innovation from the recent style tendencies. The Minaret tunic, with its countless variations will be used through the Summer. Three figures on this page have been chosen as types of the prevailing modes for dresses of thin materials. They show the tunic overdress, cut away in the middle front, in one instance, which is admirable for giving the desirable long front line; and in another (8147) the simple adjustment of the overdress in pannier effect.

The dark spot in the middle front, the girdle, the collar, and the cuffs of the model on the extreme right (8058) tell the story of conspicuous contrasts that lend style to dresses of rather plain cut. The material is a black and white check ratine, with black moiré as the trimming. Moiré, by the way, is in the height of fashion for using with plain materials, and for entire dressy wraps and coatees. The modish tier skirt is effected by a deep tuck, under which the lower section is attached. The peplum is attached to the blouse, giving the appearance of a coat dress, which is one of the best styles for an early spring dress to be worn without a coat. Plain taffeta, with plaid, is another combination seen in the same model.

There is an air of smart style in the wide striped voile dress (8165), with its simple decoration of pearl buttons, on blouse, tunic and sleeves. Though it seems a bit bizarre, it has novelty which will appeal to the young girl. The same model is used for a variety of materials, and could be reproduced from wide embroidery. The pattern can be had in sizes from 14 to 18. 15 cents.

Cotton materials have been woven as beautiful and as expensive as many silk fabrics, for which they may be substituted, if suitably made up. Just now, in many model frocks, there is no thought of the need for laundering, for silk and even velvet trimmings are used with fascinating charm. A girdle of velvet, buttons to match, or pipings of silk, lend a beautiful finish. This means that the service of the dry cleaner may be needed, though many careful dressers find that they can wear such dresses for a season, with only pressing necessary. The pannier innovation is pleasingly brought out in the gown shown at the bottom of this page. It is a dainty blue and white cotton crêpe, with trimming of old blue panne velvet, cord loops and buttons. The simple underskirt is cut in two pieces, while the tunic is made of a single piece. Any wide material can easily be made up just like this for a useful afternoon dress, using pattern 8147. 15 cents.

Dress and sports coats have as their newest feature extended sleeves, forming a yoke front; and sometimes, also, a yoke in the back. In the smart coat pictured on this page (8126) the yoke comes only in the front. The material is green golfine, and it is lined with white messaline. The pattern of the number given can be had in 6 sizes. 15 cents.

HATS for early Spring remain extremely small, and are of the blocked straws, hemp or tagal. They have smart lines, to distinguish them, and are beautiful in color. The yellow, taupe, brown, and amber shades lead in millinery as in dress materials. Fancy pompons, matine novelties, and flower fancies are used, with some tailored trimmings in bird plumage, or ostrich.

Black taffeta and moiré turbans are the leading mid-season hats, and some even are made of rows of narrow moiré ribbon, used in row upon row around the crown.

Velvet and silk crowns are also smart, and novelty crêpes or soft silks are introduced in some cases to match the dress with which the hat will be worn. Soft hats without stiffened foundations continue to find favor. Very high crowns are of momentary fashion interest. It is probable that wider brims will appear as the warm season advances, and some picture hats of straw and flowers, with streamers, have been shown at the early openings.

Ready-made Garments Dear

The ready-made garments shown for Spring are in many cases exceedingly high priced, and out of proportion to their value. The types of dresses shown on this page are some of these, and so simple to make, that the woman who wants to economize will not find it difficult to get successful results if she makes them at home with a good pattern.

Embroidered Bag and Bands

A sewing-apron with a deep pocket, which can be converted into a bag to hold fancy work or darning, is shown on this page. It can be made a very dainty affair, with hand embroidery, as shown; and for which a pattern can be had. It is No. 14647. 15 cents. Hand embroidered decorations are more fashionable than ever, and in narrow band effects, they are quickly and easily made, with no extra expense. Two good designs for many uses on blouses and dresses, and particularly on children's clothes, are shown on this page (Nos. 14597 and 14598). Each is 1½ inches wide, and comes ready to stamp in a three-yard strip with four corners. Braid or cord may be combined with embroidery. Each pattern is 10 cents.

Practical Hints for the Housewife

BUREAU tops that may have grown marred or shabby may be brought to good looks, by covering with a piece of chintz or plain colored silk, and then covered with a piece of thick glass cut just the size of the top. This is also a very sanitary treatment for the top of a dressing table. Heavy glass is not liable to break, if treated with reasonable care.

White lace curtains or bureau pieces may be made with an ecru tint by dipping in a very thin dye, or in coloring made of tea, or coffee. Nasomine tint, bought at a paint store, will answer the same purpose, and will leave no odor. As the color is strong, only a few grains will be needed for big results.

Boiled ham, tongue, or corned beef should be allowed to cool in the liquor in which it has been cooked, to give it the best flavor. Boiled bacon is a good substitute for tongue to serve with spinach.

Nut Pie Crust Pastry

When making pie crusts, or tarts, take the left-over pieces of pastry, roll them out in a sheet, brush with white of egg, and strew walnuts and a little sugar over them. Bake in a moderate oven.

Shrimp and Celery Salad

Instead of chicken salad, for a large company, one will find a salad of shrimps, chopped cabbage and chopped celery more economical, and quite as delicious for a change. Use equal quantities of the vegetables, and one-half as much of the shrimps, which are very good in some of the canned brands. These are suggested, as they are easily obtained.

FEMININE WONDER MAY LAND BERTH

Planfield High School Baseball Candidates May Have to Reckon With a Girl.

ALL AROUND PERFORMER

Miss Dorothy Crane Has Shown Remarkable Versatility in Every Branch of Sport Endeavor and She May Try for Baseball Team.

One of the best all around feminine athletes ever brought to the attention of local physical authorities is at the present time enrolled on the Plainfield High School roster under the name of Miss Dorothy Crane. This little individual, barely five feet in heighth, has secured wide recognition as the result of her all around prowess in every department of athletic endeavor. Although not a giant in stature she is remarkably versatile and can run, jump and play athletic games as well, if not better, than the average boy.

While in the Stillman Grammar School, Miss Crane played second base on her class team in the interclass league and was one of the aggregation's best fielders and a consistent hitter. While only a freshman in High School she has already started her laurel winning by capturing the silver loving cup offered by the athletic association for the tennis singles championship of the school, which she won in the tournament last fall.

Last week Miss Crane scored eighteen out of a possible twenty-one points from the foul line in their interscholastic basketball match with North Plainfield High School and brought her team up to a par with the boroughites single handed. Beside being a main factor in the Plainfield High School athletic competition she is also a leading performer in the Y. W. C. A. gym, where she practices regularly, and is without a superior in all around competition. Although she has not stated as much, it would not be a great surprise to those interested in Plainfield High School baseball to see this little feminine wonder on hand for the spring practice of the school nine and to even see her winning an infielder's position.

"Sportdom Tips"

The banner program of the basketball season has been arranged for the Y. M. C. A. court tonight, when The Daily Press All-Star team of the Interscholastic League, will stack up against the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. five in what may be the final big game of the season. Much interest has been aroused locally over the contest, as practically every scholastic institution in the city and borough is represented in the lineups of the contesting forces and the conflict will no doubt bring forth keen rivalry from the cohorts of those involved. As a preliminary attraction the Plainfield High School five will meet the team from Somerville High.

Jimmy Nash is due to make his debut in intercollegiate track and field athletics tonight in Washington, where he will compete for the University of Pennsylvania. Although he is a student of the Temple University the Penn authorities are hot on his trail and tonight's affair will be in the nature of a tryout for the local youngster. While we have ascertained that Jimmy will appear only in the sprints, we expect to soon find him in the list of jumpers and all around performers, as his prowess extends over almost every field of athletic endeavor.

Next week, with the Elks' Bowling League in full swing, the North Plainfield and Plainfield High School girls getting together for that championship battle, the North Plainfield High School athletic banquet, the Elks' beefsteak dinner and a grand finale with the Springfield Training School gym team in the local Y. M. C. A. gym, sport enthusiasts will have plenty of courses to keep them from starving. The menu is an unusually fine one and practically everything of interest is intermingled.

This bad weather has put a stop to the remodeling of Hyde Oval, and unless Old Sol heats up pretty strong within the next couple of weeks the spring opening will be delayed somewhat. Captain Smalley, of the boro nine, is giving his battery men regular sessions in limbering up and some of the most anxious infielders have also reported for the assault on the horsehide.

That aggregation of old timers looks like the real article along the come-back circuit. Even though handicapped by age and a long lay off the Ancient Five members as a unit look pretty good and the youngsters who stack up against their dads will have no sinecure in putting over a victory. It's never too late to learn and as none of these players ever took part in a basketball game before some of them will probably spring some surprises. Coaches claim that most players know too much and therein lies the difficulty when trying to mould together a real aggregation.

The report that Jack Martin recently received an offer calling for $400 a month from the Federal League, leads us to suspect that Jack has enemies outside of the Queen City. Martin will stick with the National "commiss," however, where he is sure of three squares a day.

Hyman Abrams has been mentioned as the next North Plainfield High School basketball captain, but it doesn't bother Hyman any. He once captained a Y. M. H. A. quintet that took a walloping at the hands of some New Brunswick cats-offs.

One thing we have learned to like about that little game if indoor basketball is the fact that players are not pestered to death with Federal contracts—and yet we never heard of basketball player starving to death—did you?

Had brass knuckles not been barred by our forefathers who played that noble court pastime several real stars could have been developed into phenomenal guards on local teams during the past season. That's what makes the going smooth on the interscholastic circuit.

Another phenom has been unearthed in the athletic world around this little burg. J. E. Waldorf, hitherto an unknown, came to the fore in the Elks' wood splitting tourney the other night with a string of three scores over the 200 mark. His average was 213.1, which is not at all bad considering the opposition he was up against.

Perchance you are aware that we haven't picked a local and borough champion for the present season. If you aren't, it doesn't make any great difference.

While that Plainfield High School Athletic Association is undoubtedly gratified to learn that it will receive four or five hundred dollars of this year's annual minstrel show, those at the helm are probably aware that paraphernalia cannot be purchased with conversational money. What's the matter with making that minstrel a reality some time in he near future?

CLIFF RANDOLPH VS. MACK'S MEN

Local Heaver Will Oppose World's Champions in Amboy May 17.

BOY'S GREAT RECORD

History of His Diamond Career Has Many Ups and Downs—Will Twirl Twice a Week for the Perth Amboy Team.

Cliff Randolph, who has been signed to twirl for the Perth Amboy Pacers, is expected to be the Mathewson of the Perth Amboy twirling corps, and it wouldn't surprise Manager Billy Pfau in the least if a major league club comes along before the end of the season and buys his release.

Randolph now weighs 178 pounds and feels in better physical condition than at any time in his life. He will start training early in April in this city and should be in superb condition when he faces the Athletics in Amboy on May 17.

Although Randolph has had considerable minor league experience, he is still in his prime and in better condition today to pitch winning ball in a major league than at any time in his career. Randolph was on the road to big triumphs a few seasons ago when he suffered an attack of typhoid fever and was forced to give up pitching until last year. His record of sixty-seven scoreless innings late last August and in early September is an example of the wonderful "come back" he has made.

Randolph began his professional career with the Binghamton club, of the New York State League, during the season of 1909, winning sixteen out of twenty-five games. During the following winter the Binghamton club was sold to "Jack" Warner, the former Giant catcher. Warner brought a collection of New York semi-pro players to Binghamton in the following spring, expecting to make a creditable showing with them against the strong clubs of the New York State League. Warner underestimated the strength of his opponents and after the first few weeks of the season was at the tail end of the league, Randolph being his only winning pitcher.

Cliff had won seven straight games before May 30 and Warner sold him to the Troy team of the same league for $500. A few days later Warner sold his interest in the Binghamton club to some business men, with the understanding that Randolph was included. When it was discovered that Randolph had been sold to Troy there was a big complaint by the new owners. Secretary Farrell ordered Randolph back to Binghamton and the Troy club refused to let him return. Randolph was suspended by Farrell and after eight weeks' idleness the case was settled by an additional payment of $500 by the Troy club to the new Binghamton owners. Randolph finished the season with Troy and was drafted by Providence, of the International League for the season of 1911.

In the fall of 1910 Randolph was taken with typhoid, falling from 160 pounds to ninety-eight. Despite his illness Cliff reported to Providence for spring training in 1911, but his condition was soon discovered and he was released. Randolph then went to Albany, N. Y., and worked out with the Albany team until the middle of May, when he signed with Binghamton again. Fair success attended his work until the first part of July, when the extreme heat forced him to quit. Cliff was under the care of a physician for the remainder of the year. During the 1912 season he kept away from baseball, but last spring he thought he was strong enough to take up the game again. Cliff had a little trouble getting started in 1913, because of soft muscles, but when the warm weather set in he was pitching in great form. His numerous shut-out games last season attracted the attention of major league scouts, but none of the offers made him were big enough to cause him to give up a good job he holds in this city.

Manager Pfau had watched Randolph's work last summer, and in December when he became interested in Perth Amboy baseball, Billy started to negotiate with Cliff. It was hard pulling to get the blonde twirler to seriously consider his propositions, but Pfau persisted, with the result that Randolph has signed a contract and during the season of 1914, he will pitch two games a week for Perth Amboy.

JIM NASH A COMPETITOR IN GEORGETOWN EVENTS

One of the athletes entered in the annual field and track meet to be held on Georgetown University's track in Convention Hall, Washington, D. C., tonight, is James Nash, of West Front street, who is at the present time a student in Temple University in Philadelphia. A number of students of the University of Pennsylvania have organized an independent aggregation to compete in various events on the program and Nash has been selected to take part in the sprints for which he has been training regularly on Franklin Field and on Penn's indoor track under the Quakertown university's athletic trainer.

Nash is the only man to take part under the Penn colors who is not a student in the university and his general all around excellence has won him the recognition necessary for this selection. The meet tonight promises to eclipse all of its predecessors in the attractiveness of its program and the number of high-class contestants. The big feature of the meet will be a one-mile relay race between Georgetown and Cornell Universities.

Other events on the card will bring together star performers from Yale, Pennsylvania, Princeton, Swarthmore, Johns Hopkins and other colleges, as well as representatives of prominent athletic clubs of New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington.

BIG DEMONSTRATION FOR TEAM OF WORLD TOURISTS

New York, March 7—Baseball fans from the Battery to the Bronx were astir early yesterday morning in anticipation of the great welcome demonstration in honor of the returning Giants and White Sox from their globe trot. Not since the world's championship series last fall has such a flood of baseball enthusiasm been turned loose on the metropolis. Pictures of the heroes of the diamond were displayed in store windows all along Broadway and baseball was the staple topic of conversation in clubs, cafes and all other places where men congregate.

During the day the committees in charge of the big welcome banquet to be given at the Hotel Biltmore tonight put the finishing touches to their arrangements. The spread will be laid at $10 a plate, which means that it is going to be "some banquet." All of the big baseball bugs and some who are not so big will be there. Altogether it is expected that nearly six hundred will gather about the festal board. Judge Edward McCall will be toastmaster and Lieutenant Governor Wagner will greet the tourists in behalf of the State. Governor Tener, president of the National League, and Ban Johnson, who directs the destinies of the American League, head the list of speakers. John McGraw, Charles Comiskey and "Jimmy" Callahan are slated to respond to the addresses of welcome.

"FLICK" REJECTS "FEDS."

"Flick" Luyster, the player who did the most to bring the Central New Jersey League pennant to this city last fall, has returned the Federal League contract forwarded him by the Baltimore management and has decided to stick with the Lawrence team of the New England League.

HOPES WILL NOT PLAY.

Manager George Leighs has announced that there will be no basketball game in the Hope Chapel gym tonight. This is the first time since the season opened that the Chapelites have not been in action.

'PLAINS' COURT PROGRAM.

The High Street Cadets, of Newark, victors over the Hope Chapel team here last week, will play the Scotch Plains Parish House five on the latter's court tonight.

N. P. H. S. FRESHMEN FIVE HAD EASY TIME WINNING

The North Plainfield High School freshman basketball team defeated the Peerless Five yesterday afternoon, in Saengerbund Hall, by the score of 45 to 30. The first half was the faster of the two and the independent team came near tying the score by a rally in the last few minutes of the period. Roughhouse featured the game and the officials were kep busy calling fouls which the teams could not shoot when they had the chance. The first half ended 13 to 11.

Every player on the school team contributed handsomely to the score while Day was the whole show for the losers.

BASEBALL NOTES

"Birdie" Cree, formerly of the Yankees, has signed with the Baltimore Orioles. This is the first time the Orioles have had a real "birdie" in the lineup.

The directors of the Texas League have issued a life pass to Governor Colquitt. It is to be of solid gold and of a size suitable to be worn as a watch charm.

George Mullin and "Cy" Falkenberg, former American League twirlers, were the first members of the Indianapolis Federal League team to make their getaway for the spring training camp.

Others will probably take a chance on the globe-girdling game, now that it is reported that $100,000 in profits is to be divided among the promoters of the Giants-White Sox tour.

Larry Lajoie's pet ambition is to play on a championship team before he retires from the game. If Larry has to play with the Naplanders to realize his ambition he is likely to die in harness.

The oldest rookie at the training camps is Kid Elberfield, who is working out with the Brooklyn Superbas at Augusta. By playing real ball in the Southern League last season "Tobasco" earned another chance to romp in the big yard.

Catcher "Peaches" Graham is still on the move. Three years ago "Peaches" was rated as one of the star backstops in the big show. Then the Braves traded him to Chicago and Chicago shipped him to Toronto. Now he has been sold to the Wichita Western League Club.

During the recent game between the Giants and the White Sox in London, Manager McGraw shook hands with King George and Mike Donlin smoked cigarettes between the innings. Looks as though the Irish members put one over on Mr. "Germany" Schaeffer.

N. P. H. S. DEFEATED BY RUTGERS "PREP"

Eventful Contest Won Handily by Home Quintet Yesterday Afternoon.

Playing the last game of the season on a strange court, the North Plainfield High School basketball team met defeat at the hands of the Rutgers Prep. five, yesterday afternoon, at New Brunswick. The final score was 37 to 30. Taking the condition of the floor into consideration the game was of a fast nature and the score was close at all times. The result of the contest came as a surprise to the boroughites.

The Prep. boys soon got started and took the lead from the locals with two field goals and three fouls, of which McGovern made a specialty. He dropped the ball in from the fifteen foot mark eight times out of ten tries. Dunning added two of the two point variety and Love then scored six points. The home team was guilty of many fouls and the husky local forward made about an even break in shooting. The first half ended with the score standing 23 to 17.

With one minute left to play Captain Burner was injured and forced to retire, Conroy taking a forward and VanMater going to guard. For the winners, McGovern, Hasbrook and Conger were the stars, while Love and Dunning led in the scoring for the boroughites.

News Films of the Passing Show

George Paton of Paterson, N. J., had 50 cents in the pot when police raided a poker game. He stayed and was arrested.

After consulting a Paterson (N. J.) lawyer about suit for damages for a broken arm Mrs. Santina Costa fell and broke a leg as she was leaving his office.

Fred Springhorn of Patchogue, N. Y., after voting twenty-two years and serving as constable, found he was not naturalized, having forgotten his second papers.

Harry M. Gescheidt, a New York lawyer, left $150,000, half of his fortune, for the establishment of a bread line and stipulated that every loaf distributed should be stamped with his name.

Alexander McGregor was rolled through wet snow in front of a locomotive for a distance of 150 feet at Peabody, Mass., and when help reached him was in the middle of a snowball six feet in diameter.

PAINT PALATES TO MAKE BOYS QUIT CIGARETTES.

Treatment Advised by Recorder May Be Adopted For Hoboken (N. J.) Schools.

A crusade to curb the cigarette habit among boys—and men, too—by application of nitrate of silver on the palates of the victims has been inaugurated by Recorder John J. McGovern of Hoboken, N. J.

If the treatment proves a success it may be introduced in the public schools of the city, the recorder announces.

"I heard of the success of this treatment through the experiments of a German professor," said Recorder McGovern, "and found that it had been tried by the Anti-Cigarette league in Chicago, and I obtained a copy of the prescription there."

At one session about fifty men and boys had their palates and throats painted by Drs. Joseph Londrigan and John Grannelli of the medical staff of the Hoboken board of education. All agreed that the taste was worse than the cigarettes, but each had a different version descriptive of what the taste resembled.

"The taste will grow more repulsive by tomorrow," was the confidential whisper of one of the physicians to the recorder. "If they try to smoke a cigarette or cigar for the next day or two the effects of the treatment will be sickening."

Each of the "patients" received a prescription, providing a wash of the nitrate of silver to be taken after meals or when the desire for a smoke comes upon him, and all were ordered to chew the bitter root of the gentian plant as a further step toward a cure.

FIRST AID TO NOUVEAU RICHE.

College Girls Teach Women of Wealth to Use Good English.

By posing for artists who draw advertisements for men's clothing, by instructing classes of foreigners in English, by translating foreign correspondence for business houses and by various other means, students at the University of Chicago who are working their way through school last year earned $109,654—a total of $83 each.

The annual report of the employment bureau of the university gives figures showing that many of the students earned from $2 to $2.50 a day, according to their talents. Most of the positions filled were as waiters, stenographers, salesmen and janitors.

The bureau had a steady call from women of recently acquired wealth, who have been put in social positions in which their lack of education exposes them to embarrassment, for girls to tutor them in the elementary subjects, such as English and rhetoric. The report says tutors receive an average of $1.25 an hour and often more than $2.

ARMY BARS WHITE HORSES.

General Order to Officers to Discourage Their Use.

In view of the fact that gray and white horses can be distinguished at a much greater distance than those of other colors and shades, it is long since United States army quartermasters have bought any such horses for the army, and the gray or white horse troop that formerly was found in almost every cavalry regiment has disappeared.

Following out this policy, a general order has been prepared to the following effect: "A gray or white horse is not recognized as a suitable mount for use in the field in active service, and the possession by an officer of such a horse should not be encouraged." Another reason for discarding gray and white horses is the difficulty of keeping them clean while on other than garrison service.

Urges Largest Convention Hall.

A convention hall for Chicago capable of holding the largest conventions of the United States and also with facilities for several at one time is proposed by Joseph H. Defrees, president of the Chicago Association of Commerce. In 1913 Chicago had 330 conventions.

EXPRESS HOPE BAYONNE BANK MAY BE OPENED ON APRIL 1

Bayonne, March 7—Following a conference between officials of the First National Bank and the Union Trust Company, of Jersey City, it was announced that there was hope the institution would be open April 1 as a branch of the Jersey City Bank.

Women depositors in the First National Bank are circulating petitions asking that 100 cents be paid them on the dollar. A house-to-house canvass is being made and the women say they will file the petitions with Prosecutor Robert S. Hudspeth.

National Bank Examiner Frank B. Shutts has forwarded to Washington details of the proposed merger agreed upon at the conference, and officials predict that action on these details will be taken soon by the Comptroller of the Currency.

ROOSTER ALIVE UNDER DRIFT THREE DAYS, AVERS FARMER

Washington, N. J., March 7—Reuben Bryan, a farmer, residing near Imlaydale, whose word is unquestioned, was in Washington Thursday and told a tale of a rooster living under a four-foot snow bank for three days.

Mr. Bryan was digging paths about his barnyard Wednesday afternoon and came to a big drift. After he had removed several feet of the snow he said he felt something move under his shovel, and investigation showed a big Plymouth Rock rooster buried under the drift.

The rooster's feathers were not even ruffled, Mr. Bryan averred, and he was as dry as if he had been in the coop. As soon as released the fowl ran to some corn spread on the ground and devoured a quantity equal to what he had lost during his fast.

SCHOOL PRINCIPAL WINS OUT.

New Brunswick, March 7—Having refused to resign as principal of the Highland Park School, when asked to do so two years ago, declaring he would only be removed under charges, Frank E. Spring, won a victory this week when the school board adopted a resolution of Frank Merritt, one of the members, recognizing him as principal and raising his salary $200. Mr. Spring was asked to resign when Richard Parker was president. Last spring three new men were elected to the board, all friends of Mr. Spring. Then Mr. Parker resigned and then A. F. W. Mueller. They were succeeded by men favorable to Mr. Spring. At this week's meeting four of the six were present.

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

Says Backache is Sign You Have Been Eating Too Much Meat.

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink.

SAFETY FIRST

In making a new banking connection, safety is the first consideration. The State Trust Company has a capital of One Hundred Thousand Dollars and a surplus of more than Fifty Thousand Dollars which constitutes a safety fund of approximately one to four in relation to deposits. In addition to this strong position, its funds are so invested that a large proportion of its assets can be converted into cash in twenty-four hours.

These facts are commended to the consideration of anyone contemplating a banking connection or a change in arrangements already existing.

MYSTERIOUS FIRE CAUSES BIG LOSS

Courier News Plant Damaged by Flames and Water to Extent of $10,000.

ENGINE GIVEN TRYOUT

New Nott Auto Apparatus Used for the First Time—Interior of the Place Gutted by Water—Fire Confined to Ten Foot Radius.

Fire and water did damage estimated at $10,000 to the new $150,000 fireproof home of the Plainfield Courier-News Publishing Company, on Park avenue, in an early morning blaze, yesterday. The blaze was discovered shortly after 6 o'clock in a desk used by William Morrison, the foreman of the printing department. When the firemen arrived in response to an alarm sent in from box No. 13, the flames were shooting through the cracks of the doors that separate the composing and editorial departments.

From outward appearances the chattels in the interior of the fireproof structure were doomed to destruction and the firemen took advantage of their first opportunity to give the new Nott engine a tryout. One stream from the apparatus with a pressure of 260 pounds was thrown into the rear of the building and the first floor and basement were literally flooded when the recall was sounded. The fire loss was trifling compared with the loss sustained through water damage. Several large printing contracts, one representing time and stock valued at $3,000, were destroyed and the six linotype machines and job presses were put out of commission.

The large Goss perfecting press, on which the newspaper is printed and which is located in the basement, was also considerably damaged. The flames were confined to a radius of ten feet, but water soaked the entire contents of the structure. Several boxes of stock and a number of cases of type were ruined.

The blaze, which was of a mysterious origin, was discovered by Patrolman Charles Wicht, who noticed smoke issuing from the door of the building as he made his rounds. Patrolman Craig had tried the door shortly before, but noticed nothing unusual in the place. The loss is totally covered by insurance.

A crew of men were kept at work all day yesterday putting the interior of the plant in shape and the paper was issued as usual today. The linotype machines were soaked with water and had to undergo a thorough overhauling.

BURGLARS GET THIRTY CENTS AND SOME GOODS

Burglars, thought by the borough police to have been small boys, entered the grocery store of Carhart & Son, of Somerset street, sometime between midnight and 3 o'clock this morning, and stole thirty cents from the cash register and some bottled goods from the shelves in the store. Patrolman Pope found the rear door of the grocery standing open at 3 o'clock. He investigated, but found no trace of the burglars.

Mr. Carhart was notified and upon examining his store and stock discovered the loss of some goods and the thirty cents which he had left in the cash register when he closed the store Saturday night. Chief Marshal Weiss is conducting an investigation and thinks that he is on the track of the youthful thieves.

FUNERAL SERVICE OF B. DEWITT GILES IS HELD

The funeral service of B. DeWitt Giles were held this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, at his late home, on New Market road, New Market. Rev. Dr. T. E. Vassar, pastor of the Baptist church, conducted the services. Burial was in Hillside cemetery. Handsome floral pieces were sent by the New Market Patrons of Husbandry, Friendship Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., and by Fire Company, No. 1, of New Market.

MEN'S ASSOCIATION INVITED.

The Men's Association of Warren chapel have invited the Men's Associations of other churches to attend a meeting at the chapel Friday night, to be addressed by Mayors Percy H. Stewart and Robert Clark, Jr., on the subject of "The Advantages and Disadvantages of the Consolidation of Plainfield and North Plainfield."

PRIZE BIRDS ESCAPE WHEN ROOF COLLAPSES

$3,000 Worth of Tropical Stock Set Free in Freezing Weather Conditions.

Melting snow on the roof of the game preserve of Percy Cook, on Mountain avenue, Scotch Plains, caused the covering to cave in yesterday afternoon, and the many valuable birds housed in the structure were liberated in the cold. Many of the feathered trophies were from the tropics and Mr. Cook will probably suffer a severe loss as all were exposed to the cold for a number of hours before being rounded up by keepers.

The animals liberated by the accident are valued at $3,000 and are of more than thirty different varieties. The collection included specimens from Southern Europe, South America, Africa and the Orient. A number of the prizes had not been recovered up to noon today and it is thought likely that a number of the valuable birds will perish in this climate.

Mr. Cook transfers his stock from the open cages in which they live during the summer to the heated bird houses during the winter and this structure is the one that collapsed yesterday.

FORMER COUNCILMAN MARRIED LAST FALL

While no positive announcement was made by the bridegroom himself it was definitely learned today that former Councilman Patrick J. Reville is a benedict. The fact has not been kept a secret as the genial politician's relatives and close friends have known it all along, but for reasons best known to himself he has not made it a matter of public knowledge.

The ceremony took place in Philadelphia early last fall, the bride being Miss Margaret Corrigan, whose parents live in the Quaker City. St. John's church was the scene of the wedding and only members of the two families were in attendance. The couple have since been keeping house in Philadelphia. Mrs. Reville resided in New York for a time and she and the former councilman met while he was employed at the Wanamaker store.

An effort was made by a Daily Press reporter to see Mr. Reville at the home of his mother on West Third street this morning, but he had left for New York a short time previous. He is now in the Pullman company's service as conductor, operating on the Pennsylvania railroad between New York and Chi-Chicago.

EXTENSIVE ALTERATIONS PLANNED AT HERR'S SCHOOL

Extensive alterations are being made on the third floor of the Woodhull & Martin building, on East Front street, which is occupied by Herr's School. It is planed to improve the entrance and hallway of the building. The alteration of the third floor has been made necessary owing to the growth of the school which necessitated planning for additional space. Professor and Mrs. Herr, in the past nine years that they have conducted the school have become well-known in this section of the State.

Pupils come from a radius of forty miles and each year there is a larger student body in attendance. The school is essentially a Plainfield institution and is the only business college in this city. When the improvements now in progress are completed, it is planned to hold a reception when the public will be permitted to inspect the school.

BUSY WEEK IN THE LEGISLATURE

Partisan Fights Are Expected on Several Important Measures.

Trenton, March 9—Partisan fights over several important political measures, including four or five election bills; the continuation of the battle to defeat the enemies of the small Boards of Freeholder bill; the Republican onslaught on the automobile legislation proposed by the Democratic Motor Vehicle Commissioner; a further struggle with the State financial situation, and the combat to keep the reactionary lobby from crippling reform government as represented by the Walsh Commission Government act, are some of the features which will make this the most notable week of the present session of the Legislature.

Both branches of the lawmakers will convene tonight for the opening of the ninth week of the 1914 meeting. Last week saw a record breaking amount of proposed legislation put into the hopper and dozens of measures were advanced to the stage of final consideration, so that during the next few days the arena of statute making will be the scene of unusual activities.

SYLVANUS CONKLIN DIES IN 94TH YEAR

Well-Known Citizen Passes Away at His Home in the Borough.

Sylvanus C. Conklin, for over fifty years a resident of Plainfield, died yesterday at his home at 44 Fairview avenue, in the borough. He was 94 years old. Some time ago Mr. Conklin suffered a bad fall upon the ice and the shock to his system was severe, owing to his advanced age. He was taken ill about two weeks ago. Death was due to the infirmities of age. Previous to his last illness, Mr Conklin had enjoyed unusually good health. He was in full possession of his faculties, his mind was keen and he was alive to all of the topics of the day through his extensive reading of books, newspapers and magazines. Mr. Conklin had the reputation, and deservedly, of being one of the best read men in this community.

For many years Mr. Conklin was a large property owner of this city owning numerous valuable parcels on West Front street. Most of these holdings he disposed of about a year ago, when he removed from Plainfield to North Plainfield. He has not been actively engaged in business of any kind since the death of his wife, which occurred about twenty-five years ago.

Endowed with kindliness, a generous spirit and other attributes of a most excellent character, Mr. Conklin was highly regarded by those who knew him. He was a lover of children and the little ones of his neighborhood were very fond of him, never failing to receive from his hands gifts of candy and other sweets dear to children's hearts. Mr. Conklin leaves surviving him two daughters, who made their home with him. They are Mrs. Sarah A. Coons and Miss Mary A. Conklin.

The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at his late home in the borough. The services will be conducted by Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, pastor of the First Baptist church, of which Mr. Conklin was a member for many years. He is believed to have been the oldest member of that congregation. Of a retiring nature, quiet and unassuming always, Mr. Conklin never sought or held any public office, nor was he an officer of the church with which he was associated for so long a time. Burial will be in Hillside cemetery. While Mr. Conklin had lived in Plainfield for more than half a century he was not born here. His birthplace was Bedford, in Westchester county, New York.

HIS CONDITION CRITICAL.

David E. Titsworth, of 909 Madison avenue, who for the past month has been at a sanitarium at Battle Creek, Mich., undergoing a treatment for heart trouble, returned to his home last week, in a critical condition. At present Mr. Titsworth is under the care of Doctors Alfred F. VanHorn and B. Van D. Hedges. Mr. Titsworth's condition was such that Dr. Janes, of New York, was called in consultation Saturday morning, by his attending physicians. Slight hope is held out for the recovery of Mr. Titsworth.

MANY PROPOSALS FOR AN HEIRESS

Miss Johnson Sought in Marriage by Admirers Who Are After That $25,000.

REJECTS ALL BUT ONE

She Has Been Keeping Company With One Young Man Since Coming to This Country and Will Give Him First Chance.

Since the terms of the will under which she will receive a bequest of $25,000 from her late uncle, Gustav Waling, of Stockholm, Sweden, have been made public, Miss Alma Johnson, a domestic in the employ of a family on Evergreen avenue, has been showered with proposals, many of which have come through the mail and others have applied in person. Those who have personally presented their claims to her hand in marriage have been informed by the heiress-to-be that she already has a lover and is seeking no substitute.

A relative of the girl said this morning that her prospective husband was a Swedish employe working for the local telephone company. Inquiries at the commercial office of the company, this morning, revealed the fact that one John J. Carty was the favored individual and Carty himself was not reluctant to discuss his matrimonial intentions. Carty claims that he is the only employe of the telephone company in this city of the Swedish nationality.

In order to fulfill the terms of the will, Miss Johnson will have to marry within one year or forfeit all claims to the bequest. In the event of her being unable to comply with the terms, the money will go to her brother, August Lenus Johnson, of San Francisco. The heiress claims that she will have no trouble in marrying now, that she has selected the right party and epects to have complied with her benefactor's wishes in two months.

Miss Johnson further states that future claims to her charms will be ignored by her. Her prospective husband has been an admirer for some time past and his intentions were in no way prompted by the prospects of money that came in the unepected windfall.

BOY SERIOUSLY HURT CATCHING ON A CAB

Wheel Had to Be Removed to Extricate Six-Year-Old Willie Jaeger.

Willie Jaeger, the six-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. William Jaeger, of East Second street, was seriously hurt in an accident on Watchung avenue, yesterday afternoon, that almost cost him his life. The boy, in company with a companion, attempted to catch a ride on the back springs of a cab driven by John Kennedy, and in pulling himself up, lost his balance and fell into a rear wheel. The fact that the horse was walking is all that saved the child from being killed. Before Kennedy knew what was occurring, the little victim was wedged tightly between the cab body and the wheel, his head held tightly between the spokes. The shouts of passersby caused the driver to stop, but it was found impossible to extricate the child until the wheels had been taken from its axle.

The boy was taken to his home where it was found he had been seriously bruised and lacerated. In some places on his back, strips of skin were torn off several inches long and nearly as wide. Dr. A. H. Pittis was not fully decided whether he had been injured internally or not, and is awaiting developments.

The boy's father is one of the best known fire fighters in the city service. He it as present a member of West End Hose Company, No. 3.

STATE ELKS GATHER AT LOCAL CLUB HOUSE

Plainfield B. P. O. E. Entertain Delegates From Twenty-seven Lodges.

The recently organized New Jersey State Association of Elks, held its first quarterly meeting in the local Elks' clubhouse, on Watchung avenue, yesterday afternoon. Sixty delegates, representing twenty-seven lodges, were in attendance. Morris Odell, of Camden, was the presiding officer.

A number of matters pertaining to the welfare of New Jersey Elks, were discussed, among them being the "Big Brother" movement, which is now being given national prominence by the order. It was decided to hold the next meeting at Trenton in June and the State convention at Long Branch, beginning September 9. Various interesting talks were given by delegates whose names are familiar to Elks throughout the State.

Previous to the meeting, the visitors enjoyed a full course dinner in the grill room of the clubhouse. The committee in charge of the gathering for the local lodge was composed of Exalted Ruler Frank H. Smith, John H. Cose, Clarence E. Teel and William R. Townsend.

MISS VAN ARDSDALE IS STILL MISSING

Miss Ella VanArsdale, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. VanArsdale, of 1004 West Third stret, who is reported to have eloped on Thursday last with John Boice, of Westervelt avenue, is still away from home. The young women is about seventeen years of age. She is said to have met Boice on February 24 at the Co. K fair.

That the young woman had made plans to go away now seems apparent, for she left a letter, which was found Friday by her mother, in which she said that she was going to Canada with Boice and would return in a year. This letter was found in the top drawer of Miss VanArsdale's dresser at home.

The mother sustained such a shock upon learning of her daughter's actions that she nearly collapsed. It was learned that the only clothing taken by the young woman when she left was what she wore. Mr. Boice, it is said, has been living with his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Rice, who recently removed here from Hackettstown. The VanArsdale's are greatly upset over the affair.

DEATH OF WELL KNOWN BORO CITIZEN

Thomas Lloyd, Aged 84 Years, Succumbs to a Long Illness.

Thomas Lloyd died on Saturday evening at his home at 65 Washington avenue, following a long illness. He was 84 years old and had lived in Plainfield for thirty-seven years. Mr. Lloyd was born in Philadelphia. He is survived by two sisters, who made their home with him. They are the Misses Elizabeth and Anna Lloyd.

The funeral, which will be private, will be held at the late residence, tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. Charles Kues, of Holy Cross church, will officiate. Mr. Lloyd was for many years a member of that church and was at one time one of its verytrymen. Burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

HOPE EXTENDED FOR "UNCLE" DAVE CARNEY, AFTER ILLNESS

Reports from the bedside of David J. Carney, publisher of The Review, who has been seriously ill for several weeks, are that his condition is a little better and the doctors think that he may pull through. Mr. Carney, who has a host of friends in the city and borough, is suffering from dropsy and asthma, and some days ago it was thought that he could not get well. The later reports are much more encouraging. During Mr. Carney's illness the business of the Monarch Printing Company is being continued as usual, under the direction of Miss Kennedy, the office manager, and The Review is being edited by Mr. Sill.

CLEVER POLICE WORK TRAPPED TWO CROOKS

Fellow-countryman Complainant Against Italians Who Are Fined $10 Each.

Because it was too cold to ride on the rear platform af a Main Line car and guard a large bundle of leather goods which he had purchased from a dealer in Newark and was bringing to his home in this city, Pascasio Feori, of Clinton avenue, was minus his stock when he reached Plainfield yesterday afternoon. He reported the matter to Sergeant Higgins at police headquarters and after securing a description of the man from the trolley conductor and some information that he picked up along Jackson avenue, where the crook was supposed to have alighted, the police officer arrested Harry Tebile, of 263 Watson avenue, and Tony Correi, of 719 East Second street.

When arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court, this morning, charged with disorderly conduct and larceny, the two Italians pleaded guilty to the charge and were sentenced to pay a fine of $10 or spend forty days in the county jail. Sergeant Higgins recovered the bundle of leather in the home of Tebile, where it had been hid by the thieves.

MISS ANNA GORSLINE GOES TO HER REWARD

For More Than a Quarter of a Century Was Engaged in Business Here.

After an illness of several months, Miss Anna Leverich Gorsline died this morning at her home at 331 East Sixth street. Her condition had been known to be critical by her friends for some time. With her sister, Miss Margaret D. Gorsline, Miss Gorsline for more than a quarter of a century conducted an art needlework embroidery shop on Park avenue near Second street. Both sisters have many friends and a wide acquaintanceship in this city.

Miss Gorsline was a member of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, and a regular attendant at the services. Only a short time ago the sisters disposed of their art needlework embroidery shop on Park avenue to Mrs. Irving Bininger, and it had been their intention to spend the rest of their lives in leisure, their earnings during the many years of work having enabled them to lay by a competence. The sisters came to Plainfield from Flushing, Long island.

FRANK MONCTON LOSES $5 THROUGH OVER INDULGENCE

Frank Moncton, whose home is in a barn on Grove street, and who has been a prisoner in the borough police court many times for drunkenness, was again before Recorder Frederick Hand, this morning. He was arrested Sunday, and was said by the police to be very much the worse for over indulgence in liquor. He was fined $5 in court today and not having any money was led to a cell.

Moncton said that he was a lather by occupation, and Recorder Hand commented upon the fact that the last man charged with drunkenness before him also said he was a lather and that it must be a disease peculiar to men of the particular occupation.

THIEVES GOT LIQUOR.

Some time during last night or the early hour of this morning, sneak thieves entered the Eastern Bottling Company's plant on West Second street and stole a bottle of whiskey and a bottle of wine. Entrance was gained through a scuttle in the roof. Detective-Sergeant Flynn is now following the scent of rum in an effort to nab the crook that has been operating successfully in this section during the past week.

CHARGED WITH FIGHTING.

Charged with fighting in a West Front street pool parlor at midnight, Saturday night, John Kane and John Eskeson, of West Third street, and Albert Johanson, of Netherwood avenue, were arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the City Court, this morning. After a reprimand the trio were allowed to go upon their promise to do better in the future.

MRS. RISING WILL SPEAK.

The annual meeting of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the Crescent Avenue church will be held in the parlors of the edifice tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. There will be an informal address on "Syria" by Mrs. Lucie E. Rising, missionary of the First Baptist church who recently paid a visit to that country.

WILL EXTRADITE GENTLEMAN THIEF

Apprehension of "W. Arlington Danton" May Clear up Local Robberies.

COMMITTED TO TOMBS

Sentenced to Serve Thirty Days as a Fugitive from Justice During Which Extradition Papers Will be Drawn Up and Requisition Applied for.

William R. Keith, the debonnair bandit of many aliases who summered in this city, was arraigned before a New York police magistrate Saturday afternoon and sentenced to the Tombs for a period of thirty days as a fugitive from justice. While he is serving this sentence the necessary papers will be drawn for his extradition to New Jersey and Governor Fielder will ask Governor Glynn, of New York, to honor the New Jersey requisition, which will charge him with carrying concealed weapons, assaulting an officer of the law and threatening to kill.

Steps were taken Saturday to have Keith, or "W. Arlington Danton," as he was known here, indicted at the earliest possible opportunity by the Union County Grand Jury, and the case will be rushed with all possible speed. Danton is known as the "gentleman thief" because of his fastidious attire at all times, his devotions to the latest fashions for men, his almost faultless manners and his delight to associate with reputable persons of both sexes when he is not engaged in annexing to himself valuables belonging to someone else.

His home is just outside of Easton, Pa., on the Philadelphia turnpike. He is a machinist by trade and at times styles himself as a mechanical dentist, claiming to have graduated from the University of Pennsylvania Dental College. Under the name of Keith he was arrested in Philadelphia for highway robbery in March, 1907, and sentenced by Judge Biddle to ten years' imprisonment. As told in The Daily Press of Friday, he was released last summer and came immediately to Plainfield where he established an office for the American Correspondence School of Mechanical Dentistry.

Since his arrest old records have been investigated and it has been found that he was arrested in July, 1905, in Flemington for robbing a freight car, and broke jail. In October, 1905, he was arrested in Reading, Pa., on a larceny charge, but the case was settled by the return of the stolen property. A week later he was arrested for stealing a quantity of copper wire from the Neversink Mountain Hotel, and sent to jail for one year in Reading. His pictures is in all of the police galleries of Philadelphia, Reading, Plainfield, New York and other places.

Since his arrest Danton has been very talkative and discusses his case freely with reporters who are allowed to see him. He has announced that he will attempt to prove an alibi for the charges against him in this State. He says that he and his wife were in Newark the Saturday night the Summit detective was kidnapped and that they went to Trenton to visit friends on Sunday and were in Easton the following Monday. Detectives George and Ganon, who identified him as the Summit culprit by pictures furnished by the Plainfield police, say that they will make a strong case against him. When the deed in question was committed in Summit the detectives got a good look at their man and are confident that Danton is the highwayman who tied them in a barn.

Detective George, who was bound hand and foot by Danton, came to Plainfield last Wednesday and during a consultation with Chief of Police Kiely and Detective-Sergeant John J. Flynn, concluded that the theories furnished by the local authorities were the most plausible and set out for the mechanical dentist. After leaving Plainfield the detective went to Philadelphia where Danton's photograph and records were produced by Chief of Detectives Cameron. Next the trail led to Reading and to Easton. Additional convincing evidence was found in the latter place through Detectives Archie Miller and William Neimeyer, of the city and county forces, respectively. It was also determined that Danton was living in New York where vague clues were being followed by Detectives Owen and Fitzpatrick, of New York, and Lieut. William Fisher, of the Cosgrove Agency.

Through Detective Neimeyer, of Easton, and Chief Detective T. H. Wilder, of the Central forces, of Phillipsburg, the New York address of Danton was placed in the hands of Captain Cosgrove, Thursday morning. Within two hours Danton was arrested in New York by Lieut. Fisher, Detective George and Detectives Owen and Fitzpatrick. He was liv-

STYLISH RELIABLE

The High Cost of Living

Nowadays the young man who would inflict his affects upon the damsel of his choice is forced to be a millionaire on Wednesday evenings and a pauper for the rest of the week.

And he must be particularly careful that the clothes he wears keep pace with the latest wriggle of fashion.

And that's just the kind of clothing we sell—at prices amazingly low.

Smartly tailored suits, made of the very latest materials, full of style and snap—may be found at Rothberg's at rock bottom prices.

A. S. Newberry was a guest at a banquet given at the Biltmore, New York city, Saturday night, by the National and American Leagues to the world tourists.

Dunellen & Vicinity

The Public Service electric department has a large force of men stringing new wires between Plainfield and this town. It is stated by the officials that current will be re-installed here by the middle of the week for both private and public lighting purposes. The telephone company has had a number of men busy around the borough and up to Saturday night all the 'phones, with the exception of a very few on the outskirts of town, were in working order.

John Rhinehart, who has been detained at his home the past week by an attack of grip, is again able to resume his duties.

Miss May Smalley, of Dunellen avenue, is detained at her home by a severe attack of typhoid fever.

Mrs. Charles Tinsman, of North avenue, is detained at her home by a very severe attack of grip. In addition to the illness of Mrs. Tinsman, her two small daughters are also confined to their beds by illness.

Edward Hannon, of Front street, has taken a position with O. M. Webber, the North avenue plumber.

Matthias Giddes, of Front street, who has been ill for the past two weeks with grip which finally developend into lumbago, is reported as improving steadily.

John Doty, of Dunellen avenue, who has been ill at his home for the past week, is improving rapidly and it is thought that within another two weeks that he will be able to return to his duties with the Dunellen Lumber and Supply Company, where he is employed.

A special meeting of the Township Committee was called for last Friday night. It was intended to take up the matter of appointing a man for the vacancy on the local police force, but as the man who is to get the job has not moved to town, the matter was postponed until another date when a special meeting will be held for that purpose.

Henry Demarest, of Front street, who has been spending a few days with friends in Bayonne, returned to his home this morning.

In the absence of electric lights in the town, all types of lamps are being brought into use. The merchants in town have been besieged by the housewives for candles, kerosene oil and all shapes, sizes and descriptions of wicks and lamp chimneys. All the institutions of the town are burning candles at night and the drain on the meager supplies carried by the local dealers has been so great that all those who wished to accommodate their patrons were compelled to go to some of the larger towns for additional supplies. It is thought that the electric lighting facilities will be re-installed during this week, by the Public Service Corporation.

All the telephones in town are still out, due to the results of the heavy storm last week. The telephone company has an army of men in their employ throughout this section of the State and will repair all damages to the local service as soon as it can be reached, which they seem to think will be by the end of the week at the latest.

The Junior League met at the home of the president, Miss Elizabeth Babcock, Friday afternoon. The younger members met at the home of the Misses Kyte, Saturday morning, being engaged in sewing for the foreign and domestic missions.

He will play the Widor fifth symphony, Bach D major fugue and lighter numbers.

Warrenville.

The Board of Education met at the Warrenville school, Saturday night. John C. Cooper, attendance officer, reported that in the six schools a total of seventeen days had been lost, comprising a total of 2,380 days' attendance. Aside from the interruption due to the storm that attendance was normal. A notice was read from the State department stating that the board must proceed with the repairs to the school in compliance with the agreement made last year at the time the school was condemned. The board decided to start the work as soon as spring opens. The committee appointed at the February meeting to visit the schools were unable to make their rounds on account of the bad weather, but will make their reports this month.

The attention of John Miller, overseer of the poor, was called to the destitute condition of a family living in Dock Watch Hollow. The father who set out before the storm Sunday for his work in New York, not expecting any unusual weather, had made only the usual provision for the family. When the storm came on the mother was unable to get out through the drifts, and was marooned with her four small children with little provisions and with practically no fuel. John Gunton, a neighbor, in passing by, noticed no tracks through the snow and upon investigating learned of the family's plight and reported the matter to Mr. Miller who cared for the family until the father returned.

The sleigh riders hereabouts have had a number of upsets, but fortunately have escaped serious injury. Among those meeting with accidents were Victor Leritz, in a cutter on the Warrenville hill; Harry Cole, while driving a team of mules on Steffen's hill, and George Muse at Mt. Bethel. Mr. Muse's horse ran away but was stopped by Frank Alletta in Springdale before any damage was done.

Myrtle Cooper is stopping with Mrs. Garet Garrett, of Bound Brook, where she will make an extended stay.

THE TELEPHONE OPERATORS.

Throughout the trying days of last week, when the trolley cars were not running, and it was hard to get anywhere on foot, there was one group of workers in the city of Plainfield who did much to relieve the situation, although they were under a strain such as they had probably never been under before. We refer to the obliging and efficient force of young women at the local telephone central. Under the most trying conditions they were continuously given wire problems to solve by subscribers who were fortunate enough to have connection with the central station, and the way in which the service was handled speaks mightily for the patience of these everpresent, but unseen toilers. With nearly two thousand phones disconnected, and no way of telling whether the wires were down, or the subscriber they attempted to ring merely did not answer, and oftentimes with most impatient persons calling for some one on a dead line, they met every request for a number with cheerful voices, well concealing how tired they were, and how nerve-racking the job was. We may criticise the Telephone Company for the high rates, and for what seems like inefficient service at times when things are normal, but no one can criticise the young women operators for the way in which they handled the service during the troublous days of last week.

KNOCKERS AND KICKERS.

Every community has its knockers. They seem to be of perennial growth and omnipresent. But, no matter where they are or what the condition of things, they are true to their nature as knockers. Some people may class knockers with kickers, but they make a great mistake. They are two entirely different breeds.

A kicker, as a rule, is not a faultfinder in the general acceptance of the term. He is rather one who when he sees conditions that ought to be remedied kicks in an effort to bring about the remedy. Often he succeeds in his object. But, whether he succeeds or not, he must be credited with sincerity and a real desire for the betterment of things. He does not kick merely for the sake of kicking. The kicker may be considered a public benefactor in many respects, especially when compared with the knocker. He kicks not only for his own benefit but for that of others. If he sees a situation that he thinks should be relieved he investigates and, when he is sure he is right, kicks vehemently and oftentimes starts a movement that brings about results that are desired. That's why the kicker often is a useful member of society.

The knocker is altogether different from the kicker. He is essentially a faultfinder. He does not think that all the knocking and faultfinding he can do in his lifetime can change the situation that he knocks about. He calls up some condition in his own community and tells what a nuisance it is, and how it is working evil and will continue to do so for ever and ever. He says there can never be any betterment and roasts whomever he chooses to blame in the matter. There is always some one to blame and the knocker knows who it is; you bet he does. He never tells why he did not have the foresight to enter protest before the condition he knocks about became a reality, but always can name others who should have taken preventative steps.

We have no use for the knocker. His only accomplishment is to create discontent. He never gets anywhere. There are conditions in every community that need bettering, but knocking doesn't help any. The person who sees where improvement can be made and then proceeds to do what he can to bring about such improvements is the useful citizen. There is always a way to remedy existing evils if an earnest effort is made in that direction. But not by knocking. If the knocker were not a pessimist he would not be a knocker. The loyal citizen is the one who seeks the remedy for the evil and proceeds to do what he can to apply it. There is usually a remedy to be found if sought for earnestly and honestly. Even if there is no remedy it does no good to knock. No bad situation was ever made better by howling and knocking about it. Usually it is made worse. Don't knock, boost!

Henry Rogers wants to know what the farmers are going to do for help up in Warren Township if they keep on raising the pay of the Plainfield policemen, thereby attracting all of the young men away from the plows. He says that it adds to the high cost of living. "Uncle Henry" ought to know.

Juding by the report of the meeting of the Joint Sewage Commission one day last week, President Clay of the Common Council "wants to be shown" before the Darling farm is purchased.

A local young woman has received a bequest of $25,000 from a relative in Sweden, provided she marries within a year. The line will please form to the left.

MISS MABEL A. BATTY BRIDE OF FRANK EVANS

Announcement is made of the marriage of Frank W. Evans, formerly contract agent of the commercial department of the Public Service Corporation, of this city, and Miss Mabel Allen Batty, of Easton, N. Y., a former teacher in the Plainfield public schools. The wedding took place at Schaghticoke, N. Y., Saturday afternoon. Mrs. Ettie Evans, of Somerset street, the mother of the groom, was among the guests present at the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Evans will live at La Crosse, Wisconsin, where the groom is superintendent of the La Crosse Gas and Electric Company. The young couple have many friends in Plainfield.

ing in a first-class apartment house with his wife and child. He at first became indignant over his arrest, but finally changed his mood after being confronted with his police record and photograph.

In his room were found jimmies, an assortment of overcoats, walking sticks, derby hats and soft hats, electric flashlights and suitcases.

MRS. BRIDGET McDEVITT.

Mrs. Bridget McDevitt, of 333 Manson place, died at her home last night following a short illness. She has been a resident of Plainfield for the past thirty-two years and is survived by her husband and two children, Miss Rose and James, both of Plainfield. The funeral will be held Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock in St. Mary's church, where a solemn requiem mass will be celebrated. Interment will be made in St. Mary's cemetery.

PATRICK CORRIGAN'S FUNERAL.

The funeral service for Patrick Corrigan were held in St. Mary's church this morning at 9 o'clock, Father Daniel F. Hogan officiating. The bearers were John Murphy, John Sloyan, Michael Regan, Michael Waldron, James Kyle and John Simpson, all members of the A. O. H. Interment was made in St. Mary's cemetery.

The two children of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis E. Waring, of West Seventh street, are confined to their home with a severe attack of pneumonia.

CELEBRATE THE "FEAST OF PURIM"

Hebrew Children of Temple Sholem Give Entertainment on Eve of Holiday.

In celebration of the Feast of Purim, children of the members of Temple Sholem took part in a Purim play and musical entertainment given at Temple Sholem, yesterday afternoon. Among the numbers were a violin and piano recital entitled "Romance," by Cecil Newcorn, Jerome and Harold Livingston; piano selection, by Dorothy Sklarew, a song by Julia Fiedler, a recitation by Sophie Schloss, a piano solo, "Spinning Song," by Jerome Livingston; an address by Rev. M. Schoenbrun; a recitation by Jerome Newcorn, a piano solo by Pauline Fass, an address by Judge William Newcorn, and a final chorus of "My Country 'Tis of Thee," by the assemblage. The entertainment was enjoyable and largely attended.

Plainfield Hebrews will celebrate the Feast of Purim, tomorrow. Of the real origin of this feast little or nothing is said to be known. There are those who believe that the Book of Esther was really writtten in exaltation of this well known feast.

It is a day of feasting and merrymaking in commemoration of the events recorded in the Book of Esther. According to the Jewish calendar this is the fourteenth day of Adar. Cities with walls, as in Joshua's time, observed the feast on the fifteenth day. It is an anomaly in Jewish religion history for the reason that it is devoid altogether of religious spirit.

While business transactions and even manual labor are permitted on the Purim nevertheless it has been held in high esteem at all times and in all the countries in which the Jews have found themselves. The Book of Esther does not designate any religious services for this day, but it enjoins them to "make them days of feasting and joy and of sending portions to one another, and gifts to the poor."

There is, however, on this day a reading of the Book of Esther in the synagogue, and it is also prescribed that the Megillah shall be read on the even of Purim. The custom of sending gifts to one another is still observed, especially dainties, and regular collections made for the poor. It has been considered obligatory on the part of the poorest Jews, even those dependent upon others, to give to at least two others.

THE FORUM.

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

There being some doubt as to which P. S. Brown is the author of the articles appearing in the local papers signed Percy S. Brown, and as I am known to some under the title of Percy S. Browne; I desire to make the identity of the author clear.

The articles in question were written by Percy S. Brown, of 439 East Seventh street, and not by Percival S. Browne, of 153 Sycamore avenue, North Plainfield, formerly connected with J. G. Williams & Co.

By giving this statement the prominence of the said articles, you will greatly oblige,

Yours truly,
PERCIVAL S. BROWNE.

SEWAGE COMMISSION GETS LEGAL ADVICE

Deal for Purchase of Darling Farm Expected to Be Closed This Week.

Members of the joint sewage commission listened to legal advice given them by Lawyer Ashmead, of the law firm of Lindabury, Depue & Faulks of Newark, Saturday night, relative to the proposition now before the commission to buy the Darling farm in Piscataway township as a disposal site, at the offered price of $36,000. The session was an executive one, no newspapermen being present. It is understood, however, that the commission was informed that no legal objections can be made to the purchase of the farm mentioned and that because of this assurance the Common Council will, at its meeting tonight, pass a resolution appropriating the money necessary to defray Plainfield's cost of the improvement. This will be the first actual step taken towards the acquisition of the Darling farm. Events tending towards the consummation of the much talked-of project may be expected to move hereafter, it is said, with celerity.

There will be another meeting of the commission on Wednesday night, at which time, it is said, tentative arrangements will be made to purchase the 90 acre tract, and a date determined upon for the signing of the contract of sale and making payment of the binder of $5,000 to the owners of the farm.

MAYOR FAVORS FITZPATRICK FOR CAPTAINCY, IT IS SAID

As has been anticipated for some time, Mayor Percy H. Stewart will, it is said, send in the name of James Fitzpatrick to the Common Council, tonight, for the captaincy in the fire department to succeed the late James Daly, and it is expected that the appointment will be promptly confirmed.

Fitzpatrick has been a member of the local department for the past seven years and has been stationed at headquarters. The appointment will probably result in the transfer of Fitzpatrick to the Netherwood house, Captain William Townley having been transferred to headquarters.

MISS FLEMING INJURED.

Coming out of Trinity Reformed church after the services yesterday morning, Miss Clara Fleming, of Summit avenue, tripped over an obstruction in the hall and cut a severe gash in the side of her head. She was taken to the drug store of Schreiner Brothers on West Second street, where first aid remedies were given by Dr. N. W. Currie. The wound is not serious and she is about as usual today.

PLAINFIELD HIGH SCHOOL FRESHMEN HAD STRAWRIDE

A party of young people consisting mostly of Plainfield High School freshmen started out Saturday night to take advantage of what will probably be the last sleighing of the year. They went to Westfield, stopping at the Candy Kitchen, and returning arrived in Plainfield about 12 o'clock. The party consisted of the following:

LODGEMEN ATTEND THE FUNERAL OF LATE BROTHER

The funeral service of Waldemar C. Christofferson was held on Saturday afternoon, at the residence of his son-in-law, William G. Heeren, on Sherman avenue, being conducted by Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel.

The pall-bearers were Herman Hansen, C. Norton H. Johnsen, all brothers-in-law of the deceased; John Bicknell, J. B. Higgins and Thomas Calleen, members of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., with which the late Mr. Christofferson was affiliated. There was a large attendance at the funeral and many handsome floral tributes were sent by friends and relatives. Burial was in Hillside cemetery.

OLD-TIME MINSTREL AND VAUDEVILLE

Netherwood Residents' Association Planning for a Jolly Time.

The Netherwood Residents' Association is actively preparing for the annual minstrel show and vaudeville entertainment which will be given in the hall at Woodland and South avenues, Friday evening, March 13. Among the features will be solos, duets, and choruses by well-known local talent, the celebrated "Darktown Quartet," being especially prominent in the program.

"What's It," the boy wonder, who created a sensation at the famous Caraboa dinner at Washington, when he appeared as "Philipino Joe," will be present in a new role. Ward C. Hawley, a widely-known impersonator, will give a number of Harry Lauder's latest and most popular songs in Scotch costume.

The Plainfield High School orchestra, comprising twelve musicians, will perform, giving a fine program. Charles L. Lewis, musical director, will also act as interlocutor. The end-men will be A. Clinton Wilmerding, the tambo expert, and Arthur L. Seidler, who will play the bones. The scenery and electrical effects will be under the direction of Harry B. Wier. Informal dancing will follow the entertainment and the entertainment committee promises an evening of great merriment. The officers of the association are: President, Henry P. Stevens; vice president, Harry B. Wier; treasurer, George Brisbane, secretary, Frank B. Martin.

FORMER GOVERNOR OF TENNESSEE CONDEMNS LIQUOR TRAFFIC, WHICH HE ONCE SUPPORTED

MALCOLM R. PATTERSON

Considerable comment and surprise have been manifested by the remarks of Malcolm R. Patterson, once Governor of Tennessee, who, before a session of the Anti-Saloon League in convention at Columbus, Ohio, expressed a change of attitude on the question of liquor traffic. Mr. Patterson said in part:—

"The Anti-Saloon League and I have not always been friends. The paths we travelled were wide apart. They seemed so parallel that it looked incredible they should ever meet. But they have met.

"I am aware that to have suddenly changed the views of mature manhood, which I once asserted and proclaimed from one end of Tennessee to the other, has excited surprise and provoked comment."

LAGGREN AND GREENE MOVE TO NEW QUARTERS

Laggren & Greene have removed their standard carpet cleaning works to 139 West Second street. The firm is also prepared to give Plainfield people estimates on window shades, awnings and brass rod work. Decorations and canopies are also furnished for all occasions by the firm, which is well known in this city. The change from North avenue to West Second street was necessitated owing to a largely increased business. Laggren & Greene deal in floor coverings, such as carpets, matting, rugs and linoleum and weave old carpets which have outlived their usefulness into handsome new rugs.

MUSICALE AND DANCE.

Members of the committee of arrangements for the coming musicale and dance to be given by the members of Temple Sholem at the Park Club on Tuesday evening, March 31, are much pleased with the present indications which lead them to believe that the coming event will be a success. Elaborate plans are being made for the event and out of town as well as local talent will participate in the concert.

MORGAN SIDE IN NEW HAVEN ROW

Deny Big Dealings With the Railroad.

OPEN BOOKS IN PROOF.

Got Only $350,265 For Important Services For Twenty Years—Say Total of Earnings Was Surprisingly Small. Elliott's Letter Is Answered.

New York, March 9.—J. P. Morgan & Co. have prepared in response to a request from Chairman Howard Elliott of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad a detailed record of all the transactions between that road and the Morgan banking house during the last twenty years. The record shows that the firm participated in the handling of $333,082,803 in securities of the New Haven and its subsidiaries. On these transactions the Morgan house realized a net profit of $350,265. This was after taking count of the losses incurred on the resale of some of the securities purchased from the New Haven.

First.—That the net profits to the firm, including the New York, Philadelphia, London and Paris houses, in the twenty years of financial relations total the surprisingly small amount of $350,265. The par value of the securities handled from which this profit was derived was $333,082,803.

No Interest In Properties.

Second.—That neither the firm in any of its houses nor any member of the firm ever had any interest in any of the properties acquired by the New Haven or its subsidiaries, with a single exception. In this the late J. P. Morgan exchanged 1,222 shares of the South Bay Wharf and Terminal company, valued at $170 a share, for 814 shares of New Haven stock. At the highest price for New Haven, 189, in January, 1907, when this transaction was made, this exchange at these figures represented a loss to J. P. Morgan of $53,894.

Third.—The celebrated "Account No. 2" of the New Haven with J. P. Morgan & Co. used in the attacks upon the bankers as the mysterious account which, it has been alleged, has hidden the secret profits of the firm with the road is opened. It shows nothing more than the investigation of New Haven by former Interstate Commerce Commissioner Prouty showed—namely, that the New Haven deposited with the bankers in a special account at various times from Nov. 3, 1906, to Sept. 25, 1907, the sum of $11,155,000. This amount reimbursed the bankers for a similar total of advances made by them to the Millbrook company for the acquisition of the New York, Westchester and Boston.

Fourth.—That neither firm nor any member had any transactions with the Millbrook company outside of those for the account and upon the order of the New Haven as presented in the "extract from the loan ladger" and "special account No. 2." There was no profit or commission in any of these transactions to the firm or any member.

Paid Interests on Deposits.

Fifth.—That the firm has paid the New Haven 2 per cent on average annual deposits of $1,415,000 since 1903, when deposits began.

In giving out for publication the correspondence regarding New Haven affairs J. P. Morgan & Co. made the following statement:

"Chairman Howard Elliott of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company recently addressed a letter to us asking us certain questions as to our fiscal relations with the New Haven companies covering the last twenty years and as to our profits in the sale of New Haven and allied company securities during the same period.

"Believing that Chairman Elliott's inquiries and our answers thereto may be of interest to the public as well as to the directors and stockholders of the New Haven, we have decided, with the consent of the New Haven company, to give out for publication the entire correspondence setting forth in detail the information requested."

BIGGEST ORGAN FOR THE FAIR

Instrument Costing $60,000 to Be Built for Panama Exposition.

Hartford, Conn., March 9.—Word was received here that the Austin Organ company of this city has received the contract for the big organ for the Panama exposition at San Francisco.

The organ, which will be the biggest in America and probably in the world, will cost about $60,000 and will have 114 stops, the next largest at Sydney, Australia, having 107 stops.

The exposition organ, moreover, will be far superior to anything ever built in volume and tonal effects and will be placed in the festival hall. The organ will be seventy-seven feet high, forty feet wide and twenty feet deep. It will have four manuals and will later be permanently placed in a San Francisco public building.

Weather Forecast.

FERDINAND P. EARLE.

Found Guilty of Kidnaping, but Allowed Freedom.

Although sentenced to two months' imprisonment for kidnaping his son by his first wife, Ferdinand Pinney Earle is free in Romaratin, France, as the court ruled that he and his companion, Miss Charlotte Herman, had already served the time of their sentence while awaiting trial. A sentence of one month was passed on Miss Herman. A fine of $5 was imposed on Earle and one of $3.25 on Miss Herman. The judge awarded Mme. Fischbacher, Earle's first wife, damages against Earle aggregating $1,400. She had sued for $5,000. Earle became very unpopular during the trial. His brusqueness to the court provoked feeling against him. On his way to court he was hissed by the throng in the street.

JOBLESS DETERMINED TO PUSH CAMPAIGN

Urged to Continue to Invade the Churches.

New York, March 9.—Threats have been made by the I. W. W. followers who have not been rounded up by the police to make more raids on churches. One of the places which they have picked out to descend upon, it was said by some of them, is the Friends' meeting house at 144 East Twentieth street.

At the regular Rutgers square gathering of the professional unemployed one more arrest was made. About 500 men and youths gathered there, but some of the speakers became so openly blasphemous that the listeners walked away out of earshot.

Martin Rudome, an eighteen-year-old boy, distributed circulars among the crowd, the contents being such that he was arrested. On the front leaf was the heading, "Onto the house of God, ye men." This was followed by some verse.

There are to be no more separate hearings for the men who were arrested after their raid on St. Alphonsus' church. Magistrate Campbell will probably have groups of twenty-five before him hereafter.

Isaac Wissotsky, who calls himself "Little Bill Haywood," has been sent to the workhouse for sixty days, the severest sentence yet imposed. Louis Siegel got thirty days, while James Riley was let off with ten.

Another prisoner added to the lot is a youth who says he is Samuel Rohrlich of 8796 Bay Twenty-first street, Brooklyn. He pushed his way into a crowd about a Socialist speaker at Park row and Nassau street and started to denounce the mayor and the police. He was arrested when the Socialists complained to the police. He said he was a member of the I. W. W.

$30,000 A YEAR FOR DINNERS

Ricketts Plunged Heavily In Entertaining Art Parties.

Chicago, March 9.—Robert R. Ricketts, head of the insolvent firm of Moulton & Ricketts, with branches in New York and Milwaukee, gave a clew to the financial mysteries of the firm.

Mr. Ricketts expenditures for dinners and other forms of entertainment for prospective art buyers were heavy. His brother said they amounted to between $25,000 and $30,000 a year.

TENAFLY DOESN'T LIKE "JAG" LIST

Twenty-five Names, Including Policeman's, Posted.

MAYOR SAYS HE'S ANGRY

But Reformer Asserts Town's Ruler Approved List Now In Saloons. Pleadings of Recorder and Clergyman Saves Board of Protectors From Being Abolished.

Tenafly, N. J., March 9.—Tenafly, one of the prettiest little towns that grace the western slope of the Palisades and which has always been considered a model town, has a "jag" list. It has caused great consternation because the board of protectors has put twenty-five names in the list and is still jotting them down.

For a town the size of Tenafly a list of twenty-five is considered shockingly long. But, to make matters worse, the board has put the name of a member of the police force in the list.

One man whose name appeared in the "jag" list wrote to Mayor Huyler, bitterly denouncing the protectors. He said that he had been seriously wronged and had suffered undeserved disgrace.

"I resent being classed with a lot of drunkards and bums," said this protester. "I want the borough council to right the wrong."

Mayor Huyler decided that the man's name should not have been placed on the list. The mayor said he felt very much ashamed of the way in which the board had handled the "jag" list. He thought that the board had far exceeded its rights.

Councilman McNamara said that the action of the board in placing the name of one of the uniformed police upon the list had reflected discredit upon the mayor and council. He thought the board should be abolished.

Only the pleadings of Recorder R. S. Maugham and the Rev. A. E. Montgomery saved the board of protectors from being abolished. At the recorder's suggestion Councilmen Willis, Ware and McNamara have been appointed a special committee to confer with the protectors.

It is believed that several of the names now on exhibition in the several saloons in Tenafly will be scratched off within a few days.

Dr. J. M. McKellar, head of the board, said every case on the "jag" list had been carefully investigated. He added that Mayor Huyler saw the list before it was posted and approved it.

FIELDER IN MOUNTAINTOP WAR

Montclair Appeals to Him In Fight With Verona.

Montclair, N. J., March 9.—Governor James F. Fielder has been appealed to by wealthy residents of this town to intervene if necessary in the plan of Verona to annex a portion of Montclair's famous mountain top to that borough.

Ellis P. Earle, who has one of the biggest estates on the mountain side, has laid the matter before Governor Fielder personally, and, while he has not divulged the governor's attitude on the proposition, those who are opposing the annexation project profess to believe that if the annexation bill should go through the legislature it will not meet with favor in his eyes.

F. W. Crawley, one of the leaders of the opposition, has asked Assemblyman Bennett H. Fisher of this town to arrange for a hearing on the bill before the committee on municipalities, to which it was referred, and arguments against the bill will probably be made this week.

AFTER BREMNER'S SEAT.

Drukker to Have Clear Field For Republican Nomination, Say Reports.

Passaic, N. J., March 9.—George H. Dalrymple and Edward Thomas Moore, candidates for the Republican nomination for representative in congress to succeed Robert G. Bremner, will withdraw in favor of Dow Drukker of this city, former director of the board of freeholders, say reports current in political circles here.

The special election will take place April 7. This is the only registration day.

Among the Democratic candidates District Judge Walter Carrington Cabell of this city appears to have the strongest following, but James O'Byrne of Paterson is making a strong fight, supported by Senator William Hughes. O'Byrne is secretary to Hughes.

THIEVES PUT TEN IN PERIL.

Smash Gas Meter, and Two Families Suffer From Gas.

Newark, N. J., March 9.—Thieves who smashed a gas meter to get the nickels in it endangered ten lives at 71 Mulberry street.

Policeman Weber smelled gas as he was passing the house. He found two men in the hallway. One of these got away. Weber grabbed the other and turned him over to another policeman and then went through the house. He found Isaac Wasserman, his wife and child and Max Karkowski, his wife and five children, affected by the escaping gas. The gas meter in the cellar had been wrenched from the wall and broken.

VIRTUES OF A CHRISTIAN WOMAN

Back of Every Good Man is a Good Mother, Says Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire.

CRITICIZES INDOLENCE

Preacher Expresses Sorrow for the Mother Who is More Interested in Euchre and Bridge Than Her Home and Children.

The Christian mother, in all her varied sphere, was pictured by Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire, at the Park Avenue church, last evening, in a sermon that impressed the large audience present. The preacher chose for his text 1 Samuel 1:28—"I have lent him to the Lord as long as he liveth," and followed with a picture of the home of Hannah and Elkahan, and the birth of Samuel in answer to the mother's prayer. This was the brightest spot in the entire history of that family, and in contrast with their unspeakable joy over the birth of their son, the speaker said:

"Half the children of today are begrudged the room they take up. An eminent divine has said that many children are not born into the family, they are damned into it—they are not wanted. Back of every good man there is a good mother. Hannah was not an indolent mother. Her husband Elkahan was far from poor, and Hannah might have spent her time reading novels, or attending pink teas or euchre parties, while here children were running the streets.

"But nothing of the sort—Hannah was a Christian mother of the old-fashioned type. She knew how to sew, too, and never went up to visit her son Samuel that she didn't take him a new coat, the work of her own hands. I've heard some of the grandest music that this old earth has to offer, but I have never heard anything half so sweet as the songs and hymns I have heard my own mother sing as she busied herself about the house with her sewing or cooking. God never meant any mother to be a slave, but the idea seems to be prevalent that she wants to banish herself from the home circle. Three-fourths of the maternal duties she is incompetent to perform. I feel sorry for the young men who are looking to some of the girls of today as their future wives, for these same young men will surely die of dyspepsia or go without buttons on their clothes.

"The indolent mother will make an indolent child. Who are the industrious men who are managing the merchandise of the world or making the laws of the land? For the most part they have descended from industrious mothers. Who are the boys that are now filling the penetentiaries? Nine out of every ten of these boys are not to blame—their mothers have placed them there.

"Do you want to know where are the real women today? They are in their home, attending to domestic duties—many of them in the kitchen. Every mother ought to be observant of her children—of their walk, their looks, their books, their companions, their food and clothing. God have mercy upon the boy who has a lazy mother. God pity the man whose wife is more interested in euchre and bridge whist, than she is in her home and her children.

"Hannah was an intelligent mother. Some people have the foolish idea that hard work and ignorance necessarily go hand in hand. No—Jesus was a working man. He sawed wood and drove nails. No one needs to be so wise and intelligent as a mother. God has endowed her with an intuition that men know nothing about. A mother may have two boys totally different one from the other; one is timid and backward, the other bold and fearless. One needs reward and the other punishment; that which will help the one would ruin the other. It takes a mother to know how to handle these two boys.

"Some of our mothers are sadly lacking in intelligence along the line of cooking. They make bread and biscuit and the husband needs an axe to break it. She wonders why he's so ugly after dinner, when the pie she made for him is of that affectionate nature where the two crusts come so close together that nothing can separate them——she forgot the filling. It's an appalling fact that ninety-nine per cent. of the children of today are inperfect because the mother knows nothing about the art of physiology.

"Again, Hannah was not ignorant of God and his reward. She was a great woman because of her prayers and her consecration to God. She put her boy—all she had to offer—upon the altar. It is a sad sight to see so many mothers godless and churchless. A mother may have the finest culture, the most brilliant surroundings, and yet be totally unfit for motherhood unless she is a Christian mother. She may have hundreds of volumes in her library, stacks of music in the cabinet, a wardrobe full of up-to-date Parisian gowns, and her children noted for their wonderful attainments; but there is one terrible lack in that home if she is not a Christian mother.

"The mother rocking the cradle may be swinging that child into a future of great usefulness. Nero's mother was a murderess, therefore we can't marvel at Nero's wicked life. Lord Byron got his haughty, proud spirit from his mother. George Washington could thank his mother for his patriotism. Children are echoes of their parents. You let me have your boy for a week and I'll tell you at the end of that time what kind of a home he comes from. Hannah was a pious mother, and she got her pay for her hard work and sacrifice. God is the best paymaster in the world, and we Christians are the best paid people. Never a tear dropped down a mother's cheek but what she got her pay. I wish I could picture tonight in all her sublimity the mother who has gone out of your home—the light of your life passed out when you lost her, the best friend you ever had; her love reached up almost to the love of God. And you who still have your mothers with you—if she's here tonight, give her the little love touch on the way home, tell her you love her; it may be too late tomorrow. Don't be ashamed of your mother's religion—worship your mother's God. If she had given more time to her own personal appearance, she might not be wearing wrinkles today; but in taking care of your manifold needs, she hasn't bothered to keep herself dressed in the latest fashion. Oh, boy and girl, whoever you are, within the sound of my voice this night, get down on your knees and ask God to reveal to you your mother's Savior."

'DEATH OR GOD' LIFE'S PROBLEM

In the Latter, Says Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, is a Solution of All Perplexities.

LIFE A COMEDY TO SOME

Without God, When Life Becomes Unbearable, Suicide is the Reasonable Course, Declares the Preacher—Solomon's Wise Words.

"The Colored Preacher and Solomon," was the subject of a discourse of unusual interest by Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, at the First Baptist church, yesterday morning. The text was taken from Ecclesiastes 3:15, "That which is hath been long ago, and that which is to be hath long ago been," being based on a humorous story related to Dr. Strong.

"To know the Bible one must know all of it," said the preacher, "and one cannot safely take any one disconnected passage and suppose it to contain all sides of the question apart from its setting in the book. This is particularly true of the book of Ecclesiastes. A melancholy strain seems to run all through it. In the minds of all great thinkers there is this strain. To him who does not think, life is a comedy; to him who thinks, it is a tragedy. There are only two solutions of the great problem of life, 'death' or 'God.' In the latter, the Christian finds the answer to all the perplexities and complexities of life; 'God is wisdom; God is love.' Without Him, when life becomes unbearable, suicide is the reasonable course.

"Solomon, that wisest of wise men, says 'that which is, and is to be, has already been.' Every thinking person knows that many of our modern inventions have been anticipated in the remote past. Printing, astronomy, mechanical engineering, mathematics, are these new? They are of the long, long ago. And modern engineers are today marveiling at the stupendous achievements in architecture of the ancients. Many an art has thrived for ages and then been lost, only to be revived again in the far-off future. Our jokes are old; our falsities and heresies are old. Christian Science is as old as pantheism, and human gullibility is old likewise.

"Sometime we deplore the humdrum of life which becomes a grind as the years pass. Yet would we be delivered from the truth conveyed by the text, that what is has been? Suppose this year the grass which has always come up green should come up pink; suppose we planted fruit trees and they became grain or weeds, contrary to all we had reason to expect; suppose that when we placed the kettle over the fire, it should freeze instead of boil, or do almost any other kind of thing but what it always had done; suppose mother's face when she comes down in the morning should have so changed that we didn't recognize her? Should we be content? Is it not this very law—as old as eternity itself, that makes us able to understand all history, and the Bible itself?

"And is it not this very principle that makes the hope of heaven more precious? It will not be a strange land of unknown sights, but a 'Homeland,' where old friends and old themes that we loved, all purified from every taint of evil, await us. Even there, 'what is to be, has already been,' in a certain sense, and the 'home-going' will meet every expectation and desire of those who happily are given entrance there."

Y. M. C. A. EASY FOR ALL STAR QUINTET

Pick of Players in the Interscholastic League Won in the Last Half.

Passing and shooting all around their opponents in the final period of play the All-Star team of the Interscholastic League, lived up to the reputation it was heralded under Saturday night by completely squelching the Y. M. C. A. five in the association gym, in an eventful contest by the score of 36 to 22. Ending the first half with the score tied, the teams appeared to be evenly matched but soon after the second session was ushered in the All-Star crew flashed to the front and never yielded the advantage it had gained in the opening minutes of play of the final session.

The playing was fast and inclined to be rough in the opening period and the Y. M. C. A. crew plainly evidenced the severe strain it had been under in the first half when it took the floor in the last cantor, slacking up in every department of the game. The visitors passed at will and executed many clever field shots. Weak guarding on the part of the Y. M. C. A. was responsible for the runaway and although the home shooters rang up some neat two-point counters the All-Stars had the quantity and won out.

The aggregation that faced the association players in the final game was one of the best that has appeared on a local court this season and early showed their superiority over the opposition. Good all around work on the part of Abrams and some sensational field goal shooting by Peacock featured the winning side's play while Moulton was the central figure in the Y. M. C. A. lineup.

CARLSTROM SIGNS TO PLAY FIRST BASE FOR MONTREAL

Albin Carlstrom, shortstop on the team that brought the Central New Jersey League baseball pennant to Plainfield last fall, who is now under contract with the Montreal Club, of the International League, has just been notified to report for spring practise at Norwood, N. C., on March 16. He is at present in Elizabeth and will make his getaway next Saturday morning.

Three of the Montreal performers have jumped to the Federal League, among the missing being First Baseman Griggs, thereby making an opening for Carlstrom to show on the initial corner, a position in which he shines like championship timber. Albie is at present in tip-top shape and is optimistic of his chances to make good this season.

JACK MARTIN NOT TO REPLACE MARANVILLE

Manager Stallings Announces His Infield Lineup for the Pennant Race This Year.

Manager George Stallings, of the Boston National League Baseball team, announced this morning, his infield lineup for the coming season, and as predicted in this paper some time ago the name of Jack Martin did not appear among the regulars. Jack is making good in the Southern training camp, however, and will be used as a utility infielder by the Beantown manager unless he demands his release, which he threatened to do before leaving Plainfield, rather than warm the bench. Martin is anxious to play and would rather be with some minor league club than be idle.

On the Hub team Sweeney will play first base, Johnny Evers second, Maranville shortstop and Deal on third. Martin has had to fight against Maranville, a tried and true veteran, and has had no easy time securing any kind of recognition. The Evers' case has been the cause of much trouble in the National League this season and at a meeting of the managers Saturday afternoon it was decided that Johnny should remain with Boston as would also Sweeney and Perdue, who were originally traded to Chicago for the second baseman. All of this means that the Braves will cut some ice in the pennant race this season and it is probable that Martin's team will be well up among the leaders when the fall months blow around.

"Sportdom Tips"

During the past two weeks, and more or less since the boxing commission of New York State handed down its decision in the Fitzsimmons case, we have been pestered day and night by rabid fight fans and ardent admirers of the ruby Cornishman delegated by him to induce the Press to take a crack at the commission. Several of Bob's friends, whose only aim is to get him back into the ring, have compiled long treatises on the duties of a boxing commission and the reasons why the Empire State body should be put out of business. These stories written by biased followers of the ring sport are getting to be a nuisance as they set forth the same substance matter in each instance and are little more than poor attempts to keep the name of Fitzsimmons before the sporting public. We might suggest that Bob put his publicity department in charge of one person who actually knows something about the game as the present system is doing the grand old man more harm than good. Saturday afternoon one of Bob's Dunellen neighbors called at this office with a document that would fill one-half of a sporting page and demanded that the sporting editor copy it off on the typewriter while he waited. We glanced over the article in question and found that it was nothing more than a long drawn out resume of lengthy articles that have appeared in metropolitan dailies since the decision barring him from the ring was handed down. When we suggested that he leave the story with us to be cut down to a reasonable size the Dunellenite was highly insulted and after wishing all kinds of dire things on our heads he scoffed out of the office in disgust. If Frank O'Neil and his co-workers on the New York State Commission were not competent to handle a case such as Bob's they would not be in office at the present time and these indiscriminate efforts to run down the body by incompetent writers is putting the ex-champion in a very bad light. Nothing but real news concerning Bob will be put in these columns and those promoting the cheap advertising schemes might better stay away.

Saturday night concluded one of the busiest seasons of basketball competition ever conducted in this city and throughout the long campaign some of the best court matches ever staged in the history of the sport locally have been played on Plainfield courts. During the season the Y. M. C. A. basketball team has brought to Plainfield some teams that hitherto never knew that Plainfield was really a serious proposition in the basketball world and without exception these aggregations have been sent away defeated by the association quintet. Among the notables over whom the Plainfielders have triumphed are the New York University Law School and the Trenton Deaf Mute College. Both games were close and the locals played part of each with intercollegiate rules prevailing. The interscholastic basketball championship race this season has also been a close affair and North Plainfield topped the title only after being treated to a big scare by her Plainfield rivals which necessitated a rubber contest. The city and borough championship is still undecided and several teams are in the running for the title honors. So close has been the race and so confused has the series been that it would be utterly impossible to pick a champion without first seeing two of the principal come together on the court.

Feminine basketball hostilities will be brought to a close tomorrow afternoon in the Y. M. C. A., when the North Plainfield and Plainfield High School girls' teams meet in the rubber game of their series. The victory of the Plainfield girls last week has boosted the stock of that aggregation considerably and the Plainfielders are expected to give the boroughites a good run for the title honors on the neutral Y. M. C. A. court. Foul shooting will undoubtedly play a prominent part in the contest and the leaders in this line on each side will "get acquainted" with the association court this afternoon during an hour of practise work.

It now seems probable that the team of "usterwus" performers recently organized among rabid basketball fans of the borough will get in action at least once this season despite their late start. The Ancient Five has displayed some real nerve in issuing a challenge to that All Star five but the dads evidently think they have something on the younger generation and may succeed in reversing the score after all. Several of the stars of the come-back aggregation were in the galley of the Y. M. C. A., Saturday night, getting a line on the oppostion while the latter was toying with the Y. M. C. A. quintet.

North Plainfield High School basketball fans recite a little incident which goes to prove that it is well nigh impossible to give Hyman Abrams the "once over." When returning from New Brunswick last Friday night, the N. P. H. S. basketeers had to run from the Penn station in Elizabeth to the Central station a short distance away in order to get aboard a local for Plainfield that was just pulling out. All got on safely except Abrams, who pulled up in the rear lugging two suit cases after the train had got up too much steam to warrant an attempt at "catching on." When Abrams saw that it was impossible for him to pull his chunky little carcas aboard he shouted to Captain Burner, at the same time tossing the two suit cases on the platform. Shortly after the local pulled out an express steamed into the Elizabeth station and Abbie got on. When the rest of the team arrived at the Plainfield station there was Abrams awaiting the arriving of the local and Valet Burner with the two suit cases. The express had beaten the local by ten minutes. You have to hand it to Abrams.

Manager Ernest Dorflinger, of the Plainfield baseball team, does not seem to be worrying a whole lot about his players and the probability of their being picked up by the Feds. What's the matter, Ernie, don't you think they re good enough to warrant consideration?

It's time someone came across with some dope on the baseball prospects here for the coming year. We have been led to wonder whether or not Plainfield was really going to have a representative nine this summer.

Now that the basketball curtain has been drawn local sport followers are beginning to wonder what they will do for entertainment between now and the time the horsehide pills begin to cloud the atmosphere.

Although there were three members of that championship North Plainfield High School five in the All Star lineup, Saturday night, we note that the two Plainfielders were responsible for most of the scoring. Between them Rosenson and Peacock scored enough to defeat the home team single handed.

Gavett succeeded in holding Dunning to one field goal, but we are still of the opinion that the boroughite is the best centre in this section. Gavett employed the methods used by his younger brother in the interscholastic matches, following the man rather than the ball.

LOCAL GUNNER FIRST IN NOVELTY TOURNEY

Apgar Wins Top Notch With Professionals and Randolph is Fourth in Amateurs.

Plainfielders took an active part in the two novelties, trap shooting and flycasting by arc light, which the management of the Sportsmen's Show now in progress at the Grand Central Palace, New York, sought to inaugurate Saturday night. Jerseymen took an active part in the afternoon's trap shooting events. Entrants are privileged to shoot as many strings of fifty birds as they choose. At the end of the preliminary round March 14, the ten highest men will shoot for the trophy. The high gunner for each day will be given a medal.

Among the shooters who took part in Saturday's events were C. C. Randolph and Neaf Apgar, of this city. Randolph, competing in the amateur class under the colors of the Plainfield Gun Club, came in fourth with a thirty-two to his credit. Apgar, competing for the Smith Gun Club, of Newark, in the professional class, came in for first honors with a forty-four.

"FLICK" LUYSTER TURNED DOWN A TEMPTING OFFER

"Flick" Luyster, the demon slugger who played left field for the locals the latter part of last season and who has been a familiar figure in these parts as a baseball player for the past five years, has selected the Lawrence Club, of the New England League, as his headquarters for the coming season of competition, according to recent reports. "Flick" had been offered a contract calling for a yearly salary of $1,800 from the Baltimore club, of the Federal League, but had no idea that the outlaw organization had so much money in the treasury.

He wrote to Manager Knabe and told him as much and the latter promptly banked the sum as an evidence of good faith. In the meantime, however, the foxy Bill Pieper, of the Lawrence club, secured Luyster's signature to a New England League contract and when Knabe's reply arrived the Jersey ball player was already tied up. Although he will lose about $600 a year as the result of this little piece of bone-headedness, Luyster claims he is satisfied to plug along at a lower figure for a club that will appreciate more.

REMARKABLE RECORD.

Gilbert C. Halstead, of Brooklyn, Cornell's crack basketball player, will graduate from Cornell University next June at the age of twenty. Although he has been a prominent figure in student athletic life for the past three years the big basketball leader will not have attained his majority at the time he receives his diploma. His case is an unusual one in Cornell.

GETTING READY TO LEAVE.

Tommy Mullin is packing up to leave for the South next Saturday morning with the Brunswick team of the Empire League, with which he will play again this season. Tommy has been doing a little indoor training during the past couple of weeks and is in the best of trim for the opening of the season.

Queries, Comment and Answers

Sporting Editor:

Query—Can a boy under sixteen years of age carry a broken revolver on his person in this city?—M. K. J.

Answer—The law is against the carrying of concealed weapons and it makes no difference whether the weapon is a broken one or not or whether the carrier is under sixteen years of age.

Sporting Editor:

Query—Is there any law in this city preventing a person from playing pool in his own home and among the members of his family as long as he doesn't receive any money from them. Do you have to have a license for this form of recreation as described above?—H. U. I.

Answer—You are at perfect liberty to do what you want along this line in your own home and among the members of your family. No license is necessary.

Sporting Editor:

Query—Has a Plainfield school teacher the right to slap a pupil in the face if the latter is annoying her?—L. O. P.

Answer—This sort of punishment is not allowable here and there are plenty of other methods that will serve the same purpose.

Sporting Editor:

Query—Has Ocean Grove a newspaper?—F. U. B.

Answer—Ocean Grove has one paper—the Times—a weekly edition published throughout the year.

Sporting Editor:

Query—What is Billy Sunday's right name? B says Suntash and A says Davis.—K. J.

Answer—His right name is William A. Sunday.

Sporting Editor:

Query—Is there any way I can secure a sum of money owed to me by one of the local mail carriers? Is there any way of writing to the postoffice authorities and getting the money?—L. H. P.

Answer—You might follow the suggestion you offer but we cannot say how much satisfaction you will receive. Better consult a lawyer.

Sporting Editor:

Query—Please inform me in your valuable paper how snow is measured. Also the water, after stopped?—B. F.

Answer—Proper receptacles and gauges are provided by the government for each of its weather bureaus, and immediately following a snow or rain measurements are made by the official in charge (John Nagle in this city). Measurements of rain or snowfalls are all made at the opening and closing of each official day—8 a. m. and 8 p. m.

MONROE GOOD WILL HAVE TAYLOR FOR A TEAM MATE

Monroe Good, winner of the Yale cup in the Plainfield High School graduating class of last year, who is now attending Colgate University, will have another Jerseyite for a teammate in athletics next fall according to reports coming from Orange. Harry Taylor, captain of the East Orange High School eleven last fall and one of the best interscholastic ends ever turned out in New Jersey, will enter Colgate in September.

Although only a freshman at Colgate this year, Good was a substitute back on the eleven and will probably be used as a regular next season. Taylor will tryout for the end position and it seems probable at this time that New Jersey will have two men in the lineup when the collegians lineup against their old rivals, West Point, next season.

EARLY LEAD HELPED BORO GIRLS TO WIN

Perth Amboy Played Best Game in the Second Period Without Lines.

The North Plainfield High School girls' basketball team added another victory to its string Saturday afternoon, when the girls from Perth Amboy went down to defeat for the second time this season. The game was played in Saengerbund Hall and the final score was 24 to 14. The contest was of an interesting nature and was full of fouls made by both teams.

Owing to the fast playing of the local guards the visiting goal getters were held scoreless until the last few minutes of the first half, when they secured two from the field of play. The first period ended with the score standing 16 to 4.

In the second half, which was played without lines, the visitors were more at home and played some fast basketball for fifteen minutes, but the boroughites' lead of the first half was too much to overcome. The Amboy girls passed all around the opponents and made many fine shots after working the ball the whole length of the floor. Miss Spencer and Miss Burtis divided scoring honors for the locals, while the Misses Conquest, Bowden and Scheyer were the point getters for the visitors.

BILLY SYKES AGAIN.

When Plainfield High School meets the Erasmus High School baseball nine on the diamond again this year, the local athletes will once more have to face the crooked slants of Billy Sykes, the lame twirler, who has three times made the All-New York scholastic nine. Billy is eligible for the captaincy this season and although he is a cripple his ability as a ball player even under this great handicap will probably gain for him the honor. Sykes is one of the five members of last year's team back on the job again.

SPEAKER WON'T STARVE.

Tris Speaker has agreed to give his services to the Boston Red Sox for the next two years for the princely salary of $37,000. This is said to be a record salary for a baseball player. Not even Ty Cobb, the king of batsmen, draws as much.

'PLAINS GAME OFF.

The High Street Cadets, of Newark, did not appear on the Scotch Plains Parish House court, Saturday night, the game being cancelled early in the afternoon.

TEAM DISBANDS.

The Hope Chapel basketball team has disbanded for the season and efforts will now be concentrated to the formation of a baseball nine.

HIGH SCHOOL TEAM WALLOPED INVADERS

The Plainfield High School basketball team easily defeated a team composed mostly of Somerville High School players at the Y. M. C. A., Saturday night, by the score of 32 to 15. Kershaw, of the Somerville team, was the first man to score, but this is the only time Somerville had the lead for McNamee and Hetfield soon dropped the ball through the basket, putting their team in the lead for the rest of the game. The first half ended with the score at 17 to 6.

All the substitutes were put in at the beginning of the second half, but their playing was little inferior to the regulars. None of the "subs" are in the senior class and there is excellent material for a championship team for next year. "Dan" McNamee played a splendid game at forward, caging four field goals.

LOG CABIN GUN CLUB WILL ENTERTAIN FIRM'S EXPERT

Twenty-six members of the Log Cabin Gun Club, of which D. G. Weems is president, enjoyed the annual dinner of the organization, Saturday night, at the Queen City Hotel. Discussion of the affairs of the club was had among the members in an informal way and announcement was made that the club's shoot would be held Saturday, March 21.

The "shoots" are private. An expert marksman from the sporting firm of Schoverling, Daly & Gale, of New York, will be present at the coming shoot, and will, it is said, give kindly criticism of the efforts of the local marksmen, at their request.

WORD FROM JACK MARTIN.

A letter was received by us this morning from Jack Martin, who is playing ball with the Boston Nationals down in Macon, Ga., and the Plainfielder wants to be "remembered to all the boys."

NEWMAN SCHOOL TOO FAST FOR VISITORS

Leal School Five Found the Going to Fast on Rival's Court.

Leal School basketball players once more tasted defeat on a rival team's court, Saturday afternoon, when they were defeated at Hackensack by a score of 49 to 27 by the Newman School quintet of that place. Familiarity with the baskets on the home court and better all around play was responsible for the Hackensack team's victory. From start to finish the Plainfielders occupied the position of runners-up and never had a show to win out after the first few minutes of battling.

The first half ended with the score 18 to 7 in favor of the home team and in the final half the Queen City quintet came within three points of equaling their rival's count. "Peanut" Stewart did the best work for the local aggregation, while Morrison and Toole starred for the Newman School youths.

ALUMNI TEAMS WILL INTRODUCE NOVELTY

Plainfield and North Plainfield Feminine Graduates Will Come Together.

For the first time in the history of interscholastic feminine athletic competition in this vicinity basketball teams composed of graduate stars will oppose each other in a court contest on a local court Friday night. The opposing forces are made up largely of performers who took part in the hot struggle for the feminine championship two years ago, when the boroughites defeated the Plainfielders in a rubber match played on the Y. M. C. A. court.

Following the outcome of the 1912 battle a bitter rivalry arose between these two factions and this will be shown in this week's contest. The Plainfielders are taking this opportunity of getting even for what the undergraduate boys' team lost this season in the rubber game for the male championship and are optimistic of their chances of bringing home the decision. The contest will bring out a regiment of former stars of the court and will be played in Saengerbund Hall.

The teams will lineup as follows:

P. H. S. A.	N. P. H. S. A.
Miss Stewart, right forward	Miss H. Hummel
Miss Mehl, left forward	Miss I. Hummel
Miss Brynairski, centre	Miss George
Miss Rodenbaugh, right guard	Miss Steiner

OVERTIME GAME WON BY P. H. S. CAPTAIN

High Score Contest Tied When Time Was Called—Miss Phillips the Star.

The Clifton Park High School girls basketball team failed to put in appearance at the High School gymnasium, Saturday afternoon, so a team composed mostly of ex-High School stars was gathered together to play the school girls.

The game was close throughout, with the Alumni leading most of the way, but in the last few minutes of play the High School players caged several baskets in succession, which tied the score at 47. The two teams then agreed to play until one side scored two points. The fighting began to get rough and a foul was called on Plainfield, but the graduates failed to score the point. The ball was then passed to Miss Philips, who scored a neat basket and won the game for her team by the score of 49 to 47.

RUBBER GAME WILL BE STARTED LATE

Deciding Game of the League Series Due to Be Called at 4:30 O'clock.

Feminine basketball competition in the interscholastic league will draw to a close tomorrow afternoon on the Y. M. C. A. court, when the Plainfield and North Plainfield High School feminine quintets will meet in the rubber contest at 4:30 o'clock, the late hour being selected so as to avoid any conflict with the regular class work of the association.

To date each of the teams has annexed one victory, Plainfield winning the last game by a top heavy margin. Although there is little to choose between the two contestants both bands of cohorts are optimistic of their respective team's chances of victory and a large crowd is expected to witness the contest.

The teams will lineup as follows:

PLAINFIELD.	NORTH PLAINFIELD
Miss Phillips, forward	Miss Spencer
Miss Crane, forward	Miss Burtis
Miss Rothberg, centre	Miss Douglas
Miss Morris, guard	Miss Debele
Miss Mortimer, guard	Miss Smith

LIDGATE PLAYING SHORT.

Baltimore's International Leaguers got into action for the first time this season, Saturday afternoon, at Fayettville, N. C., and Manager Johnny Dunn is using Eugene Lidgate, the Fanwood boy, at the shortstop position. Liddy played on the Sparrows against the Buzzards in the first tilt and although he failed to break into the run, hit or error column he was charged with one stolen base.

NOT FINISHED YET.

Another era in Interscholastic League basketball competition will be opened Wednesday afternoon in the Y. M. C. A. gym, when the Plainfield High School and Leal School quintets meet in a league contest. Leal's won the last game by a margin of three points.

RESCUE BODY OF AMERICAN TORTURED BY MEXICANS

GOVERNOR COLQUITT CONFIRMS REPORT.

Austin, Tex., March 9.

I received telegraphic message from Captain J. J. Sanders, commanding Company B, Texas Rangers, stationed at Laredo, that he had recovered the body of Vergara from Hidalgo, Mexico, and now has it in Texas.

I have wired him for full particulars, which I am sure will show a perfectly proper course on his part.

O. B. COLQUITT, Governor

Laredo, Tex., March 9.—A force of Texas rangers crossed the international boundary line, exhumed the body of Clemente Vergara buried in the cemetery at Hidalgo, Mexico, and brought it across the Rio Grande to American soil.

The little band of nine heavily armed men, ignoring diplomacy and braving the Mexican federal soldiers, left Palafox, Tex., crossed over to Hidalgo, then by a circuitous route rode by moonlight to the Hidalgo cemetery.

While two men dug into the shallow grave containing the body of the American executed by Mexican federal soldiers, the remainder of the band picketed the cemetery to prevent their work from being interrupted.

The body was carried to Perrons and brought across the Rio Grande in a skiff convoyed by other skiffs containing the little armed band. Whether the Mexican soldiers knew of the expedition is not known, but in any event they made no effort to thwart the purpose of the invaders.

Crowd Eager to View Body.

The body of the American stockman lies in an undertaking establishment, it having been turned over to United States Consul Garrett. Hundreds surround the place, hoping to get a view of the body, but a guard kept the curious from entering the place.

Dispatches from Austin quote Governor Colquitt as saying:

"Some persons might call this 'invasion,' but it is not. We wanted Vergara's body to determine the manner of his death—and we have it.

"I do not care to talk further until I have more details."

"I proceeded to Hidalgo, secured Vergara's body and brought it to Laredo."

Asked whether Captain Sanders acted under orders from him the governor said:

"I do not care to comment upon that."

Tortured by His Captors.

An examination of Vergara's body made in the cemetery showed several bullet wounds. The skull had been crushed and the hands were charred, indicating that the American stockman had been tortured before being beaten and hanged.

Numerous other bruises and indignities were inflicted upon him. The body was attired in trousers, undershirt and hose.

From the time Vergara was lured across the Rio Grande and captured a friend had kept close watch on developments and knew every movement of his captors, including the American's execution and burial.

This knowledge is expected to play an important part in developments of the inquiry certain to be inaugurated by the United States government.

Vergara Kidnaped Feb. 13.

Vergara left his ranch near Palafox, Tex., on Friday, Feb. 13, and crossed the river into Mexico on receipt of a message from three federal soldiers that Captain Apolonio Rodriguez of the Hidalgo garrison wished to settle for eleven horses taken from Vergara's island pasture in the Rio Grande. Mrs. Vergara pleaded with her husband not to risk seizure by the Mexicans, but disregarding her warnings he crossed the river in company with his young nephew. Mrs. Vergara since has told how she saw her husband assaulted by the waiting soldiers and, after being knocked unconscious, carried off. Vergara's nephew at the time of the attack on his uncle escaped to safety and hid in the brush until he could recross the river.

On the following day Mrs. Vergara went in search of her husband and found him in the Hidalgo jail. So far as known there was no charge against him. He had been cruelly beaten, according to the wife. She dressed the wounds on his head, she said, and remained with him until forced to leave. That was the last time she ever saw him alive, for early next morning he was taken from the jail, supposedly to be transferred to Piedras Negras, and disappeared.

When search was begun for the missing American it was learned that a man had been shot and his body hanged to a tree outside Hidalgo early Sunday morning, Feb. 15, and that the body had been left hanging for several days. Soon after the American consul at Nuevo Laredo, Mexico, started his inquiries this body was removed and a fresh grave was noticed in the old Hidalgo cemetery.

Mexicans who had known the ranchman said that the body seen hanging was that of Vergara and that they believed he was buried in the new grave.

It finally was determined to the satisfaction of the American investigators that Vergara had been executed. Persistent denial was made by the federals, however, and prior to this General Alvarez, commander at Piedras Negras, had promised Consul Rocker at Piedras Negras that Vergara should be released and his captors called to account. This allayed the fears of his friends until his continued absence set in motion an exhaustive investigation, in which the United States government took part.

Consul Garrett proceeded to Hidalgo and personally interviewed Captain Rodriguez, the man held responsible for Vergara's kidnaping, but the federal captain denied all knowledge of the ranchman's death and said he had been sent to Piedras Negras, but had escaped en route and that the federals were certain that he had joined the Constitutionalists.

Consul Garrett, however, after interviewing numerous Mexicans and others, reported officially that Vergara had been executed. He added that he was convinced from the federal attitude while he was in Hidalgo that it would have been dangerous for him to demand the surrender of the body.

The investigation was ordered continued by the state department and in addition the state of Texas also ordered an investigation by the Texas rangers, the state police who guard the border.

ALL EYES ON ASQUITH.

Premier's Statement Today Expected to Settle Home Rule Question.

London, March 9.—The promised statement of Premier Asquith, which he will make possibly today in the house of commons, it is expected, will pave the way for settlement of the Irish home rule question. Not since the days of Gladstone has an occasion been awaited with such intense interest. Standing room in the chamber will be at a premium, the usual courtesy tickets for foreigners extended to each legation having been withdrawn and the last ticket of admission to the galleries having been bespoken within a day after the announcement of Mr. Asquith's intention to speak.

All predictions point to the option of exclusion from the operation of the home rule bill being offered to the Ulster counties by Premier Asquith, but it is impossible to predict the reception such a proposal will have, even the Nationalists remaining silent on the question.

NEEDLEWORK

By MARGARET LAWRENCE

A BUREAU-SCARF IN EYELET WORK

Eyelet medallions may be used in many ways for decorating various household linens. Pattern 14188 includes four of these medallions, each six-inches square, and two yards of border two and one-half inches wide, which may be adapted to a bureau-cover made to exactly fit the top of a bureau of any size. Hemstitching or narrow linen lace may be used to finish the edges. These medallions may be used with or without the border on curtains of batiste, handkerchief linen or batiste and net. They may be adapted to bed-spreads, bureau-covers and to dining-room linens as a tea-cloth, luncheon-cloth, carving-cloth, serving table-cover and centerpieces. The motifs may often be combined with lace medallions and Cluny insertion for decorating large dinner cloths. In this case, they should be stamped on squares eight by eight inches and worked entirely in eyelets. The border may be done in eyelets or in solid embroidery.

For the hall or vestibule or for windows near the street, it is often desirable to have opaque curtains hung flat against the windows. These may be of handkerchief linen or fine batiste, embroidered in eyelet work with designs of this character, and finished with filet of Cluny lace.

Practical Fashion Hints

By Alice Gibson

Small Motifs in Cross Stitch.

Something easy and quick and effective, that is the usual request when an embroidery pattern is ordered. If you are an experienced needleworker and wish a simple design for finishing towels or some novelty you will find that these motifs have many possibilities, and if you are an amateur or a beginner in needlecraft you could not choose better designs for the first attempt than these. You can make delightfully attractive guest-towels, bureau-covers, nightstand-covers, bags and cases for toilet articles, aprons and bibs and a carriage-cover for the baby embroidered with these motifs. Pattern 14503 includes four transfers of each of the five designs. These little motifs are from 2¼ to 3 inches high and should be worked with either rope silks or No. 8 mercerized cotton. The bunnies should be done in brown; they are appropriate for a child's apron, book-bag or for a chafing-dish cloth. The trees in tubs may be used on the ends of runners of hand woven Russian crash, which can be purchased at the dish-towel counter, or they may be worked on book-covers, pillows, bags and table-covers. The tubs may be worked in dull red or soft green, with the trees in a darker shade of green with occasional stitches in red to indicate apples or oranges. The pine tree should be done in dark green on runners and pillows, while the little basket may be used on handkerchief bags and all kinds of dainty cases worked in brown, pink and green. The wreath may be developed in delicate green combined with pink or blue for embroidering a baby carriage cover, child's dress, hat or sack.

These designs are all so simple that the children will be delighted to learn to cross-stitch by working them on something they can use or give to mother.

This Is a Perfect Pattern.

Guaranteed, hot iron transfer pattern 14503 can be supplied on receipt of price, 10 cents. Fill out the coupon and enclose stamps or coin to the Pattern Department of this paper.

THE THANKSGIVING TURKEY.

THE turkey forms the piece de resistance on most Thanksgiving tables. Usually it is roasted, the great diversity of taste being in the dressing which is served with it. In certain households a sage dressing is liked, in others chestnuts are favored, while many select oysters.

The Popular Way.

Roast Turkey.—Select a young gobbler and dry pick. Care should be used in dressing, as washing with much water extracts the delicate juices. After the turkey has been filled with the dressing decided upon grease the bird with butter, place it in a hot oven to sear quickly lest the juices escape during the roasting. When seared add a pint of boiling water to the pan and baste frequently. Twelve minutes to the pound is the usual length of time allowed for roasting an eight or ten pound turkey. Serve with giblet gravy, cranberries, currant jelly and sweet potatoes.

Cooking a Tough Fowl.

Braised Turkey.—A mushroom forcemeat gives a very rich flavor to braised turkey, and braising is a method of cooking to be recommended for birds of doubtful age. They can always be made tender by this method of stewing before roasting.

Whether braised or roasted, an old bird is greatly improved by larding the breast, especially if that portion of the fowl is intended for eating cold. Place the strips of fat (preferably bacon or freshened salt pork cut very thin) in the larding needle, lift the skin of the fowl with the thumb and forefinger of the left hand and draw the needle through the skin. Braise carefully.

With Celery Sauce.

Boiled Turkey.—Chop half a head of celery very fine. Mix with it one quart of breadcrumbs, two scant tablespoonfuls of salt, half a tablespoonful of pepper, two heaping teaspoonfuls of butter and two eggs. Stuff the turkey with this, sew up and truss. Wring a large square of white cotton cloth out of cold water and dredge it quickly with flour. Pin the turkey in this and plunge into boiling water. Let it boil rapidly for fifteen minutes, then set back where it will simmer. Allow fifteen to eighteen minutes for each pound. Serve with celery sauce.

They Presented the Gift to the Queen.

Daddy's Bedtime Story— St. Patrick's Day In Fairyland.

"THE fairy queen had said that on St. Patrick's day she was going to give a dinner party to which she invited every fairy. You can imagine how pleased the fairies were, for the fairy queen always had such perfect parties. They were always different and better than those of any one else. They felt themselves to be very lucky little fairies indeed to have such a marvelous fairy queen," said daddy.

"The fairy queen would not let any of the fairies help her. She said that she wanted it to be her party, and she was to get it all up herself. Now, weren't they indeed pretty lucky to have their fairy queen take all that trouble for them? The only thing she told them was that they must all be sure to wear green frocks.

"When St. Patrick's day came the fairies were all right on time at the place the fairy queen had told them to be. She had chosen a lovely spot, of course.

"The fairies all wore green fluffy dresses and silver crowns trimmed with moss on their heads. They all took their places at a long mossy table.

"Two green toads were butlers and passed all the delicious things to eat to each fairy. They had such good things too. First they had green turtle soup; then they had green peppers and olives. Next came spinach, green peas and meat balls with a bit of parsley on each. Lettuce salad came next, and for dessert they had green pistachio ice cream and little green candies.

"The fairy queen presented each little fairy with a pot of shamrocks. But the fairies had a surprise for her! With a great deal of ceremony they gave a small green box to the two toads, who carried it on a silver tray, and, with low bows and hops, presented it to the fairy queen.

"The fairy queen was so surprised she could hardly speak, for the box contained an emerald pendant in the shape of a shamrock.

"'Oh, thank you, fairies!' she cried. 'I am so happy over my beautiful present, and I shall enjoy wearing such a lovely pendant, I can tell you. But I've arranged a fairy dance and have imported some special dancers. The party is not yet over.'

"'Hurrah!' shouted the fairies, for they hated to have the end of a party come.

"The fairy queen waved her magic wand, and out hopped countless green grasshoppers. They went through the most wierd dances. They danced in pairs and altogether, and the fairies clapped their hands in glee.

"Then each grasshopper hopped on the shoulder of a fairy, while the fairies joined hands and sang all the lovely Irish songs they knew."

HOME REMEDIES.

Simple Ways of Treating Ordinary Ailments.

A medicinal lemonade of value is made of flaxseed, lemons, sugar and water. Pour one quart of boiling water upon four tablespoonfuls of flaxseed. Add the juice of two lemons, but not the peel. Sweeten to taste. Steep three hours in a covered pitcher. Ice it before drinking. It is admirable for colds.

A quick mustard plaster is made as follows: Trim the crust from a thin slice of light bread and sprinkle it thickly with ground mustard. Spread a very thin cloth over the mustard and dampen with vinegar or water.

A well dampened piece of bread is better as a poultice than either flaxseed or slippery elm and will neither dry out nor sour so quickly. A little egg added will prevent blistering.

An old fashioned but very good liniment for rheumatism is made of the whites of two eggs, one-half pint of vinegar and one-half pint of turpentine. Shake together and rub into the skin.

Five cents' worth of camphor gum in half a pint of alcohol makes a good headache liniment. Earache may be relieved by heating a brick, wrapping it in two thicknesses of flannel and pouring hot water on it. This will generate steam, which will reach every part of the ear if it is held close to it.

A good salve for burns is made by melting together a tablespoonful of lard and a lump of resin about the size of a nutmeg. Stir briskly and when you remove it from the fire add a tablespoonful of turpentine. Apply to the burn with a soft cloth. As turpentine evaporates rapidly, the salve should not be kept longer than a few days unless sealed.

The Abysmal Brute

CHAPTER III.

OLD Pat's eyes were brightly moist with pride and triumph.

"An' what will you be thinkin' to happen when some of the gay an' ugly ones tries to rough it on him?" he asked.

"He'll kill them sure," was Stubener's verdict.

"No, he's too cool for that. But he'll just hurt them some for their dirtiness."

"Let's draw up the contract," said the manager.

"Wait till you know the whole worth of him," old Pat answered. "'Tis strong terms I'll be makin' you come to. Go for a deer hunt with the boy over the hills an' learn the lungs and the legs of him. Then we'll sign up ironclad and regular."

Stubener was gone two days on that hunt, and he learned all and more than old Pat had promised and came back a very weary and very humble man.

The young fellow's innocence of the world had been startling to the case hardened manager, but he had found him nobody's fool.

Virgin though his mind was, untouched by all save a narrow mountain experience, nevertheless he had proved possession of a natural keenness and shrewdness far beyond the average.

In a way he was a mystery to Sam, who could not understand his terrible equanimity of temper. Nothing ruffled him or worried him, and his patience was of an enduring primitiveness.

He never swore, not even the futile and emasculated cuss words of sissy boys.

"I'd swear all right if I wanted to," he had explained when challenged by his companion. "But I guess I've never come to needing it. When I do I'll swear, I suppose."

Old Pat, resolutely adhering to his decision, said goodby at the cabin.

"It won't be long, Pat, boy, when I'll be readin' about you in the papers. I'd like to go along, but I'm afeard it's me for the mountains till the end."

And then, drawing the manager aside, the old man turned loose on him almost savagely.

"Remember what I've ben tellin' ye over an' over. The boy's clean, an' he's honest. He knows nothing of the rottenness of the game. I kept it all away from him, I tell you. He don't know the meanin' of fake. He knows only the bravery an' romance an' glory of fightin', an' I've filled him up with tales of the old ring heroes, though little enough, God knows, it's set him afire.

"Man, man, I'm tellin' you that I clipped the fight columns from the newspapers to keep it 'way from him—him a-thinkin' I was wantin' them for me scrapbook. He don't know a man ever lay down or threw a fight. So don't you get him in anything that ain't straight. Don't turn the boy's stomach.

"That's why I put in the null an' void clause. The first rottenness an' the contract's broke of itself; no snide division of stake money; no secret arrangements with the movin' pitcher men for guaranteed distance. There's slathers o' money for the both of you. But play it square or you lose. Understand?

"And whatever you'll be doin' watch out for the women," was old Pat's parting admonishment, young Pat astride his horse and reining in dutifully to hear. "Women is death an' damnation, remember that. But when you do find the one, the only one, hang on to her. She'll be worth more than glory an' money. But first be sure, an' when you're sure don't let her slip through your fingers.

"Grab her with the two hands of you and hang on. Hang on if all the world goes to smash an' smithereens. Pat, boy, a good woman is—a good woman. 'Tis the first word and the last."

* * * * * * *

Once in San Francisco, Sam Stubener's troubles began. Not that young Pat had a nasty temper or was grouchy as his father had feared. On the contrary, he was phenomenally sweet and mild.

But he was homesick for his beloved mountains; also he was secretly appalled by the city, though he trod its roaring streets imperturbable as a red Indian.

"I came down here to fight," he announced at the end of the first week. "Where's Jim Hanford?"

Stubener whistled.

"I can lick him."

"But the public doesn't know that. If you licked him you'd be champion of the world, and no champion ever became so with his first fight."

"I can."

"But the public doesn't know it, Pat. It wouldn't come to see you fight. And it's the crowd that brings the money and the big purses. That's why Jim Hanford wouldn't consider you for a second. There'd be nothing in it for him.

"Besides, he's getting $3,000 a week right now in vaudeville, with a contract for twenty-five weeks. Do you think he'd chuck that for a go with a man no one ever heard of? You've got to do something first—make a record. You've got to begin on the little local dubs that nobody ever heard of—guys like Chub Collins, Roughhouse Kelly and the Flying Dutchman.

"When you've put them away, you're only started on the first round of the ladder. But after that you'll go up like a balloon."

"I'll meet those three named in the same ring one after the other," was Pat's decision. "Make the arrangements accordingly."

Stubener laughed.

"What's wrong? Don't you think I can put them away?"

"I know you can," Stubener assured him. "But it can't be arranged that way. You've got to take them one at a time. Besides, remember, I know the game and I'm managing you. This proposition has to be worked up, and I'm the boy that knows how. If we're lucky you may get to the top in a couple of years and be the champion with a mint of money."

"I'll meet those three named in the same ring one after the other."

Pat sighed at the prospect, then brightened up.

"And after that I can retire and go back home to the old man," he said.

Stubener was about to reply, but checked himself. Strange as was this championship material, he felt confident that when the top was reached it would prove very similar to that of all the others who had gone before.

Besides, two years was a long way off, and there was much to be done in the meantime.

When Pat fell to moping around his quarters, reading endless poetry books and novels drawn from the public library, Stubener sent him off to live on a Contra Costa ranch across the bay, under the watchful eye of Spider Walsh.

At the end of a week Spider whispered that the job was a cinch. His charge was away and over the hills from dawn till dark, whipping the streams for trout, shooting quail and rabbits and pursuing the one lone and crafty buck famous for having survived a decade of hunters. It was the Spider, who waxed lazy and fat, while his charge kept himself in condition.

As Stubener expected, his unknown was laughed at by the fight club managers. Were not the woods full of unknowns who were always breaking out with championship rashes?

A preliminary, say of four rounds—yes, they would grant him that. But the main event—never. Stubener was resolved that young Pat should make his debut in nothing less than a main event, and, by the prestige of his own name he at last managed it.

With much misgiving the Mission club agreed that Pat Glendon could go fifteen rounds with Rough House Kelly for a purse of $100. It was the custom of young fighters to assume the names of old ring heroes, so no one suspected that he was the son of the great Pat Glendon, while Stubener held his peace. It was a good press surprise package to spring later.

Came the night of the fight after a month of waiting. Stubener's anxiety was keen. His professional reputation was staked that his man would make a showing, and he was astounded to see Pat seated in his corner a bare five minutes lose the healthy color from his cheeks, which turned a sickly yellow.

"Cheer up, boy," Stubener said, slapping him on the shoulder. "The first time in the ring is always strange, and Kelly has a way of letting his opponent wait for him on the chance of getting stage fright."

"It isn't that," Pat answered. "It's the tobacco smoke. I'm not used to it, and it's making me fair sick."

His manager experienced the quick shock of relief. A man who turned sick from mental causes, even if he were a Samson, could never win to place in the prize ring. As for tobacco smoke, the youngster would have to get used to it, that was all.

Young Pat's entrance into the ring had been met with silence, but when Rough House Kelly crawled through the ropes his greeting was uproarious.

He did not belie his name. He was a ferocious looking man, black and hairy, with huge, knotty muscles, weighing a full 200 pounds.

Pat looked across at him curiously and received a savage scowl. After both had been introduced to the audience they shook hands.

And even as their gloves gripped Kelly ground his teeth, convulsed his face with an expression of rage and muttered:

"You've got yer nerve wid yeh." He flung Pat's hand roughly from his and hissed, "I'll eat yeh up, ye pup!"

The audience laughed at the action, and it guessed hilariously at what Kelly must have said.

Back in his corner and waiting the gong, Pat turned to Stubener.

"Why is he angry with me?" he asked.

"He ain't," Stubener answered. "That's his way, trying to scare you. It's just mouth fighting."

"It isn't boxing," was Pat's comment. And Stubener, with a quick glance, noted that his eyes were as mildly blue as ever.

"Be careful," the manager warned as the gong for the first round sounded and Pat stood up. "He's liable to come at you like a man eater."

And like a man eater Kelly did come at him, rushing across the ring in wild fury. Pat, who in his easy way had advanced only a couple of paces, gauged the other's momentum, sidestepped and brought his stiff arched right across to the jaw.

Then he stood and looked on with a great curiosity.

The fight was over.

Kelly had fallen like a stricken bullock to the floor, and there he lay without movement while the referee, bending over him, shouted the ten seconds in his unheeding ear.

When Kelly's seconds came to lift him Pat was before them. Gathering the huge, inert bulk of the man in his arms, he carried him to his corner and deposited him on the stool and in the arms of his seconds.

Half a minute later Kelly's head lifted and his eyes wavered open. He looked about him stupidly and then to one of his seconds.

"What happened?" he queried hoarsely. "Did the roof fall on me?"

As a result of his fight with Kelly, though the general opinion was that he had won by a fluke, Pat was matched with Rufe Mason. This took place three weeks later, and the Sierra club audience at Dreamland rink failed to see what happened.

Rufe Mason was a heavyweight, noted locally for his cleverness. When the gong for the first round sounded both men met in the center of the ring. Neither rushed. Nor did they strike a blow.

They felt around each other, their arms bent, their gloves so close together that they almost touched. This lasted for perhaps five seconds.

Then it happened, and so quickly that not one in a hundred of the audience saw. Rufe Mason made a feint with his right. It was obviously not a real feint, but a feeler, a mere tentative threatening of a possible blow.

It was at this instant that Pat loosed his punch. So close together were they that the distance the blow traveled was a scant eight inchs. It was a short arm left jolt, and it was accomplished by a twist of the left forearm and a thrust of the shoulder.

It landed flush on the point of the chin, and the astounded audience saw Rufe Mason's legs crumple under him as his body sank to the floor. But the referee had seen, and he promptly proceeded to count him out.

Again Pat carried his opponent to his corner, and it was ten minutes before Rufe Mason, supported by his seconds, with sagging knees and rolling, glassy eyes, was able to move down the aisle through the stupefied and incredulous audience on the way to his dressing room.

"No wonder," he told a reporter, "that Rough House Kelly thought the roof hit him."

After Chub Collins had been put out in the twelfth second of the first round of a fifteen round contest Stubener felt compelled to speak to Pat.

"Do you know what they're calling you now?" he asked.

Pat shook his head.

"One Punch Glendon."

Pat smiled politely. He was little interested in what he was called. He had certain work cut out which he must do ere he could win back to his mountains, and he was phlegmatically doing it, that was all.

"It won't do," his manager continued, with an ominous shake of the head. "You can't go on putting your men out so quickly. You must give them more time."

"I'm here to fight, ain't I?" Pat demanded in surprise.

Again Stubener shook his head.

"It's this way, Pat. You've got to be big and generous in the fighting game. Don't get all the other fighters sore. And it's not fair to the audience. They want a run for their money.

"Besides, no one will fight you. They'll all be scared out. And you can't draw crowds with ten second fights. I leave it to you. Would you pay $1 or $5 to see a ten second fight?"

Pat was convinced, and he promised to give future audiences the requisite run for their money, though he stated that, personally, he preferred going fishing to witnessing a hundred rounds of fighting.

EXPLOSION RIPS UP STREET; MANY HURT

Main Bursts, Gas Explodes, Traffic Tied Up.

New York, March 9.—Nearly a score of persons were injured and shaken up when a Twenty-third street crosstown street car in which they were passengers was tossed several feet into the air by the explosion of a gas main at Fifth avenue.

The explosion and a series of other blasts which followed in quick succession rocked the neighborhood, broke glass in office buildings for a block in all directions and caused a sheet of flame to shoot high into the air for hours.

Fire Chief Kenlon and two of his men speeding to the fire were caught by the heaviest explosion of the series, and the front of their automobile was lifted from the ground as they crossed Twenty-third street. A shower of shattered asphalt, lumber and paving blocks fell into the automobile.

There had been a flood in Twenty-third street, caused by the breaking of two big water mains early in the day. This had washed away the supporting soil between the gas main and the roof of a connecting branch of the Seventh avenue subway excavation. The strain brought a leak in the mains, and a spark caused by the starting of the street car, which had halted at Fifth avenue, brought about the explosion.

The Twenty-third street car, which was over the point of the explosion when it occurred, stopped on the west side of Fifth avenue to take on some passengers. When it started up there was a flash of a spark from the contact rail in the conduit. A second later came the explosion directly under the center of the car.

The car was lifted straight up in the air for several feet. When it came down it was squarely on the rails again. The thirty passengers were in a heap on the floor, there being scarcely one who remained uncut from the shattered glass of the windows or who had not been wrenched and bruised by the shock.

The first jar of the explosion and the roar of the flames was punctuated by the crash of glass falling from the windows of the fifteen story Fifth Avenue building on the northwest corner and from the six story building on the opposite corner, on the ground floor of which is the jewelry store of Le Bolt & Co. The policemen had barely cleared the street car of its burden of injured when there came a second explosion, more powerful than the first. The plate glass windows of the Garfield National bank in the Fifth Avenue building were blown out, and the sidewalks in Fifth avenue and Broadway were littered with shattered glass from the Flatiron building.

Arrest of Miss Pankhurst Causes Wild Scenes In England.

London, March 9.—Miss Sylvia Pankhurst, who long has been in hiding from the police, was arrested in the Strand while attempting to join a suffragette procession headed by Miss Zelie Emerson, an American suffragette. Ugly scenes resulted, in which the women and their men supporters fought the police with sticks and attempted to march through Downing street until dispersed by the mounted police. Several of the marchers were injured, and many persons were arrested.

SAFETY FIRST

In making a new banking connection, safety is the first consideration. The State Trust Company has a capital of One Hundred Thousand Dollars and a surplus of more than Fifty Thousand Dollars which constitutes a safety fund of approximately one to four in relation to deposits. In addition to this strong position, its funds are so invested that a large proportion of its assets can be converted into cash in twenty-four hours.

These facts are commended to the consideration of anyone contemplating a banking connection or a change in arrangements already existing.

WASTE DISPOSAL IS TALKED ABOUT

Mrs. Edward A. Faber Speaks Before the Monday Afternoon Club.

HOW CITIES MANAGE IT

Interesting Data Given as to the Methods in Vogue in Numerous American Municipalities for the Disposal of Refuse of All Sorts.

That present unsanitary methods of collection of ashes and other refuse in American cities brings illness and death in its wake, and that a better system of waste disposal should be found for Plainfield, were statements made yesterday by Mrs. Edward A. Faber, before members of the science department of the Monday Afternoon Club. Speaking on the assigned subject of "The Disposal of Waste," Mrs. Faber, addressing the gathering of her clubwomen, in the lecture room of the Public Library building, held their attention. She gave interesting data on the subject, and showed by the thoroughness with which she delved into it that much effort had been directed to acquiring the information which she was able to impart to the clubwomen at yesterday's meeting.

Over $114,000,000 was said to have been thrown away last year through the discarding of old stoves, pots, pans, tin pails and kitchen utensils of all sorts, in the United States. Much of this waste could be conserved, the speaker said. Unsightly barrels, pails and boxes, used as receptacles for ashes and garbage, here and in many cities, were declared to be an eyesore to the community and it was advised that they be done away with.

As showing how waste products can be conserved through scientific management, Mrs. Faber pointed out the fact that the city of Amsterdam, Holland, obtains a revenue of $20,000 yearly from the sale of its street sweepings. German cities, notably Berlin, are, it was said, far ahead of the cities of this country in the methods in use for collecting ashes, garbage and other refuse. Berlin, with its 3,000,000 population, being said to be the cleanest city in all Europe. Covering as large an area as does Berlin it requires but a period of sixteen hours to burn all refuse of the city that is collected in one day. The Germans are particularly efficient in the matter of the disposal of waste.

In the opinion of Mrs. Faber, the idea being gained through the perusal of much printed matter bearing upon the subject, and from inquiry directed in that direction by her, ashes and garbage should be separated before being collected. Containers, she declared, should not be airtight but the covers should permit of a slight circulation of air and in the top of the covers should be a trap to imprison flies. Housekeepers of Plainfield, as elsewhere, should strive to keep their rubbish low. Old newspapers should be tied together in readiness to be taken away by the rubbish collector. All grease is available for cooking, in proportion of one pound of grease, one pound of butter and one pound of lard, the speaker said. Glass jars, as receptables for small pieces of soap, were recommended for kitchen sinks, laundries and bathrooms. Garbage pails should, it was said, be cleansed thoroughly and two pails were recommended which permits of their alternate use.

Discussion was had of the systems of garbage and ashes collection in vogue in various American cities. In Cleveland all such refuse is loaded upon scows, towed out into the lake and dumped. San Francisco, like Pittsburgh, uses the cremation system for its refuse disposal, and successfully. In winter seventeen per cent. of all the electric power in the city of Pittsburgh is generated from its garbage reduction plant, and in the summer the percentage is twenty-four from this source. Milwaukee has a five-year contract with a private company which burns that city's refuse. Cincinnati loads its refuse on a float and it is then towed down the river to a fertilizer plant. St. Paul puts its garbage into hardwood casks, which are odorless, and ships it to fertilizer plants. The casks are returned, thoroughly cleaned, after they have been emptied. Newark has its garbage and other refuse collected by a municipal contractor. In Montclair, trenches are dug on a large farm and all garbage is buried. This is a most expensive method. The inhabitants of the Oranges were said to dispose of their refuse through a rendering plant but this method was held to be inadvisable for residential communities, owing to the fact that such a plant is far from odorless. The destructor method, which is advocated by Street Cleaning Commissioner Featherson, of New York, was declared by Mrs. Faber to be the best for the disposal of waste that she had ever heard of. There is absolutely no odor and the incineration is quick and sanitary.

BOOMING ENDRESS FOR THE SHRIEVALTY

Friends of Former Councilman Say He Would Make Capable Official.

Friends of former Councilman Fred Endress have launched a boom in his behalf for the Union county Democratic shrievalty nomination this fall. Although the announcement was first made only a few days ago, it has already been heartily endorsed by the party leaders throughout the city. The Democratic Club is prohibited by its rules from indorsing any candidate within its ranks, but no such restriction binds the Jefferson Club, and it is understood the West End organization will pledge its undivided support to the ex-city father after its regular meeting next Monday night.

Mr. Endress has been one of Democracy's most ardent supporters for many years, not only in Plainfield, but throughout the county and State as well. His friends argue that he is in every way fully capable of handling the sheriff's duties and he is entitled to it for what he has done for the party. He has been treasurer of the Democratic Club for three years, and is a member of both the city and county committee acting as treasurer for the former. Mayor Stewart appointed him a member of the finance committee of the county organization last fall. His only civic office has been that of Councilman.

It is currently reported that former Assemblyman Hugh McLaughlin is also to be a Democratic candidate for the nomination, while several Republican aspirants have been in the field for some time.

BREAK IN PIPE LINE CAUSES FIRE

Efforts to find out what caused the great clouds of black smoke which were visible in the direction of South Plainfield this morning, revealed the fact that a break in the Standard Oil Company's pipe line, which runs about a quarter of a mile south of that village, had resulted in an oil fire.

It was rumored shortly before noon that the plant of the Spicer Manufacturing Company at that village was on fire, and the local officers of the company were unable to verify the rumor until they sent an automobile to the scene, as all the telephone wires are down. Lack of means of communication make it impossible to say how great the loss is, but the smoke of the fire was discernible at 3 o'clock this afternoon. It is customary in a case of this kind to shut the oil off at the nearest possible point to the flame and then let it burn out.

TWO BOYS' MEETINGS.

Invitations have been sent to the members of the Y. M. C. A. boys' department Indian League to meet with Boys' Secretary C. William Bingeman in the association auditorium tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The College League members have received a similar invitation to be present at a session which will be conducted Thursday afternoon at the same hour.

DEMOCRATS' BALL.

The first annual reception and dance of the Jefferson Democratic Club will be held Thursday night, April 16. Plans have been completed for the event and many novel features the being anticipated. Included in the evening's program of entertainment will be two Irish pipers who will render several selections.

FUNERAL OF MRS. B. McDEVITT.

The funeral of Mrs. Bridget McDevitt will be held at her late residence, at 333 Manson place, tomorrow morning at 8:30 o'clock, and at St. Mary's church at 9 o'clock, at which service a solemn requiem mass for the repose of her soul will be offered. Burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

THOMAS LLOYD BURIED.

The funeral of the late Thomas Lloyd, son of the late Elizabeth Singer and Isaac S. Lloyd, was held this afternoon, at his late home at 65 Washington avenue. The services were conducted by Rev. Charles Kues, rector of Holy Cross church. Burial was in Hillside cemetery.

C. E. WILL MEET.

A business session of the local Christian Endeavor Union will be held at the Y. M. C. A. parlors this evening, at which delegates from the various societies will be present. Arrangements for the April mass meeting will be made and other important business will be discussed.

FITZPATRICK IS MADE A CAPTAIN

Gets Promotion in Fire Department Through Appointment by Mayor Stewart.

ENDORSED BY DOANE

Both the Successful Candidate and Opponent, E. E. Vail, Present Strong Petitions — Councilman Babcock Opposes Appointee.

James Fitzpatrick, who has been a paid man in the local fire department for the past seven years, was appointed a captain by Mayor Percy H. Stewart, at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council, last night, to succeed the late James Daly. He was named and confirmed after presenting a petition bearing 176 names as against one presented by Edward E. Vail, the opposing candidate, with 166 names, and beside Fire Chief T. O. Doane recommended Fitzpatrick's appointment, explaining that he believed it to be for the best interests of the department.

The fact that the appointment was to be made attracted a large gallery of interested spectators to the Council chamber. After the reading of the petitions and Fire Chief Doane's recommendation, Mayor Stewart made the appointment. All the members were present except Councilman Cornelius vanHerwerden, and all voted for the confirmation of Fitzpatrick excepting Councilman Juan A. Babcock.

In view of the fact that inasmuch as the fire chief had made the recommendation, the majority of the members felt justified in confirming the man of his choice, although Vail had served twenty-two years in the department. The affair has caused unusual interest not only among the members of the paid department, but outsiders as well have become interested in the appointment. It is expected that Captain Fitzpatrick will now be stationed at No. 4 house in the Netherwood section, taking the place of Captain William Townley, who has been transferred to headquarters.

FUNERAL OF MRS. A. C. WILMERDING HELD

Was a Grand Niece of DeWitt Clinton and Relative of Maj-Gen. James Clinton.

The funeral of Mrs. Annie Clinton Wilmerding, mother of Alexander Clinton Wilmerding, of Belvidere avenue, whose death occurred at her home, at 252 Orchard street, Elizabeth, Saturday, was held this morning in Brooklyn. Burial was in Greenwood cemetery. Mrs. Wilmerding was the widow of Thomas A. Wilmerding, and was a great-granddaughter of Major-General James Clinton, of the Continental army. She was eighty-seven years old and was born in Cornwall, N. Y. Mrs. Wilmerding was the youngest daughter of the late Dr. Alexander and Adelaide Arden Clinton.

The family home was in Varick street, New York, at a time when that section of the city was one of the most fashionable residential sections. She was a grand-niece of DeWitt Clinton, once Governor of New York, and was a granddaughter of Alexander James Hamilton. Four sons survive, Alexander Clinton Wilmerding, of Plainfield; William, Edward and Thomas Augustus Wilmerding, all of New York, and a daughter, Mrs. O'Neal Shotwell, who lives in New York.

LUNDIE'S PETITION FILED.

William B. Lundie's petition to Mayor Percy H. Stewart, regarding an alleged nuisance on Albert J. Rajotte's property, Dunellen, which was published in the Plainfield Daily Press a few days ago, was read at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council, last night, and filed. City Clerk James T. MacMurray informed the members that he had previously notified Mr. Lundie of Corporation Counsel Charles A. Reed's opinion, that the city had no jurisdiction in the matter.

WILL HOLD A FAIR.

The Benevolent Band of King's Daughters will hold a fair at the residence of Mrs. DeWitt C. Ivins, 1225 Watchung avenue, Friday afternoon, from 3 to 6 o'clock.

FINE TRIBUTE TO MAJOR BUTT

Costly Memorial Bridge Erected in Georgia to Be Dedicated April 14.

TO SPAN TWO CITIES

Artistic Insignia Executed by the Hinman Bronze Works of This City—Former President Taft to Attend Exercises.

Dedication of the $50,000 concrete memorial bridge for automobile traffic between the cities of Augusta and Somerville, Georgia, which has been erected as a tribute to the late Major Archibald Butt, military aid of former President William H. Taft, will be of particular interest to Plainfielders inasmuch as much of the ornamental bronze and iron work on the structure has been made by the Hinman Bronze Works, of this city. The bridge, which is 200 feet in length and has a width of 75 feet, was designed by W. H. Dacey, a New York architect. The architectural decorator is the W. W. Leland Company, of New York, and Nisbet Wingfield, of Augusta, Ga., is the engineer in charge of construction of the span.

Ceremonies of dedication of the Butt memorial bridge will take place April 14. Distinguished guests from civil and military life, from various parts of the United States, among them former President Taft, will be present on that occasion. The State of Georgia plans to make the occasion not only notable but a memorable one. Funds for the building of the memorial structure were raised partly through subscriptions of Temple-Noyes Lodge, No. 32, F. A. A. M., of Washington, D. C., of which the late Major Butt was long an honored member; through an appropriation made by the city of Augusta, and through public solicitations of subscriptions by a committee of Georgia society women, of which Mrs. Thomas Barrett, of Augusta, is chairman. As a result of their efforts a span of beauty has been constructed by the architect, graceful in its design and a worthy and lasting monument which will stand as a tribute of friends, in both the North and South, to the memory of the late Major Butt, in the State of his birth.

Selection of the Hinman Bronze Works, of this city, for the work of executing the base relief, bronze tablet and various seals, other insignia, and lamps, is regarded as a high tribute to the worth of the art productions of this well-known Plainfield concern. All of the work assigned has been executed and shipment has been made to Georgia, to the satisfaction of the architect and all others interested in the project, artistically and financially.

The memorial structure is national as well as local in character. The bridge will bear the coat of arms of the State of Georgia, of the Butt family, of Temple-Noyes Lodge, No. 52, F. A. A. M., of Washington, and the coat of arms of the United States. The structure will have four limestone columns, on each of which will be large electric globes, surmounted by bronze eagles, with extended wings. In the centre of the span will be a fine bas relief of the late Major Archibald Butt, who lost his life when the giant liner Titanic, of the White Star Line, sunk in mid-ocean while on her maiden trip to the United States. The bridge will also bear a bronze tablet with an inscription of dedication which has been written by former President Taft, in memory of his late aid and highly esteemed friend.

Much of the insignia mentioned is the work of the Hinman Bronze Works, of this city, and its execution has been accomplished, it is said, in an artistic and faultless manner.

ENGLISH COMPOSITION PRIZES ARE ANNOUNCED

The list of prizes to be competed for by the students of the Plainfield High School was announced this morning, and included in the long list is one of $10 in gold which is given as an annual award by The Plainfield Daily Press for the best essay on a topic of local interest.

The other prizes includes George Babcock's prize of $15 for the best essay, and $10 for the second best, to be competed for by the three upper classes; the Craig A. Marsh prize of $15 in gold for the best essay and $10 for the second best, in the freshman class; the W. C. T. U. prize of $5 in gold on the topic, "Why business men demand total abstinence from their employees." These compositions will be turned into the judges prior to May 4.

PLAN PURCHASE OF DARLING FARM

City Council Appropriates $5,000 to Secure Site for Disposal Works.

BEFORE OPTION EXPIRES

Joint Sewage Commission Meets Tomorrow Night to Close Deal—Sale of Bonds the Next Step in Project.

The first step on the part of the city looking to the purchase of the Darling farm in Piscataway Township for a sewage disposal site, to be used jointly by the city, the borough and Dunellen, was taken last night at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council, when the sum of $5,000 was appropriated through a resolution offered by Councilman Leighton Calkins. This is to go toward the purchase price of $36,000, the option figures.

As the option on the farm expires this week, it was decided to hold another meeting Thursday night, following one of the joint sewage commission tomorrow night, to close the deal. North Plainfield has already appropriated $5,000 for the same purpose and Dunellen has taken similar action. At the meeting Thursday night it is expected that arrangements to sell bonds will be made. Each municipality must sell its own bonds, no joint action in this respect having been arranged for by the several bodies. It is the opinion that no difficulty will be experienced in selling the bonds which in all will amount to about $3,000. Once the farm is purchased an engineer will be engaged and the actual work will be started building the joint trunk sewage line to the Darling farm.

The Council, last night, received from the State Board of Health, approval of its plans for building an extension of the sanitary sewage system in the west end of the city and this work will be started in the early spring or as soon as the weather will permit.

DEFAULTING CASHIER ATTEMPTS SUICIDE

Toms River, March 10.—William Simmons, cashier of the Ocean County Trust Company, who attempted suicide here, this morning, by shooting himself, was prevented from taking his life by his wife, who was nearby at the time. When asked to give a reason for his rash act the cashier admitted misappropriating $16,000 of the bank's funds. An examination of the accounts showed a shortage of $12,000, but the other $4,000 he claims to have taken cannot be accounted for.

Simmons was removed to the local jail and when arraigned in police court was held in $10,000 for further examination. A police guard has been assigned to watch him day and night as he constantly pleads to be given a gun in order that he may end all and save his wife and seven-year-old son from further disgrace. He is a prominent sportsman and is a charter member of the bank.

OPPOSES GRANTING OF LICENSES TO OUTSIDERS

Several applications were received for junkmen's licenses at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council, last night, which prompted Councilman John H. Cose to raise the question as to whether they were all residents of this city. Upon investigation it was learned that one applicant, John Bouletto gave his postoffice address as Scotch Plains. Mr. Cose then said that he would vote against that application, believing that residents of Plainfield should be given preference. As a result Bouletto's application was laid over for further investigation.

Mr. Cose in speaking of the matter after the meeting, said that one paramount reason why such applications should be held by Plainfielders is that sometimes these men receive stolen junk and if residents here the police can more easily recover it. On the other hand if they are non-residents they may take it far away making it difficult to get any trace of the goods.

THE TEMPERATURE.

The temperature report from The State Trust Company today is as follows: 9 a. m., 30 degrees; 11 a. m., 33 degrees; 1 p. m., 36 degrees.

SENATOR JAMES E. MARTINE TO BE HOST

Will Entertain Fire Chiefs at Banquet After Test of Auto Apparatus.

U. S. Senator James E. Martine will be the host of the visiting fire chiefs, who are expected to be present at the official test of the new Nott automobile fire engine, known as the Imperator, which will take place on Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The test will be made on Elm place. Fire Chief T. O. Doane has invited every fire chief in the State to witness the demonstration, and it is anticipated that many will take advantage of the opportunity thus afforded them of witnessing a demonstration of an engine that its builders claim is the last work in efficiency so far as a fire engine is concerned.

Representatives and mechanicians of the Nott company, makers of the apparatus, will have charge of the test. If satisfactory, as it has already, though unofficially, been held to be by the local officials, the engine will at the conclusion of Saturday's exhibition, be turned over to the municipality.

The test will be under the supervision of members of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, of New York. The visiting fire chiefs will be entertained at dinner at the Hotel Waldorf, on East Front street, at 5 o'clock in the afternoon by Senator Martine. It will be his "treat" and arangements for the entertainment of the firemen guests are being made by Fire Chief Doane at his suggestion.

TEMPORARY CABLE SERVICE CUT OFF

Miscreant Will Get Prison Sentence if Apprehended by Police.

Maliciousness on the part of some individual who is evidently trying to "even up" an old score has been giving the Wester Union Telegraph Company considerable trouble in this section during its efforts to re-establish the service between New York and points West. Yesterday afternoon a cable containing twenty wires was strung through this city and within an hour after it was cut and put out of commision. The cable in question is being extended toward Philadelphia and considerable difficulty was encountered in locating the break. Such a misdemeanor as this is punishable by a prison sentence of eight years and a fine of $1,000, and the authorities are making every effort to run down the offender, who will be dealt harshly with if apprehended.

Linemen have been working night and day in the attempt to get the telegraph service in working order, and up to the present time the repair gangs have succeeded in getting two-thirds of the service in this State back in commission. Some trouble was experienced by one big gang this morning, who worked their way up the Central tracks from Bound Brook to this city. They were suddenly halted upon their arrival here, however, by a hitch in the orders from the office authorities. The men congregated about town all morning but went back to work early this afternoon, when the necessary instructions arrived.

F. W. Warnke, the manager of the Elizabeth-Plainfield district, has stated that next Monday would see every telephone in this district back in working order, provided no further storms occur in the meantime. Of the 30,000 'phones in the State, which were rendered useless by the storm, 19,000 have been repaired and in the local district, 3,000 of the 7,000 disabled ones are back in use.

The first aim of the telephone company has been to place the various towns back on the map. That is, lines are being run through to the various points in every way possible, in some cases only in a temporary fashion, which will be made permanent as time allows. The long pole lines are in many cases still lying on the ground with poles broken and twisted.

FUNERAL OF S. C. CONKLIN.

Funeral services over the remains of the late Sylvanus C. Conklin will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, at his late residence at 44 Fairview avenue, in the borough. The services will be conducted by Rev. Philip B. Strong, pastor of the First Baptist church. Burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

ELKS' MINSTRELS REHEARSAL.

The Elks' minstrel troupe will hold a regular rehearsal in the clubhouse tonight. An urgent request is made of all members to be present as several new features are to be taken up.

NEILS PEDERSAN IS THE FAVORITE

Further Efforts to Win the Hand of An Heiress Will Be Unavailing.

WILL FULFILL TERMS

Miss Johnson, the Beneficiary, is Active in the Work of the Swedish Lutheran Church — Prospective Bridegroom a Lineman.

Although she has successfully eluded the army of scribes and camera artists who have been on her trail since she announced the news of her recent windfall, it has been finally learned that one Neils Pedarsan, an employe of the local telephone company, is the lucky fellow who will some day share the $25,000 left the Plainfield girl in the will of her uncle. It has been rumored about town since Miss Johnson became an heiress that there was a certain young Swedish gentleman who would assist her in keeping the regulations of the bequest and his name was made known last night.

By the terms of Gustav Waling's will, his niece will get $25,000 in cold cash if she affixes her signature to a marriage license within the next 365 days, and friends of the beneficiary say that there is no doubt but what she will reap the harvest. Many of those who aspired to get rich quick by winning Miss Johnson's hand in marriage never knew that they would have to reckon with a husky son of Sweden in pressing their claims, but after it has been publicly announced the prospective heiress will be able to get a little rest.

Since the glad tidings were sent to the Plainfield young woman, who is employed as a domestic in the home of Howard Colby, in Evergreen avenue, she has received a deluge of mail carrying proposals from the opposite sex of every class and in every walk of life. These missles have furnished much interesting reading matter for the recipient, but all reach the waste basket via the "once over" route. Miss Johnson says that there is but one who figures in the case and he was an admirer long before the $25,000 came into prominence.

The fortunate young man is employed as a lineman by the telephone company, and the fat sum bequeathed his prospective bride together with his savings since he has come to this country, will put him on the "road to easy street." In the summer Pedersan piloted the patrol wagon during the absence of Thomas O'Gorman, the regular driver, and is well known locally, having lived here for a number of years. He is of a quiet, unassuming disposition, and has little to say regarding his intentions toward the heiress.

Miss Johnson is active in the work of the Swedish Lutheran church on West Seventh street, and is the treasurer of the sewing society of the institution. She is prominent in the local Swedish organizations and has lived here for a number of years. Friends of the young woman are of the opinion that she will remain in this country and will not go to Sweden to claim the fortune. She will probably place the proceedings necessary for the securing of the money in the hands of a Swedish lawyer as soon as the terms are fulfilled.

BOY SCALDEED WHEN KETTLE OF WATER WAS OVERTURNED

While playing in the rear of his home, 455 West Third street, yesterday afternoon, the seven-year-old son of Frank Daley, overturned a pot of boiling water and was severely scalded about the face and arms.

The youth was attended by Dr. Peter B. Cregar, of Grant avenue, and although he is suffering intensely as the result of the accident hopes are entertained for his recovery.

KING'S DAUGHTERS' MUSICAL.

The Cheerful Circle of the King's Daughters have completed arrangements for a musical and tea which will be held at the residence of Mrs. Walter Righter, 211 West Seventh street, Thursday afternoon, April 2, from 3 to 6 o'clock. A feature of the musical program will be the appearance of Randall H. Trumbe, a tenor soloist who will render several selections during the afternoon.

THIEVES GOT NOTHING.

The office of the Union Grain Company at 246 East Third street was entered by thieves last night, but they stole nothing as far as can be learned today. The cash drawer was opened but nothing is left there at night by the proprietors.

IN CHANCERY OF NEW JERSEY.

To Charles D. Robinson, Receiver, Etc., and The Mercantile Co-Operative Bank:

By virtue of an order of the Court of Chancery of New Jersey, made on the day of the date hereof, in a cause wherein Catherine Dezendorf is complainant, and you Charles D. Robinson, Receiver, Etc., and The Mercantile Co-Operative Bank, are defendants, you are required to appear, plead, answer or demur to the bill of said complainant, on or before the 30th day of March next, or the said bill will be taken as confessed against you.

The said bill is filed for the purpose of Quieting title to certain lands in the City of Plainfield, in the County of Union and State of New Jersey, bounded and described as follows, to wit:

Known as Lots Nos. 30 and 31, Block D, on a map of 264 lots, owned by Watson Whittlesey, at Netherwood Station, in the City of Plainfield, Union County, N. J., surveyed Sept., 1891, by F. A. Dunham, C. E., and Surveyor of Plainfield, N. J., and filed for record in the Register's Office of Union county, N. J., Sept., 1891. Beginning at a point on the west line of George Street 154 75-100 feet northeasterly from the northwest corner of George Street and Jackson Avenue; running thence northwesterly in a line parallel with the north line of Jackson Avenue 110 feet; thence northeasterly in a line parallel with the west line of George Street, 50 feet; thence southeasterly to the west line of George Street, 110 feet; thence southwesterly along the west line of George Street, 50 feet, to the place of beginning.

Also: All of Lots 32 and 33, in Block D, on a Map of 261 lots owned by Watson Whittlesey, located at Netherwood Station, in the City of Plainfield, County of Union, State of New Jersey, surveyed August, 1891, by F. A. Dunham, Engineer of Plainfield, N. J., and filed for record in the Register's Office of Union County, N. J., Sept., 1891, these tracts or parcels of land and premises, hereinafter particularly described. Beginning at a point on the west line of George Street, one hundred and fifty-four and seventy-five hundredths (154.75-100) feet southwesterly from the southwest corner of George Street and Netherwood Avenue; running thence northwesterly in a line parallel with the southerly line of Netherwood Avenue, one hundred and ten (110) feet; thence southwesterly in a line parallel with the west line of George Street, fifty (50) feet; thence southeasterly to the west line of George Street, one hundred and ten (110) feet; thence northeasterly along the west line of George Street, fifty (50) feet, to the place of beginning.

And you, Charles D. Robinson, Receiver, Etc., are made a defendant because deed made by you as Sole Permanent Ancillary Receiver of the aforesaid Mercantile Co-Operative Bank to Catherine Dezendorf and her husband, July 21, 1903, was a quit-claim deed and intended to convey the title, this action being brought to quiet the title to the property and to have the said deed declared to be a sufficient conveyance. And you, The Mercantile Co-Operative Bank, are made a defendant because your receiver aforesaid failed to use a deed with the proper words of conveyance as aforesaid; this action being brought to give validity to such deed to pass title.

Dated January 29, A. D. 1914.

THE POLL TAX.

The press of this State has, for several weeks, been giving considerable attention to the question of the poll tax, discussing the pros and cons, not only through the editorial columns, but publishing many letters on the problem from citizens as well.

While in the majority of cases, the theory is upheld that "every male inhabitant shall pay one dollar poll tax" in consideration of the police and fire protection he receives, the good roads he is privileged to use, and the public schools from which his children may derive benefit, there are two serious objections to that phase of the law as it now stands. The first objection, and a most logical one, is that the bulk of the burden of this tax falls upon those who are already paying tax on either real or personal property. Why those who are already being taxed should be compelled to bear an additional burden is a question still unanswered by those who maintain that the tax be retained.

The second objection is one directed, not so much toward the law itself as toward the way the tax collectors enforce, or rather, fail to enforce, the collection of this dollar levy. If the State cannot see its way clear to insist that all collectors in all parts of the State enforce its collection, it is high time that a repealer be enacted. A tax law good for one municipality is good for all. The public desire to have this matter so arranged that all may have a share in the support of the government, and to secure that end, the law should be enforced everywhere by those to whom the proper authority is delegated.

CAUSE OF INCONVENIENCE.

Installation of pay-as-you-enter trolley cars on the local lines has caused a loud and universal protest from the public. It is claimed that the old fashioned cars with their small rear platforms are not adapted to the method of collecting fares as the patrons enter and much inconvenience has been caused since the Public Service Railway Company introduced the plan here. During the recent bad weather passengers were forced to stand in the cold on the slush covered and cramped platforms while the conductors made change or distributed transfers and protests to the unfortunate empolyes were unavailing.

It is the consensus of opinion that cars with spacious platforms should be provided for the P. A. Y. E. innovation and until that time the feature will not prove popular with the public at large. It is the aim of the Public Service Corporation to please its patrons and when the new method of collecting fares was introduced it was done with a view to alleviate hardships rather than to produce new ones. The public demands and should have accommodations which are satisfactory at all seasons of the year and this is one instance in which the desires of the travelers have been sadly neglected.

Plainfield has supplied its fire department with three motor driven vehicles up to the present time, but as yet has failed to consider the needs of the hospital and police department along this same line. At the present time the ambulance and police patrol are housed in the barn back of the police headquarters and drawn by the same horse. Oftentimes it is necessary to send as far east as Garwood and as far west as Lincoln for patients to be brought to Muhlenberg Hospital and during the recent bad weather, more than ever before, the urgent need for the provision of up-to-date transportation has presented itself. A horse has to be driven slowly through slush and snow in order to last eight or ten miles and in many cases it is necessary to get the patient to the institution as quickly as possible. If Plainfield had a motor driven vehicle to be used jointly for police and hospital work it would not only be a great saving to the community but also a source of protection for the populace of this and surrounding towns. An automobile could be housed more economically than the horse is now, and would at the same time add to the efficiency of the local departments.

Carelessness on the part of local merchants in leaving the doors of their stores unlocked at night has been the source of considerable annoyance to the local police of late. In these days when petty thieving is no rarity, the patrolmen on some beats find four and five doors unlocked every night and the police blotters are filled with the names of thoughtless business men. In some instances the keys are even left in the locks and this is little more than an invitation to the crook to enter and ransack. If proprietors of stores and downtown offices would be a little more careful along this line they would greatly assist the police department in checking the spread of minor robberies which have been so prevalent of late.

The action of the local and borough police judges in making examples of delinquent property owners who have failed to comply with the terms of the ordinance to compell the clearing away of snow within a reasonable time after storms, is a commendable one and will no doubt go a long way toward remedying the nuisances caused. The authorities on both sides of the brook should establish a fixed fine to be levied on persistent offenders and the old practise of reprimanding delinquents every time they are brought before the court should be discouraged.

DANTON'S VICTIMS WILL FACE CHARGES

"Kidnapped" Policemen Are Charged with Incompetency —Trial Next Thursday.

Another chapter in the "W. Arlington Danton" case was disclosed in Summit, yesterday afternoon, when Patrolman William George and Detective John J. Gannon were notified to appear before Mayor Francis H. Bergen in the latter's office Thursday night to answer to charges of incompetency. The officers mentioned are the ones who were involved in the famous "kidnapping" case when Danton was alleged to have tied them hand and foot to the walls of an old, dilapidated barn and left them there while he escaped in an automobile.

Charges against the "victims" were drawn up by City Solicitor Corra N. Williams, of Summit, and the two will be made defendants in a trial that will probably retire them from the police force. While the general charge against the two is "incompetency," specifically they are:

"That the officers did not arrest and detain a man whom they had attempted to arrest and detain."

"That they did not properly provide themselves with equipment."

"That they had been detailed to patrol duty in that locality for the purpose of arresting and detaining all suspicious characters."

Since the "kidnapping" of the two minions of the law much criticism regarding the ability of the coppers has been going the rounds in Summit and wherever they have appeared on the streets of that town they have been jeered. The chauffeur of the automobile, who was compelled to drive to the barn at a pistol's point by Danton, has been subjected to so much taunting that he has moved away from Summit until matters have been cleared up.

The charges against the policemen are preferred by Chief of Police George W. Brown. Both of the accused have retained counsel and are prepared to fight the issue. The consensus of opinion is that the two officers displayed cowardice when confronted by Danton who "got the drop" on them by his expert manipulation of a gun.

It is probable that extradition papers for Danton will be drawn up soon at the office of Prosecutor Albert A. Stein, of Union county. In the meantime the fugitive is serving a thirty day sentence in the Tombs prison after having been identified by Patrolman George as the latter's "kidnapper." The prosecutor's office would not state today whether action had been definitely decided upon.

Firemen and Patrolmen Ask for Raise in Pay—Shade Tree and Recreation Commissions Seek Appropriations.

That the West End Civic Association is a wide-awake body was shown at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council, last night, when a communication was received from the organization asking for improvements in that part of the city. The communication closed by adding rather humorously that "these are a few of the things we desire." Among the improvements sought are numerous electric lights, some of which to be changed to different locations, cross walks at various points, proper drainage for surface water at several points, a permanent pavement on West Seventh street, larger and better trolley cars on the Fourth street line, and proper cleaning of the walks in snow storms.

As for the improved trolley service Councilman R. A. Claybrook explained that that matter was now being taken up with the Public Service Corporation. All of the other matters were referred to the committees on lights, streets and public affairs for further consideration.

Petitions were received from both the firemen and patrolmen of the city asking for increased pay, as previously reported in the Plainfield Press. These were referred to the proper committees. The increase averages about $8.34 per month.

The request of the Board of Health to have a telephone extension at an additional annual expense of $600 the Board to pay for same, was granted, Mayor Percy H. Stewart being authorized to sign the contract on the part of the city. The telephone contract formerly held by former Councilman W. L. Gloak was cancelled at his request and a resolution offered by Mr. Calkins and adopted authorized the telephone company to transfer this instrument to the sewage disposal works.

The Shade Tree Commission made a request for an annual appropriation of $2,500 for its general work and the usual appropriation of $200 for the care of the city park. This was referred to the finance committee, as was also a communication from the Public Recreation Committee asking for an appropriation of $1,500, an increase of $200 over last year.

H. C. VanEmburgh was authorized to make the necessary changes on the city tax map and to make any additions for the sum of $225. Several resolutions were offered by Councilman Thomas F. Hylan authorizing additional electric lights. Among those granted was one on East Ninth street, between Third place and Park avenue; three in the vicinity of Clinton avenue, in response to a request from Rev. C. H. Mallery; one on Plainfield avenue, at the request of the Plainfield Construction Company; one on Arlington avenue, at the request of James S. Ellis, and one on Sherman avenue, petitioned for by William Jeffery.

Councilman Francis J. Blatz offered an amendment to an ordinance, read for information, providing that snow and ice shall be cleaned off all sidewalks, and gutters opened, except on streets where the trolley tracks run, by the property-owners or tenants within twelve hours after daylight, under penalty of $5. Copies of this amendment will be sent to all of the members and the matter will probably be acted upon at the April meeting.

FEATURE PHOTO-PLAYS.

"Fantomas" will be the feature photo-play at Proctor's today, continuing its success in entertaining both young and old. The other pictures include "Out In the Rain," "The Gun Behind the Man," "The Hidden Clue," "Slim to the Rescue," "Getting Rid of His Mother-in-Law." Tomorrow's program will comprise the second in the series of that fascinating "Queen of the Movies," "Our Mutual Girl," "The Desert Tribesmen," in two parts; "The Highwaymen's Shoes," two reels; the Pathe Weekly, and other features. The big feature for Thursday and Friday will be "The Battle of Shiloh," a Lubin production in four parts.

MEN TO REHEARSE.

The men of the Cantata Society of the Monroe Avenue church will hold a rehearsal tonight and the whole society will rehearse on Friday night. The concert, which was announced for Friday night has been postponed to Friday night, March 27.

MAY CONTRACT ALL STREET WORK

AS ECONOMY MEASURE

Ordinance Introduced to Compell Laying of Concrete Walks in the Future—Supply Bids Are Accepted.

Perhaps one of the most important matters considered by the Common Council at its adjourned meeting, last night, was the adoption of an ordinance offered by Councilman Francis J. Blatz, of the street committee, authorizing the advertising for bids for furnishing the city with materials for street work for the coming year and proposals for doing the work by contract; also for three wagons, one to spread tar, another to spread asphalt and a third for spreading sand. These will be received at the April meeting.

This step is in line with a suggestion made by the Board of Trade some time ago and again last night by the West End Civic Association in a communication asking for improvements. It has always been the belief of many that the city can save money by contracting its street work, instead of doing it under the present method. If the bids received confirm this belief in the future this work will be given out by contract.

Anotner important matter was the introduction of an ordinance to amend an ordinance, offered by Mr. Blatz, providing that in the future all sidewalks be of concrete instead of flagging, laid of uniform width under the direction of the street commissioner, and that curbing of the same material be laid. It is claimed that the expense is no greater than in laying flagging. This ordinance was adopted on two readings and ordered advertised. Mr. Blatz also offered a resolution, which was adopted, authorizing the acceptance of the bid of the Plainfield Trap Rock Company for furnishing the city with crushed stone during the coming year. A similar resolution was offered by Councilman A. D. Edgar, in accepting the bid of Joseph Harrigan for furnishing the city with oats, hay and straw for the city departments.

REV. WILSON TO SPEAK.

The speaker at the Rescue Mission tonight will be Rev. Arthur K. Wilson, of Cranford, who has only recently been ordained as a minister by the Methodist conference.

CO. K NOTES

A special course of instructions was given by Captain Charles A. Peterson, at the drill last night, in anticipation of the annual inspection, which will be conducted by regular army officers next Monday night.

The quartermaster-sergeant and his assistants have had their hands full during the past week straightening out the equipment after the fair, and getting ready for the annual inspection.

Rifle cleaning details will be at the armory every night this week.

A special drill will be held Thursday night, so that the men in line may become thoroughly familiar with the various moves for the inspection next Monday night.

The quartermaster's store room is beginning to look like a well managed place, with its sixty compartments, filled with the individual equipment of each man. All the articles of a soldier's camp equipment is laid out so that when the inspecting officers go through the room next week they can at a glance see how everything is kept in readiness.

At the close of the drill session, last night, Private Oscar Andersen was presented with a five-dollar gold piece as the trophy for the privates' match which was shot on the company's outdoor rifle rang on Maple avenue, New Year's Day. The gold piece was awarded by Corporal August Kmosko, who has endeavored in the past to get the privates, and especially the new men in the organization, to take an interest in rifle practise. Captain Charles A. Peterson made the presentation speech and Private Andersen in turn made a short speech of acceptance. The match for which the gold piece was awarded was for the privates of the company only and was shot according to the rules of the instructors in rifle practire in the local organization. None of the commissioned or non-commissioned officers were eligible for competition in this match. Quartermaster Sergeant James A. Thompson, one of the three members of the company who received proficiency certificates at the school of musketry, held at Sea Girt last June, a member of the State rifle team which competed in the National and International rifle matches at Camp Perry, Ohio, last summer, and later made an instructor of the Sea Girt ranges, was in charge of the match, and also acted as range officer.

A special meeting of the non-commissioned officers was held by Captain Peterson, last night, at the close of the regular drill session. At the meeting each non-commissioned officer was given instructions. In addition to the coaching of the captain, each man was told how and what part each should take in every move next week.

The regular school of musketry session, which is usually held on Thursday nights, will be postponed this week on account of the special drill session that the captain has called for.

Orders have been issued by Captain Peterson that the annual inspection of the company, by regular army officers and officers appointed by the State, will be held in the armory next Monday night. The olive drab uniform, canvas puttees, campaign hat and russet shoes will be worn by the men. All khaki clothing and all camp equipments, as well as all the blue overcoats, now in possession of any of the men, have been ordered turned in by Thursday night, so that they can be arranged for inspection.

Warren Billings, son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Billings, of Codington avenue, is able to be out again after being confined to his home by illness.

BIG POPULATION FOR JERSEY CITY

Bill Would Consolidate Hudson County Towns.

MAY BE PUT UP TO VOTERS

For Some Time There Has Been Considerable Agitation Over Plan—Jersey City Chamber of Commerce Members Would Like to See Such Federation.

Trenton, N. J., March 10.—If the bill introduced in the New Jersey legislature by Assemblyman Joseph Mulligan of Jersey City becomes a law the voters of the thirteen municipalities in Hudson county may decide at the general election next fall whether or not they want to consolidate into one big city of nearly 600,000 population.

Director of Revenue and Finance George F. Brensinger of the Jersey City board of commissioners drafted the bill. By its provisions Jersey City, Hoboken and Bayonne cities would be federated with West Hoboken, Union Hill, West New York and seven smaller municipalities.

For some time there has been considerable agitation to effect a consolidation of the thirteen towns. Prominent members of the Jersey City chamber of commerce would also like to see such a federation. They would call the municipality the city of Hudson.

The Mulligan bill also provides that any two municipalities may consolidate if the votes so decide at a referendum election—that is, if the two places are adjoining. Charter commissioners from each municipality would draft a charter to be submitted to the legislature for its approval.

The bill would not force a confederation. It would simply pave the way or such a project.

FILLS NEW JERSEY PLACES.

Fielder Sends Another Batch of Appointments to Senate.

Trenton, N. J., March 10.—Governor Fielder sent another batch of appointments to the senate for confirmation, among them being Robert R. McAdams of Elizabeth for clerk to the court of chancery. The place pays $6,000 a year. The other nominations were:

Leroy Loder of Bridgeton to be judge of the common pleas court of Cumberland county.

Edwin F. Miller of Vineland to be prosecutor in Cumberland county.

George F. Fortmeyer of East Orange, Frank E. Stillman of Rahway, to be members of the board of managers of the state reformatory of Rahway.

James G. Blauvelt of Paterson to be member of the Passaic valley sewerage and drainage commission.

John G. Risele of Newark, Patrick J. Ryan of Elizabeth, Daniel S. Voorhees of Morristown, John Nevin of Jersey City and Charles Hetzel of Newark to be members of the board of managers of the State Hospital For the Insane at Morris Plains.

"POISON PEN" TRIAL STARTS.

Motion to Quash by Mrs. Nelson L. Pollard's Attorney Refused.

Elizabeth, N. J., March 10.—After numerous adjournments covering a period of nearly a year, the famous "poison pen" case against Mrs. Nelson L. Pollard, wife of a prominent Public Service corporation official, was started before Judge Connolly in the court of quarter sessions. She is charged with having written certain insulting and offensive letters to Mrs. Charles F. Jones, wife of a local dentist and a next door neighbor and co-worker with the defendant in the Daughters of the American Revolution.

An unsuccessful endeavor was made by Samuel A. Schleimer, Mrs. Pollard's counsel, to have the indictment quashed on the ground that it was improperly brought. The attorney also asserted that the letters complained of were not insulting or scurrilous. That his client did not write them is a matter for him to prove during the trial.

DIES IN HIS HUNDREDTH YEAR

John Anderson of East Orange Was Born In Scotland In 1814.

East Orange, N. J., March 10.—John Anderson died in his hundredth year. He was born in Elgin, Scotland, on May 10, 1814, and came to America when he was nineteen years old.

His wife, who was Miss Sarah R. Adams of Morristown, died seven years ago, aged ninety. Six children were born to them, three of whom survive. Mrs. William H. Burnett of this city, Mrs. James Yereance of New York and Mrs. Albert L. Milier of Orange. There are twelve grandchildren and eleven great-grandchildren.

BRIEF STATE ITEMS.

Vice Chancellor Howell of Newark, whose seven year term expires on April 10, has accepted another term.

While bidding farewell to a girl at her home in Blairstown William Reed, who is charged with forgery, was arrested.

Peering through the window of his home in Chatham, Frederick Du Champ saw a dark object moving about in the yard. He fired two shots at the figure, neither of which took effect. The supposed burglar escaped.

35 PERISHED IN CLUBHOUSE FIRE

Many Others Missing In St. Louis Blaze.

SOME BODIES RECOVERED

Home of Missouri A. C. and Boatman's Bank Destroyed—Some Killed by Leaping From Windows—All Unaccounted For Are Believed Dead.

St. Louis, March 10.—That thirty-five persons perished in the fire which destroyed the Missouri Athletic club is the opinion of club officials, the estimate was made after checking up the names of club members known to have been in the club and who are still missing.

Before the walls of the burning building fell firemen managed to reach the sixth floor by means of ladders and there found the body of J. Martin Rickey of St. Paul, auditor of the Ford Motor company. Mr. Rickey had been suffocated, and his body was almost destroyed by the flames.

Many of the guests, driven to the windows as the flames burst into their rooms, jumped to the street when they could stand the heat no longer. Two were killed in this way and several were so badly injured that they may die. Others, it is believed, perished as Rickey did, and their bodies were carried down in the flaming debris when the floor fell in.

The Identified Dead.

E. C. Kessler, cashier of the Ludlow Saylor Wire company of St. Louis; J. Martin Rickey, auditor of the Ford Motor company of St. Paul; T. G. Little, salesman, of Chicago; James Riley, William E. Erd, real estate dealer, of St. Louis; man supposed to be W. J. Kinser, treasurer of the Kinser Construction company of St. Louis; man supposed to be L. P. Ruff, employee of the Simmons Hardware company of St. Louis; unidentified man.

Forty-five of the guests had been accounted for. As far as could be learned there were between seventy-five and ninety men in the rooms when the fire was discovered. Eight of the forty-five accounted for are at the City hospital terribly injured. The others are being cared for at different hotels.

Only the south wall of the seven story clubhouse is still standing, and it was expected to go at any minute. The other walls crashed in one after the other, taking with them floors and piling them in a mass of debris twenty-five or thirty feet high. Under this pile, which is still very hot, are thought to be what is left of many bodies of guests of the club.

Firemen Have Close Call.

The fire spread from one building to another in the block, which is right in the heart of the business section of the city. Almost every piece of fire apparatus in the city worked on the flames. Many of the firemen had narrow escapes from death. When the Fourth avenue wall crashed in several firemen were working in the street and had just time to escape a shower of bricks.

It is believed now that the fire started in the main dining room or kitchen of the club on the third floor.

Night Clerk Reisinger gave a vivid account of the fire after he had narrowly escaped death in the flames while trying to warn the sleepers of their danger. Reisinger attempted to carry out the register of the club, but dropped it in making his escape. He estimated that there were about seventy-five guests asleep at the time. There were other men in the cafe and the lobby.

"I was standing at the desk when I got the first alarm of fire," said Reisinger. "A member of the club and a lady were in the foyer awaiting a taxicab. The taxi was long in coming, and the man went outside to see if it was near.

"The lady appeared nervous and walked to the window and looked out. I heard her say, 'Oh, look at that big fire across the street!'

"I went to the window and saw that what she was looking at was a reflection in the windows of the Kennard Carpet company of a fire on our side of the street. I went out and saw that the fire was in the club.

"As soon as I could get back into the club I notified about twelve men who were in the cafe. They all got out safely."

ALL QUIET AT TAMPICO.

Report Confirmed by United States Consul at Gulf Port.

Vera Cruz, March 10.—Clarence A. Miller, the United States consul at Tampico, confirms the report that all is quiet at that place. He says the federals are as far as La Puerta, while the rebels have not moved from Victoria, capital of the state of Tamaulipas.

The gunboat Zaragoza sailed with 100 soldiers who will be left at Tampico.

Runaway Hits Crowded Trolley.

York, Pa., March 10.—Two brothers, Joseph and John Lo Picolo, were injured here in a runaway accident. Both were in a wagon when the horse took fright and dashed into a trolley car filled with passengers. The brothers were thrown out and badly cut about the head and face.

TYPO UNION ELECTION.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 9.—At the general offices of the International Typographical Union in this city announcement was made yesterday of the close of nominations for the annual election of officers of the organization. The elections will be held on May 20 at which time the local unions throughout the United States and Canada will vote for president, vice president, secretary-treasurer, trustees of the union printers' home and delegates to the convention of the American Federation of Labor. The candidates for the presidency of the union are Charles B. Hawkes and Marden G. Scott, both of New York city. James M. Duncan, who has filled the office of president since the resignation of James M. Lynch, is not a candidate for the place. A spirited contest is expected for the place of Secretary-Treasurer J. W. Hays, of Minneapolis, who is a candidate for re-election.

RAILROAD FINANCING.

Philadelphia, Pa., March 9—The stockholders of the Pennsylvania Railroad, at their annual meeting here today, are expected to give their approval to the biggest piece of railroad financing that has taken place in several years. The plan is to authorize a mortgage to secure bonds to be issued from time to time when and as approved by the stockholders to an amount not in excess of the outstanding capital stock. Under the terms of the mortgage, the company would at the present time be authorized to issue a total of $600,000,000 of bonds, while the maximum would be raised correspondingly by any addition to the amount of stock out. It is understood, however, that the company has no intention of issuing bonds under the new mortgage immediately.

Mrs. Hippolyte Texier, of Watchung, fell while standing on a chair in her home on Saturday and is now confined to her bed with severe injuries.

DEFEATED TEAM CAME BACK AND TOOK TWO

After Dropping the First Lexington Ran Away With the Second and Third.

After winning the opening match in the Columbus Club bowling league race, last night, the Gettysburg quintet reversed matters and lost to the Lexington outfit in two straight clashes. An even 800 brought victory to the Gettysburg crew in the first set-up, while the rival clan knocked over 686 of the wooden images. Lexington came back with a spurt in the second game and rang up 838, the high team score of the evening, against the Gettysburg pinners' 801.

The third and deciding match was the closest of the trio but the Lexington players had evidently struck their stride and came out in the lead with nineteen pins to spare. George Taylor's 216 not only put his team in the winning class in the first session but also set the high individual water mark of the evening. He dropped to 160 in the second encounter and this score, together with a 126, was responsible for his followers' defeat.

The scores:

LEXINGTON.
Brady	145	130	138
Green	107	140	145
Connors	157	175	179
Kyle	150	147	151

FOURTEENTH ANNUAL BOWLING TOURNEY AT BUFFALO

Buffalo, N. Y., March 10.—With an entry list that comprises hundreds of well known bowlers, the fourteenth annual American bowling championship tournament got underway in this city last night and will continue until the end of the month. The tournament is conducted under the auspices of the American Bowling Congress, the oldest and most representative organization of its kind in existence.

There is every indication that the present tournament will be not only the largest but the most representative event of its kind ever held. All of the important bowling centres of the middle West, including Chicago, Cincinnati, Louisville, St. Louis, Milwaukee, Omaha, Minneapolis and Kansas City, are sending their customary large delegations. Buffalo's central location is also expected to attract a record-breaking attendance of the tenpin knights from the Eastern cities and from Canada. In addition, several cities of the South are sending their star teams, while the Pacific coast section is to be represented in the competition by the San Francisco bowlers who have been making an Eastern tour.

JOHNSON WILL GET TRIAL.

The Jersey City baseball club, of the International League, will inaugurate its spring series with the Philadelphia Nationals at Wilmington, N. C., tomorrow. Three games will comprise the Skeeters' opening series and Carl Johnson, the Plainfield school teacher, will get his first tryout behind the bat in a Skeeter uniform.

DINNER DATE SET.

The date for the dinner to be tendered the North Plainfield High School basketball players has been definitely set for Thursday night and will be held in the Somerset Street school.

"Sportdom Tips"

Feminine basketball teams will resume play where the boys' teams left off this season and during the next couple of weeks we are due to get some of the best court matches of the season in this particular phase of the sport, the entire program culminating Saturday night, March 21, when the Plainfield and Trenton Y. M. C. A. teams meet for the second time this season. This afternoon the Plainfield and North Plainfield High School Alumni teams will take up the reins where their undergraduate charges leave off. A game between an All-Star feminine quintet of this city is also pending with the Trentonians at the latter place and taken as a whole the finale on the year of basketball is an unusually attractive one and should prove highly appetizing to the ardent follower of the pastime.

We are still waiting for those North Plainfield and Plainfield High School basketball elections. It is about time the teams got busy on their choices. This habit of waiting until the following year to pick a leader is a bad practice and deprives a majority of the players who have done the most for the school on the court the previous year of a chance to have a say in the matter. Both schools this year have a good assortment of qualified leaders in their ranks and some close rivalry is expected when the balloting gets under way. The probabilities are that Hyman Abrams will be the selection in the borough, while there are three men eligible for the job in Plainfield.

Baseball captains in both of the High Schools are contemplating an out-of-door drill for their candidates as soon as the snow clears up. Rosenson, of P. H. S., and Smalley, of N. P. H. S., both have a splendid assortment of battery men limbering up indoors at the present time and these candidates are already in the pink of condition to show the stuff they have to offer. Present prospects are that both of the High Schools will be represented by strong batteries and the outfield will have many new faces cavorting around this year.

Parents interested in their children's welfare in athletics are preparing to inflict another banquet on those North Plainfield High School champions, Thursday night. And this in spite of the fact that the girls may land another championship this afternoon.

If basketball was the Scotch Plains Parish House director's only meal ticket the self same person would never be troubled with the gout.

It is not necessary for those All-Star players to prove that they could beat one local championship contender that has kept well under cover of late. They admit it.

FIRST DRILL FOR MARTIN.

The Boston Braves' squad of thirty-five men, including Jack Martin, was split up for the first time at Macon, Ga., yesterday afternoon, and a six inning game was played between clubs led by Fred Michell and Hank Gowdy, catchers. Martin played on the Gowdy team and the Michell outfit's infield was composed of Johnny Evers, Walter Maranville, Bill Sweeney and Charlie Deal. Two sessions are in order today.

ONE ON SPEAKER.

Ty Cobb yesterday signed a two-year contract with the Detroit Club, of the American League, calling for a salary that is said to surpass that of Tris Speaker's, which aroused the sporting world yesterday. It is said that Cobb's contract calls for the biggest salary in baseball.

FINAL LEAGUE GAME ON Y. M. C. A. COURT

Will Be Played Tomorrow Afternoon Between Plainfield and Leal Schools.

What in all probability will be the final Interscholastic League match of the season will be staged on the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. court, tomorrow afternoon, when the teams of Plainfield High School and Leal School meet in their scheduled league clash. The private school youths captured the initial contest by a small margin and the Plainfielders are hot on the trail of their rivals on this occasion.

The contest tomorrow will also be the last one of the season for the private school youths who will turn their attention to baseball. The game tomorrow will be called at 4 o'clock.

The teams will line up as follows:

PLAINFIELD.	LEAL S.
Hetfield, forward	Stewart
D. McNamee, forward	Dickerson
Peacock, centre	VanDeventer
Rosenson, guard	Schneider
Snyder, guard	Harrington

WHERE ARE THE CUBS, CHAMPIONS OF 1906?

"Where are the shows of yesteryear?" Where are the Cubs of yesterday? Thus have the champions of 1906 departed like the morning dew:

Ruelbach—Now with Brooklyn.

Brown—Now managing the St. Louis Federals.

Pfiester Retired.

Lundgren—Retired.

Kling—Retired.

Moran—Coaching the Philadelphia Nationals.

Chance—Managing the New York Highlanders.

Evers—Boston.

Steinfeldt—Retired.

Tinker—Managing Chicago Federals.

Sheckard—Probably manager of some minor league team.

Slagle—Retired.

Hofman—Pittsburgh Federals.

Schulte—The last of the Mohi-Cubs.

FRANK BRUGGY NOT KILLED.

Considerable anxiety was aroused among local friends of Frank Bruggy yesterday, when a report was circulated to the effect that the big athlete had been killed in a train wreck on the New York Central Railroad. Bruggy was reached by telephone at the Lincoln Hotel, in Gloversville, this morning, and he declared that he was at a loss to account for the rumor although he had been informed that a certain New England sporting writer had been chanting his funeral (baseball) dirge for the past two weeks, following the rumor that he would jump to the "Feds."

APGAR IS FOURTH.

Neaf Apgar, the local professional sharpshooter, dropped to fourth position in the trap shooting tournament which was resumed at the Travel and Sportsmen's Show in the Grand Central Palace, yesterday afternoon. Apgar clipped forty-two out of a possible fifty clay pigeons. Hank Stevens was first with forty-five.

WILL PLAY MONTCLAIR.

The Athenian colored basketball five of this city, will play the Montclair colored team in the colored Y. M. C. A., of that place, tomorrow night. A large delegation of local rooters will accompany the Plainfielders on the trip.

WILL TRY TO TAKE TRENTON'S MEASURE

Local Team Will Renew Fight of Last Season on the Capitol City Court.

Taking up the issue where it was culminated last season, the Nonpareil girls' basketball team, of this city, and the Trenton Y. W. C. A. quintet will meet on the Capitol City floor next Friday night. Last season each aggregation succeeded in annexing a single contest and a rubber game, played on the Trentonians' court, gave the home players the championship by a margin of one field goal.

Two more evenly matched combatants would be hard to single out and the rivalry that exists between the two factions makes their meetings an interesting feature in the basketball world. The Plainfielders will go to Trenton, Friday, and in the event of a victory will probably entertain their rivals here on some future occasion. The Trenton team was defeated by the Plainfield Y. W. C. A. five some weeks ago and is due to appear here for a return game a week from next Saturday.

The teams will lineup as follows:

PLAINFIELD.	TRENTON.
Miss H. Hummel, forward	Miss Hayes
Miss I. Hummel, forward	Miss Schafer
Miss Mair, centre	Miss Wells
Miss Debele, guard	Miss Ryan
Miss Smith, guard	Miss Jones

BASEBALL NOTES

Captain Tommy Leach will find plenty to do in keeping the Cubs, including the great Zinn, in line.

Few veterans remain in the lineup of the New York Yankees this season. Manager Chance is out to develop a new team of youngsters.

Pitcher Elmer Koestner, once with the Cleveland Naps, is showing a lot of good stuff in training for a regular job with the Cubs at Tampa.

The Rochester, Toronto and Montreal clubs, of the International League, have been seriously crippled by the desertion of some of their stars to the Federals.

The temperance cause is batting 50 per cent in the Central Association. Four of the circuit towns are "dry," while the other four are as "damp" as Lake Michigan.

Scout Joe Page, of the Chicago White Sox, has applied for a New England League franchise for St. John, N. B. Page hopes to place a St. John team in the "Little Old" circuit in 1915.

Gerald Hayes, who has umpired in the American Association and International League for several years, will "call 'em as he sees 'em" in the Pacific Coast League this season.

If the promoters of the proposed Illinois State League are successful, the new organization will probably take over the circuit of the Illinois-Missouri League.

Just because he named King Edward as among those present at the White Sox-Giants game in London, a Boston scribe was panned by several of his readers. "Heaven knows," writes one, "that it's a lie."

It is said that Christy Mathewson of the Giants will draw a fatter salary than any other man in baseball under a player's contract. The attempts of the Feds to grab Matty caused the Giants to dig deep in order to keep the star twirler.

Queries, Comment and Answers

Sporting Editor:

Query—How much did the United States Government pay the French government for the Panama canal?—H. A. M.

Answer—$50,000,000 was paid to the New French canal company and to the Republic of Panama for property and franchises. The total cost of the canal to the United States will reach approximately $375,000,000.

Sporting Editor:

Query—Could the United States army help the Polish Calcons to fight Russia to gain the Polish independence?—D. G.

Answer—If Poland declared war against Russia individual members of the Polish race could go home to enlist in the Polish army, as some Italians and Geeks did when their home countries were engaged in war.

Sporting Editor:

Query—Please let me know if a driver can turn a few feet into an open field if there is a big snow drift in the road and how many feet wide is a private road? The conditions referred to are taken from the vicinity of South Plainfield?—N. N. M.

Answer—It has always been the practise to open fields where a road is drifted shut by snow and it is a thin-skinned land owner who would make an objection in such an emergency. There is no law relative to a private road's width, that just depends upon how much land the owner wants to devote to his own purpose in that respect.

Sporting Editor:

Query—Do you have to pay taxes on savings accounts?—C. B. N.

Answer—Persons having a total income from all sources of less than $3,000 a year are exempt from income tax. If a person's savings accounts bring his income up to more than $3,000 a year he will have to pay the income tax just the same as if his salary or any other income brought it up to the prescribed amount.

Sporting Editor:

Query—Was Napoleon's last wife a German or an Australian?—J. D.

Answer—Why this query? She is dead now. The second wife of Napoleon was Nonaparte, the Archduchess Maria Louisa, of Austria.

WITH THE BOXERS

Tom Gavigan, who has been in Paris with Joe Jeannette and other American boxers, has returned to Cleveland.

Young Hugo Kelly is now fighting under the name of Frank DeRice. He says this is his real name.

Eddie Murphy claims he got the worst of it in his recent bout with Phil Brock at Cleveland, because of Brock's foul fighting.

Al Norton, Billy McCarney's latest "white hope," looks like a comer. Norton has displayed considerable class in his recent bouts.

Blink McCloskey is not doing very well in London. His latest defeat was at the hands of Bob Scanlan, the American colored boxer.

Bob Moha, the Milwaukee boxer, will most likely accept an offer to go to Australia, declaring that he is not able to get any bouts in this country.

The sports of Medford, Ore., are willing to back Bud Anderson against Red Watson for $5,000. Watson was given a decision over Bud in a recent bout in San Francisco.

COLLEGE GYM EXHIBIT.

Plans have been completed for the reception of the Springfield Training School's gymnastic team, which will appear in the local Y. M. C. A. gymnasium next Saturday night, giving an exhibition of drills dances and gymnastic skill.

FOUR MORE GAMES.

Manager John Cottrell, of the Plainfield High School basketball team, has three more games on his schedule to be played off before the 1914 curtain is drawn. Tomorrow P. H. S. plays Leals; Saturday, Glen Ridge will be opposed on the local court, and Rahway will furnish the excitement on the local court next Wednesday. A week from next Saturday, New Brunswick High School players will invade the local's camp.

GETTING A LATE START.

During the past fortnight the Plainfield High School girls' basketball team has played more games than at any other period during the season and an active schedule now appears to be in progress. The manager of the team has arranged a game to be played with the Springfield High School team here next Friday afternoon.

RUTGERS' BASEBALL SCHEDULE.

The first practice of the Rutgers baseball team was held in the gymnasium, Saturday afternoon, with about fifty candidates present. Coach Walter S. Brodie, formerly of the New York Giants, expressed himself as well pleased with the outlook. The schedule was announced.

DOG SHOW ANNOUNCED.

Premium lists for the sixth club match of the Woodmere Kennel Club which is to be held at the Hotel Gregorian in Manhattan on March 17, have just been issued. William Burtenshaw and James Mortimer will do the judging.

SOME SUGGESTION FOR TRAP SHOOTERS.

No. 1—Do not place a cartridge in your gun except when standing at the firing line in your proper place in the squad and with the muzzle of the gun pointed in the direction of the trap house.

No. 2—Place only one cartridge in your gun when shooting single targets and but two cartridges when shooting double cartridges.

No. 3—When changing from position No. 5 to position No. 1 at the firing line be sure to have your gun open and unloaded.

No. 4—When pointing a gun in the clubhouse or on the shooting grounds always open the gun and inspect same before pointing.

No. 5—Do not question the referee's decision. The person shooting is the least competent to judge the result of a shot, as the recoil of the gun for an instant impairs the vision.

No. 6—Avoid being late getting to your place on the firing line.

No. 7—Remain at your position at the firing line, with gun empty, until the last man has finished shooting.

No. 8—Do not converse with your neighbor while at the firing line nor use any expression that might disconcert others in the squad. Loud talking or other noises should not be indulged in by other contestants or spectators while a squad is shooting so that they can hear same.

No. 9—Do not refuse a fair target. In competition a refused target is scored or counted "lost." The referee will decide what is a fair or unfair target.

No. 10—Do not shoot at an imperfect target in competition. Only whole targets are to be shot at. An imperfect target is a "No bird."

No. 11—Always carry from two to four extra shells with you to the firing line so that you do not delay the shooting in case you have to shoot at other targets.

DUNDEE TO BOX KILBANE.

Philadelphia, Pa., March 10.—Johnny Dundee, the New York lightweight, is to have another chance to pit his prowess against that of Johnny Kilbane, the featherweight champion. The Olympia club, of this city, will bring the two together tomorrow night for a six-round bout. The match is the most promising that has been staged in the Quaker City this winter and the club expects a record-breaking crowd at the ringside.

ELKS' CLUB PINNING.

The teams captained by Edward Laing and Johnny Campbell will meet in a regular scheduled series of Elks' Club matches on the Watchung avenue alleys tonight

NEXT CLUB MATCH.

The Brandywine and Yorktown pinners, of the Columbus Club bowling league will clash on the West Front street alleys Thursday night.

SPECULATION AS TO APPOINTMENTS

Selection of District Superintendents Causing Anxiety Among Methodists.

On the eve of the annual session of the Newark Conference, which will be held in Newark beginning Wednesday, March 18, there is more than usual interest regarding the appointment of two district superintendents, one to succeed Rev. Dr. D. B. F. Randolph, of the Elizabeth district, and the other to succeed Rev. Dr. Jesse Lyman Hurlbut, formerly of this city, who recently resigned in the Newark district.

There is a strong impression throughout the conference that Rev. George G. Vogel, the present pastor of Centenary church, Newark, will succeed Dr. Hurlbut, he being considered the strongest candidate at present. There are two prominent candidates for the office in the Elizabeth district, Rev. Ralph B. Urmy, of Morristown, and Rev. Warren B. Neff, of Hoboken. However, there are one or two others considered in the nature of "dark horses," either of whom may be picked for the place. That the resignation of Dr. Hurlbut has complicated affairs somewhat is admitted, for coming before the conference it makes two important vacancies.

The Bishop has put himself on record as being unwilling to appoint any man as district superintendent who is above the age of fifty years. He has taken this stand for the reason that he wants to name younger men with more progressive ideas. In consequence it makes those eligible for the appointment a little uneasy.

There is a growing feeling that Willis S. MacRorie, the former pastor of the Mt. Horeb, Springdale and Martinsville churches, who was deposed for conduct unbecoming a minister, will not appear at the conference for a second trial. There is a rumor that he is said to have remarked that he is through and will not seek vindication. Rev. William Ater has been serving the three churches this year, but he is not likely to be appointed. MacRorie is still residing at Mt. Horeb.

UNION BUILDING AND LOAN ASS'N PROSPEROUS

The annual report of the Union Building and Loan Association, of Plainfield, has just been made public. The organization was incorporated in 1898 and has been very successful. Regular shareholders' meetings are held on the second Monday evening of each month at 146 Park avenue. Shares are 50 cents a month, can be taken out at any time, and are of the par value of $100. A new series was opened in January, April, July and October.

The financial statement shows total receipts of $148,444.09. The association has total assets of $138,394.91. Its scheduled liabilities include $99,685.50 due shareholders, due profits of $23,233.91 and borrowed money to the amount of $15,400. The officers of the association are E. M. Laing, president; A. D. Edgar, vice-president; J. V. E. Vanderhoef, secretary; M. C. VanArsdale, treasurer. The members of the finance committee are C. H. Dunham, S. J. Robinson and L. VanSyckle. Directors are J. P. Emmons, E. M. Laing, M. C. VanArsdale, J. C. Manning, T. J. Parent, L. VanSyckel, C. H. Dunham, Nelson Runyon, A. D. Edgar, J. V. E. Vanderhoef, S. J. Robinson and Charles M. Dolliver.

SENATOR PIERCE'S BILL PASSES UPPER HOUSE

Trenton, March 10—The indeterminate franchise bill, which Senator Pierce, of Union county introduced in the Senate was passed by the upper house last evening by a vote of 12 to 5. It is an exact copy of the bill introduced last year and which passed the Senate only to be smothered in the House of Assembly. Senator Pierce urged the bill, briefly asserting that where a municipality takes over the franchise of a utilities company it must pay the original investment of the company in full and safeguard it against possible loss. Senator Hennessy also urged the passage of the bill.

PRESIDENT JEFFERY TO AID IN FORMING BODY

Prominent citizens of South Plainfield are at present interested in a movement tending toward the organization of a Board of Trade at that place on Thursday night of this week.

William Jeffery, president of the local civic association, has been invited to attend the gathering at which time he will assist in perfecting the details of the organization.

SWEDISH CHURCH MEETING.

A meeting of the trustees of the Swedish Lutheran church will be held at 727 East Seventh street, Wednesday night.

ACCIDENT CAUSES A PANIC IN SUBWAY TRAIN

New York, March 10—A panic among several hundred passengers aboard a ten-car north bound Brooklyn-West Farms train occurred during the rush hour today, when the train short-circuited and "went dead" in the tube under the East river, connecting Manhattan with Brooklyn.

Men and women rushed to the door following the flash of flame that resulted from the short circuit and besought the guards to open the doors and let them walk the tracks back to the Borough Hall station. The entire north bound traffic was put out of commission for fully thirty minutes and thousands reached their places of business three-quarters of an hour late.

MRS. PERCY H. STEWART TO ENTERTAIN THE JUNIORS

The junior department of the Y. W. C. A. will be entertained on Saturday afternoon, at the association rooms by Mrs. Percy H. Stewart. The vesper service, which will be held at 4 o'clock on Sunday afternoon, will be in charge of Miss Sarah E. Cadoo, the assistant secretary of the organization. On Wednesday morning, at 10:30 o'clock there will be a meeting of the supper committee.

Discussion will be had as to the advisability of serving noon-day lunches. At present suppers are served on Saturday and Monday evenings only. There will be a meeting of the social committee at 11:30 o'clock on Monday morning and next Monday evening, March 16, at 8 o'clock, the EaEster millinery class will meet and organize for work. Those young women who desire to join this class are expected to register some time during the present week.

THANKS ALL THOSE WHO ASSISTED IN CAMPAIGN

In a signed statement issued today, Mrs. Frederick Goodhue Mead, president of the Young Women's Christian Association, extends the thanks of the board of managers to all those Plainfield people who shared in making the recent financial campaign such a pronounced success. The statement reads:

"The board of managers of the Young Women's Christian Association desires to thank most heartily all of those who shared in making the success of the recent finance campaign so great. While it appreciates the efforts of the one hundred women solicitors, it recognizes the fact that no machinery or system of collection, however efficient, could have accomplished any degree of success had the people of Plainfield not given so generously and so cheerfully.

"The prompt payment of many pledges has made it possible already to cancel the note of $3,250 held by the City National Bank. The budget fund of this year is assured, and as soon as all of the pledges are paid, the surplus will be applied on the mortgage held on the adjoining lot. To all of those who have made this splendid condition possible, the board of directors, on behalf of the whole association, extends its most sincere gratitude."

RETIRES ADMIRAL VREELAND.

Washington, D. C., March 10—Rear Admiral Charles E. Vreeland, a conspicuous figure in the navy, was placed on the retired list today on account of age. During the past year he has been a member of the general board. Admiral Vreeland is a native of New Jersey and began his career in the navy as an apprentice. Later he attended the Annapolis Academy and was graduated with the class of 1870. In the early part of his career he served on the Congress and Ticonderega, and Hartford of the old navy. From 1893 to 1896 he was the American naval attache in Vienna and Rome. During the war with Spain he served on the gunboat Helent and the dispatch boat Dolphin. In the memorable fleet cruise around the world in 1908 Captain Vreland commanded the battleship Kansas.

MICHAEL COONEY INJURED.

Michael Cooney, a macrinist, residing at 664 West Fourth street, had an arm badly mangled and torn while at work in the Rushmore Dynamo Works, yesterday afternoon. The member became caught in a milling machine and was lacerated from the wrist to the elbow before fellow-employes shut off the power. Coone was taken to the office of Dr. A. H. Pittis and afterward sent home.

LARGE GUN EXPLODES.

New York, March 10—A twelve-inch gun exploded in the proving grounds at Sandy Hook, this morning, without warning, imperilling the lives of eighteen men working nearby at the time. A piece of lead weighing 2,000 pounds was hurled through a cement wall and a piece of the gun was sent one-half mile out to sea. No serious injuries were reported.

MARCH MEETING OFF.

Because of the serious illness of one of the members and the present bad weather conditions there will be no meeting of the Washington School Parent-Teachers' Association this month.

SELECTING CAST FOR THE ANNUAL SENIOR PRODUCTION

Rehearsals preliminary to the presentation of the annual play given under the auspices of the Plainfield High School senior class have been started and a majority of the cast that will take part in the show has been chosen. By a vote of the class it has been decided to produce "If I Were King."

Those who have already been placed on the list are Cortland Fleming, "Francais;" William Thomsen, "King Louis XI;" Rufus Tildon, "Thibant;" Bradford Willard, "Robin, the Landlord;" Carter Goodrich, "Tristan;" Edith Garda, "Hugenette." A large number of aspirants for places in the cast have made their appearance and the competition is unusually close this year.

MILITANT SUFFRAGISTS DESTROY MASTERPIECE

London, March 10.—Militant suffragists, in their fight for votes, today opened a vicious campaign against the art masterpieces of England. Shortly after the opening of the National Gallery a party of young women entered and began looking at the collections. They carried catalogues and guide books as though they were tourists. When in front of the Venus of Diega Velasquez, a masterpiece fhich cost $225,000, one of the women drew a hatchet and began slashing at the glass which covered the face of the canvas. Before guards arrived she had badly damaged the picture and was arrested by guards who were nearby at the time.

SKY GAZERS TO SEE ECLIPSE.

Washington, D. C., March 10.—Observers of the celestial spheres are discussing the partial eclipse of the moon which is to take place tomorrow night. The phenomeno will be visible to the inhabitants throughout this section of the globe. The moon will enter the shadow of the earth at 9:33 p. m., Washington standard time, this being the beginning of the eclipse. Durin gthe next hour and twenty-nine minutes the moon's light will be gradually merged in the shadow, until by four minutes past eleven the middle of the eclipse is reached. Then the moon will begin to emerge from the shadow and by a few minutes past midnight the eclipse will be over so far as this section of the country is concerned.

SUFFRAGISTS CONFERENCE.

Birmingham, Ala., March 10—Birmingham yesterday extended a cordial welcome to the national leaders of the women suffrage movement, on the occasion of the opening of the executive board meeting of the National Equal Suffrage Association. In conection with the meeting, which is to continue in session several days, there is to be a conference of the Southern leaders to agree upon plans for a systematic and vigorous campaign in behalf of the woman suffrage movement of the South. The conference program provides also for a public session at which addresses are to be delivered by Miss Jane Addams, Mrs. Mendil McCormick and other leaders of national prominence.

MACHINISTS IN CONFERENCE.

St. Louis, Mo., March 10—The general officers, organizers and business agents of the International Association of Machinists gathered here today from every part of the United States and Canada for the purpose of holding a get-together conference. The meeting is said to be the first of its precise nature in the history of the labor movement in America. The purpose is not to transact any of the business that comes before the regular conventions of the association, but to consider questions of general policy and to agree upon systematic plans to better conditions of the local branches of the organization and their individual membership.

D. A. R. MEETING.

Colorado Springs, Colo., March 10.—Colorado Springs is entertaining for two days the annual convention of the Colorado chapters of the Daughters of the American Revolution. A large attendance and an attractive program combine to give promise of one of the most successful metings in the history of the State organization. The convention held its opening session this afternoon.

SOUTH BEND RIOT CASES.

South Bend, Ind., March 10—Sixteen defendants in the St. Cashimier's church riot cases were arraigned in court, today, for trial. The riots resulted from an effort made to install Rev. Stanislaus Gruzt as pastor of the church. The disorders assumed such serious proportions that the bishop of the diocese appealed to Governor Ralston to send the militia to suppress them.

STEAMSHIPS ON SUMMER TIME.

New York, Mar. 10.—The steamer schedule of the Cunard Line was put into effect today with the sailing of the Steamship Lustania. The schedule provides for the sailing of the vessels seven hours earlier than heretofore. This change in the sailing hours will be maintained during the period that the steamships follow the long transatlantic course during the summer months.

WILL TAKE THE STAND IN POISON PEN CASE

Mrs. A. J. Pollard, It Is Believed, Will Deny Authorship of Letters.

Elizabeth, March 10—Fashionably gowned women filled the courtroom again today when the trial of Mrs. Anna J. Pollard, accused of writing scurrilous typewritten letters, was resumed before Judge Connelly. It is expected that the defendant will take the stand in her own behalf and deny that she ever wrote any of the letters which she is charged with having indited and sent to prominent Elizabeth society folk, of both sexes.

The State will rest its case this afternoon. The defense will open tomorrow. But few witnesses will be produced. Samuel S. Schleimer, the defendant's counsel stated today that Mrs. Pollard would positively testify in her own behalf. Mrs. Pollard has a handwriting expert engaged to combat the evidence offered by the typewriting experts of the State. The case will go to the jury probably late tomorrow afternoon.

The specific charge upon which the woman is now being tried is that of having written a scurrilous letter to a next door neighbor, Mrs. Charles F. Jones. She is said to have charged that Mrs. Jones smuggled a fur coat into this country from Canada and that one of her aunts drank whisky and was a morphine user.

Among the numerous witnesses under subpoena is Rev. Edward E. Lyttle, rector of Christ Episcopal church. Mrs. Pollard was a member of this church when she was arrested last July. An interesting contention raised by the prosecution at the trial is that typewriters, inanimate things though they are, possess individual characteristics which make the differentiation of writing on machines of the same make, possible.

All of the people interested in the trial, as well as Mrs. Pollard herself, are prominent in Elizabeth social life. Bench warrants may be issued, it was said today, for some persons who have temporarily left the jurisdiction of the court, because of their dislike to the notoriety which would attend their being subpoenaed as witnesses.

PERSONAL.

Harry Dreier, the well known sporting goods dealer, of West Front street, who has been seriously ill, is now convalescing rapidly.

Miss Emma Windham, of Somerset street, has returned home after spending several weeks visiting Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Dresselt, of Nutley.

Miss Cora Hassell, of High Bridge, has returned home after visiting Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Hopewell, of Watchung avenue.

Style and Individuality Mark the Hahne Millinery--Here Are Plenty at $5.00

It is style and individuality that will place Hahne Millinery upon a distinguished plane.

It is the very particular turn that Fashion's mind has taken that has been the inspiration for more brilliant Hahne Hats than ever a Spring brought forth before.

The small and medium shapes; the scarcity of trimmings; the picturesqueness of lines—all lend themselves to most magnificent interpretation, so that—

Women who visit the beautiful Millinery Salon tomorrow will find not only a most exceptional exhibit of splendidly individual styles, but also a myriad of new ideas.

Hats that are different—new and charming.

These Hats are "magnetized with personality"—with a hilly bit of trimming here, a crown transparent there, a Gibraltar brim—a caverious under-trim of glorious silk in ribbon.

Hats that are Turbans, low in front, high in back or the other way about. Round shapes of snug-fitting styles with soft, flexible (anti-hatpin) crowns.

Sailor Hats of medium size, with crown shot through the rim (bandeau-like).

Quaint, curious shapes, exquisitely armed with arrows, spears or daggers.

Oh! It's an interesting display—as rich in color as it is in style—with white a favorite; Tete de Negre and Tango; Chartreuse, Lime, Lettuce and the new Peppermint Greens; Gendarme Blue and Plain Rose shades most prominent. Visit the new Millinery Salon tomorrow.

Practical Fashion Hints

By Alice Gibson

Just the thing for the school girl is this plain little frock with its drop-shoulder blouse and plain, three-piece skirt. It could be made up appropriately in serge, ratine or silk; for a little later in the season, cotton crepe, eponge or a voile would be dainty and practical. The back extends over the shoulder in yoke effect and there is a draped, Japanese collar to give a new touch. This collar is attached to an inset vest and would be becoming made of a softly colored material, repeating somewhat, the general shade of the frock; the cuffs could also be of this contrasting stuff and the crushed girdle of velvet or ribbon.

It is quite a fad now to have the collar and often the cuffs too, of a sheer organdy; when this is done it is wise to arrange the collar so that it may easily be removed and replaced with a fresh one.

To make this dress for a girl of sixteen, 4¼ yards of 36 inch material is required.

The pattern is cut in 4 sizes; 14, 16, 17 and 18.

This Is a Perfect Pattern.

Be sure to give correct size, measuring over the fullest part of the bust for dimensions.

It may be obtained by filling out the coupon and enclosing 15 cents in stamps or coin, to the Pattern Department of this paper.

Some Cookery Suggestions

TIDBITS WITH HAM.

BREAKFAST MENU.
Grape Fruit.
Ham Timbales.
Potato Cakes.
Rolls.
Coffee.

WHEN there is cold ham in the house or when you have cuts that are not good enough for frying chop them up, combine them with a cereal or vegetable and you will have a nice luncheon or breakfast dish.

Ham Timbales.—Take one cupful of milk and heat it with one cupful of breadcrumbs. Add one cupful of chopped ham, three teaspoonfuls of butter, salt, pepper and the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs. Fill buttered molds half full of the mixture, put in a pan half filled with water and bake until firm. Garnish with hard boiled eggs.

With a Cereal.

Ham and Rice.—Take a cupful of finely chopped ham, a cupful of boiled rice and mix with it. Add a tablespoonful of butter and beat thoroughly, then pile lightly on a platter and keep hot. Beat three eggs, add a pint of milk, cook over boiling water until slightly thick and smooth; pour over the rice and serve at once.

Scalloped Ham.—Take four potatoes and cut them into thin slices. Chop fine one onion, one bunch of parsley and two carrots. Put a layer of potatoes in a buttered baking dish, season with salt, pepper and sprinkle with onion, carrots and parsley and cover with small piece of sliced ham. Repeat this until the dish is filled, covering with more slices of ham. Pour one pint of milk over it and bake in a slow oven for an hour and a half. Then serve garnished with parsley.

Toothsome Croquettes.

Ham and Macaroni. — Take half a pound of macaroni, break it in quarter inch pieces and boil in plenty of salted water for fifteen minutes. Drain and put back into the saucepan with a little grated or chopped cream cheese, salt and cayenne and half a cupful of cream or rich milk. When cold shape into small cylinder shaped croquettes. Dip in egg and breadcrumbs and fry in deep fat until a nice brown. Place these in center of a heated platter and surround with thin slices of crispy broiled ham and lettuce hearts. Tomato or cream cheese sauce may be served with this dish.

All Was Confusion In the Water.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

Family Life Was Lively In The Fish Bowl.

"YOU know," said daddy, "the water snails are very useful in many ways. There was once a little girl named Susan who had in her room a great big glass bowl which held some helleries."

"What are helleries?" of course asked Evelyn.

"They are a fresh water fish that live in climates where the water is sure always to be very warm. She also kept some snails in the water with the helleries.

"The family of helleries consisted of a mother, a daddy and twenty little ones. Can't you imagine how proud Susan was of them? In the bottom of the bowl she had little pebbles and stones, and she had just the right kind of plants and weeds growing around them.

"These fish are about the size of minnows, but of a different shape, being more round than the minnows are. They got along beautifully with the snails, though. Perhaps they realized that the snails were keeping their home clean and healthy.

"But one day a dreadful thing happened. You know the mother hellery doesn't care for her children until they are big. She forgets that they must be given time in which to grow. So that if she can she eats them up."

"What a queer sort of mother," said Jack. "What does the daddy do?"

"Oh, the daddy loves them, even when they are little bits of things! He tries to protect them from the mother.

"One day, as I was about to tell you, Susan went into the room, and she saw wild confusion in the fish bowl. Even the snails seemed to be excited.

"Susan had been warned that the hellery mother would eat up her little ones if she got the chance, and Susan at once saw that that was what she was trying to do. She saw the big hellery daddy trying to chase the mother hellery around so that she could not get hold of any of the little ones. Susan grabbed the mother hellery and put her quickly into a glass of water that was standing near by. The next thing Susan did was to count the little helleries and, to her delight, found that all the twenty were quite alive. But they had evidently been very frightened, for they were all in a corner of the bowl, as near to the daddy hellery as possible, and the big daddy hellery was quite quiet and seemed to be much relieved that the danger was over. The snails, as you can imagine, were only too glad to rest once more. Susan gave them all some delicious fish food to comfort them.

"And she kept the mother hellery in a separate bowl until the little ones were grown up, and then she was welcomed back just as if she had never tried to eat them up."

The New Styles Shown On Living Models

Under the auspices of the Greenhut-Siegel Cooper Co., there was inaugurated yesterday morning on the second floor of its main building, a remarkable exhibiton designed to interest the women of New York, in what will be popular and fashionable for their wear during the spring season.

Posed on living models were reproductions of the most stylish conceptions of the very best French style masters, including Georgette, Cheruit, Beer, Drecoll, Callot Soeurs, Jenny, Brandt, Bernard, Premet, Iana Moulton, Maurice Mayer and Beschoff-David.

The display is a most effective one. It partakes of a veritable fashion prophecy, illustrating as it does to every woman, no matter what her peculiar preferences may be, the garment, suit, cloak or wrap that will exactly meet her views.

Not only are adults considered in this style showing. Juniors and Misses, ranging in age from 16 to 20, may likewise glimpse the fashions of youths as sanctioned by the best artists.

It is worthy of note, too, that the models wearing these dresses and suits, carry with them every dress accessory to go with the garments they display. Novel hats, uniquely colored and shaped hand bags, stylish shoes,—all these illustrate what the perfectly dressed woman will be wearing during the coming season.

The prevailing style tendency, as explained by one of the mannequins, is distinctly "Frenchy." This is particularly so in dresses and wraps.

The Greenhut-Siegel Cooper Co. are also exhibiting concurrently with the copies of French models, a number of very handsome garments designed by native dress and suit makers. All of these are superb specimens of their kind.

BISHOP COURTNEY TO PREACH.

The Rt. Rev. Frederick Courtney, D. D., D. C. L., retired bishop of New York, will be the special Lenten preacher at Holy Cross church, Thursday night at 7:45 o'clock. Bishop Courtney is a conspicuous figure in the Episcopal church and his presence here Thursday night should attract a large number of worshippers. The public is invited.

CHAPTER IV.

PAT had got practically nowhere in the game. The local sports laughed when his name was mentioned. It called to mind funny fights and Rough House Kelly's remark about the roof.

Nobody knew how Pat could fight. They had never seen him. Where was his wind, his stamina, his ability to mix it with rough customers through long grueling contests?

He had demonstrated nothing but the possession of a lucky punch and a depressing proclivity for flukes.

So it was that his fourth match was arranged with Pete Sosso, a Portuguese fighter from Butchertown, known only for the amazing tricks he played in the ring.

Pat did not train for the fight. Instead he made a flying and sorrowful trip to the mountains to bury his father. Old Pat had known well the condition of his heart, and it had stopped suddenly on him.

Young Pat arrived back in San Francisco with so close a margin of time that he changed into his fighting togs directly from his traveling suit, and even then the audience was kept waiting ten minutes.

"Remember, give him a chance," Stubener cautioned him as he climbed through the ropes. "Play with him, but do it seriously. Let him go ten or twelve rounds, then get him."

Pat obeyed instructions, and, though it would have been easy enough to put Sosso out, so tricky was he that to stand up to him and not put him out kept his hands full.

It was a pretty exhibition, and the audience was delighted. Sosso's whirlwind attacks, wild feints, retreats and rushes required all Pat's science to protect himself, and even then he did not escape unscathed.

Stubener praised him in the minute rests, and all would have been well had not Sosso in the fourth round played one of his most spectacular tricks.

Pat, in a mixup, had landed a hook to Sosso's jaw, when to his amazement the latter dropped his hands and reeled backward, eyes rolling, legs bending and giving, in a high state of grogginess.

Pat could not understand. It had not been a knockout blow, and yet there was his man all ready to fall to the mat. Pat dropped his own hands and wonderingly watched his reeling opponent. Sosso staggered away, almost fell, recovered, and staggered obliquely and blindly forward again.

For the first and the last time in his fighting career Pat was caught off his guard. He actually stepped aside to let the reeling man go by. Still reeling, Sosso suddenly loosed his right. Pat received it full on his jaw with an impact that rattled all his teeth.

A great roar of delight went up from the audience. But Pat did not hear. He saw only Sosso before him, grinning and defiant, and not the least bit groggy. Pat was hurt by the blow, but vastly more outraged by the trick.

All the wrath that his father ever had surged up in him. He shook his head as if to get rid of the shock of the blow and steadied himself before his man. It all occurred in the next second. With a feint that drew his opponent, Pat fetched his left to the solar plexus, almost at the same instant whipping his right across to the jaw.

The latter blow landed on Sosso's mouth ere his falling body struck the floor. The club doctors worked half an hour to bring him to. After that they put eleven stitches in his mouth and packed him off in an ambulance.

"I'm sorry," Pat told his manager. "I'm afraid I lost my temper. I'll never do it again in the ring. Dad always cautioned me about it. He said it had made him lose more than one battle. I didn't know I could lose my temper that way. But now that I know I'll keep it in control."

And Stubener believed him. He was coming to the stage where he could believe anything about his young charge.

"You don't need to get angry," he said. "You're so thoroughly the master of your man at any stage."

"At any inch or second of the fight," Pat affirmed.

"And you can put them out any time you want."

"Sure I can. I don't want to boast, but I just seem to possess the ability. My eyes show me the opening that my skill knows how to make, and time and distance are second nature to me. Dad called it a gift, but I thought he was blarneying me. Now that I've been up against these men, I guess he was right. He said I had the mind and muscle correlation."

"At any inch or second of the fight," Stubener repeated musingly.

Pat nodded, and Stubener, absolutely believing him, caught a vision of a golden future that should have fetched old Pat out of his grave.

"Well, don't forget, we've got to give the crowd a run for its money," he said. "We'll fix it up between us how many rounds a fight should go. Now your next bout will be with the Flying Dutchman. Suppose you let it run the full fifteen and put him out in the last round. That will give you a chance to make a showing as well."

"All right, Sam," was the answer.

"It will be a test for you," Stubener warned. "You may fail to put him out in that last round."

"Watch me." Pat paused to put weight to his promise and picked up a volume of Longfellow. "If I don't I'll never read poetry again, and that's going some."

"You bet it is," his manager proclaimed jubilantly, "though what you see in such stuff is beyond me."

Pat sighed, but did not reply. In all his life he had found but one person who cared for poetry, and that had been the red haired schoolteacher who scared him off into the woods.

"You know he's never yet been knocked out by any one."

"Where are you going?" Stubener demanded in surprise, looking at his watch.

"To the Academy of Sciences," he said. "There's a professor who's going to give a lecture there on Browning tonight, and Browning is the sort of writer you need assistance with. Sometimes I think I ought to go to night school."

"But, great Scott, man!" exclaimed the horrified manager. "You're on with the Flying Dutchman tonight!"

"I know it. But I won't enter the ring a moment before half past 9 or quarter to 10. The lecture will be over at 9:15. If you want to make sure come around and pick me up in your machine."

Stubener shrugged his shoulders helplessly.

"You've got no kick coming," Pat assured him. "Dad used to tell me a man's worst time was in the hours just before a fight and that many a fight was lost by a man's breaking down right there, with nothing to do but think and be anxious. Well, you'll never need to worry about me that way. You ought to be glad I can go off to a lecture."

And later that night, in the course of watching fifteen splendid rounds, Stubener chuckled to himself more than once at the idea of what that audience of sports would think, did it know that this magnificent young prizefighter had come to the ring directly from a Browning lecture.

The Flying Dutchman was a young Swede, who possessed an unwonted willingness to fight and who was blessed with phenomenal endurance.

He never rested, was always on the offensive and rushed and fought from gong to gong. In the outfighting his arms whirled about like flails; in the infighting he was forever shouldering or half wrestling and starting blows whenever he could get a hand free.

From start to finish he was a whirlwind, hence his name. His failing was lack of judgment in time and distance. Nevertheless he had won many fights by virtue of landing one in each dozen or so of the unending fusillades of punches he delivered.

Pat, with strong upon him the caution that he must not put his opponent out, was kept busy. Nor, though he escaped vital damage, could he avoid entirely those eternal flying gloves. But it was good training, and in a mild way he enjoyed the contest.

"Could you get him now?" Stubener whispered in his ear during the minute rest at the end of the fifth round.

"Sure," was Pat's answer.

"You know he's never yet been knocked out by any one," Stubener warned a couple of rounds later.

"Then I'm afraid I'll have to break my knuckles," Pat smiled. "I know the punch I've got in me, and when I land it something has got to go. If he won't my knuckles will."

"Do you think you could get him now?" Stubener asked at the end of the thirteenth round.

"Any time, I tell you."

"Well, then, Pat, let him run to the fifteenth."

In the fourteenth round the Flying Dutchman exceeded himself. At the stroke of the gong he rushed clear across the ring to the opposite corner, where Pat was leisurely getting to his feet.

The house cheered, for it knew the Flying Dutchman had cut loose. Pat, catching the fun of it, whimsically decided to meet the terrific onslaught with a wholly passive defense and not to strike a blow. Nor did he strike a blow nor feint a blow during the three minutes of whirlwind that followed.

He gave a rare exhibition of stalling, sometimes hugging his bowed face with his left arm, his abdomen with his right, at other times changing as the point of attack changed, so that both gloves were held on either side his face or both elbows and forearms guarded his mid section, and all the time moving about, clumsily shouldering or half falling forward against his opponent and clogging his efforts, himself never striking nor threatening to strike, the while rocking with the impacts of the storming blows that beat upon his various guards the devil's own tattoo.

Those close at the ringside saw and appreciated, but the rest of the audience, fooled, arose to its feet and roared its applause in the mistaken notion that Pat, helpless, was receiving a terrible beating.

With the end of the round the audience, dumfounded, sank back into its seats as Pat walked steadily to his corner. It was not understandable. He should have been beaten to a pulp, and yet nothing had happened to him.

"Now, are you going to get him?" Stubener queried anxiously.

"Inside ten seconds," was Pat's confident assertion. "Watch me."

There was no trick about it. When the gong struck and Pat bounded to his feet he advertised it unmistakably that for the first time in the fight he was starting after his man. Not one onlooker misunderstood.

The Flying Dutchman read the advertisement, too, and for the first time in his career as they met in the center of the ring visibly hesitated. For the fraction of a second they faced each other in position.

Then the Flying Dutchman leaped forward upon his man, and Pat, with a timed right cross, dropped him cold as he leaped.

It was after this battle that Pat Glendon started on his upward rush to fame. The sports and the sporting writers took him up. For the first time the Flying Dutchman had been knocked out.

His conqueror had proved a wizard of defense. His previous victories had not been flukes. He had a kick in both his hands. Giant that he was, he would go far.

The time was already past, the writers asserted, for him to waste himself on the third raters and chopping blocks. Where were Ben Menzies, Rege Rede, Bill Tarwater and Ernest Lawson?

It was time for them to meet this young cub that had suddenly shown himself a fighter of quality. Where was his manager anyway, that he was not issuing the challenges?

And then fame came in a day, for Stubener divulged the secret that his man was none other than the son of Pat Glendon, old Pat, the old time ring hero. Young Pat Glendon, he was promptly christened, and sports and writers flocked about him to admire him and back him and write him up.

Beginning with Ben Menzies and finishing with Bill Tarwater, he challenged, fought and knocked out the four second raters. To do this he was compelled to travel, the battles taking place in Goldfield, Denver, Texas and New York. To accomplish it required months, for the bigger fights were not easily arranged, and the men themselves demanded more time for training.

The second year saw him running to cover and disposing of the half dozen big fighters that clustered just beneath the top of the heavyweight ladder.

On this top, firmly planted, stood "Big" Jim Hanford, the undefeated world champion. Here on the top rungs progress was slower, though Stubener was indefatigable in issuing challenges and in promoting sporting opinion to force the man to fight.

Will King was disposed of in England, and Glendon pursued Tom Harrison halfway around the world to defeat him on boxing day in Australia.

Happenings Due This Week

Washington, D. C., March 10.—A partial eclipse of the moon is to take place tomorrow night and under favorable conditions will be visible throughout practically the whole of the United States and Canada.

On Thursday the Jews of America, in common with their brethren throughout the world, will begin their annual celebration of the Feast of Purim, one of the most important festal days on the Jewish calendar.

A mortgage to secure bonds having a possible maximum of $600,000,000 is expected to be authorized by the stockholders of the Pennsylvania Railroad when they hold their annual meeting in Philadelphia Tuesday.

Rear Admiral Charles E. Vreeland, member of the General Board and one of the best known officers of the United States Navy, will be placed on the retired list today on account of age.

Prince Henry, of Prussia, brother of the German Emperor, is to sail from Hamburg, today for a tour of Argentina and other countries of South America. Prince Henry's trip has been widely commented upon, owing to the report that the object of his mission is to impress the South American countries with the political and commercial importance of Germany and to offset the increasing influence of the United States in the southern continent.

Among the gatherings of the week that will attract more or less public attention will be the executive board meeting of the National Equal Suffrage Association, in Birmingham, Ala.; the annual convention of the Cattle Raisers' Association of Texas, in Fort Worth, and the annual meeting and tournament of the American Bowling Congress, in Buffalo.

Your Appearance Counts

Have you ever realized how well you are received when your appearance is favorable? Men, send your Suit and have it cleaned and pressed. Ladies, your tea gowns, woolen dresses, opera cloaks, plain or fancy waists, and indeed anything worth cleaning.

I guarantee my work and assure you that my method will tend to renew the fabric, brighten the colors and raise the nap, thereby restoring the garment to the freshness of new clothing.

EDISON'S TALKING PICTURES AT Y. M. C. A.

The first public demonstration here of the Edison Kinetophone will be given at the Y. M. C. A. Hall, Friday afternoon at 2 and 3:45 o'clock, and in the evening at 7 and 8:45 o'clock. The demonstration has been arranged for by Secretary Herbert E. Parker, after attending a most convincing exhibit of the newest and most wonderful invention at the Edison offices in New York.

The trained operators from the Edison laboratories who projected the pictures on that occasion will come to Plainfield for the entertainments on Friday. With such projection the illusion in the case of every subject shown on the program is perfect. A splendid program of fourteen numbers has been selected for the entertainment. It will include at least one subject which has never been used before in a public entertainment. This is a speech by Andrew Carnegie on the "Gospel of Wealth." The full program will be as follows:

Lecture; Edison Kinetophone, Edison's minstrels, part one; Jack's Joke, the Musical Blacksmiths, John J. McGraw, part one and two; Edison minstrels, olio, part two; Julius Caesar, Mayor Gaynor and Commissioner William Edwards, Jerry and Mandy, The Merchant of Venice, Andrew Carnegie, The Deaf Mute and Dixie Days.

Peter Scully, of High Bridge, has recovered from the grip.

Mrs. Rutherford H. Seals purchased at a recent public sale the Wyckoff property in East High Bridge for $1,300.

The monthly meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of High Bridge will be held March 19 at the home of Mrs. Edmund Eastwood. Mrs. Charles H. Bateman, of Somerville, secretary of the Women's Executive Board of Foreign Missions, will read a paper on missionary work.

Peter H. Hoppough, of Naughright, was a recent guest of his son, Vernon C. Hoppough, of Califon.

Lewis P. Salter, of Fairmount, has been appointed administrator of the estate of George Van Pelt.

North Branch.

Mrs. Peter Vroom and son, Norman Vroom, of Pluckemin, have gone to Pleasantville, N. Y., where they are spending a week with Mrs. George Geise.

The Ladies' Foreign Missionary Society of the Presbyterian church of Pluckemin has elected these officers: President, Mrs. Arnold Owens; vice president, Mrs. Harry McMurtry; secretary, Mrs. Peter E. Burd; treasurer, Mrs. Charles E. Hoyt; secretary of literature, Mrs. Clarence Bergen.

Mr. and Mrs. James A. Ten Eyck, of Pluckemin, are visiting Mrs. Ten Eyck's brother, Jacob Van Arsdale, of Centreville.

Mrs. J. N. Tolman, of Irvington, was a week-end guest of her son, Walter Tolman, of Neshanic Station.

Mrs. Clarence Van Fleet, of South Branch, is visiting her niece, Mrs. Stryker, of Bound Brook.

Miss Arietta Quick is the guest of her cousin, Miss Louisa Quick, of South Branch.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Westervelt, of Skillman Station, are visiting Mrs. Westervelt's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Snook, of Neshanic.

Edgar B. Stryker returned to Neshanic, Sunday, after a visit to relatives in Newburg, N. Y.

Miss Evelyn Van Derbeek returned to North Branch, Sunday, after a visit to the Misses Ten Eyck, of South Branch.

Mrs. Katherine Lefort, of Neshanic, has gone to New York to visit her daughter, Mrs. Frederick Glink.

Miss Helen Smith returned to Neshanic, yesterday, after a visit to relatives in Somerville.

CHURCH DEDICATED.

Bernardsville, March 10—At the dedication exercises of the new Bernardsville Methodist church, here Sunday, it was announced that Mrs. John F. Dryden, widow of the late United States Senator Dryden, who was president of the Prudential, has given in memory of her husband $3,000 to the church in addition to the $2,000 she contributed to the building fund. This money will go toward retiring the church debt. The program given was carried out, the dedication being by Bishop Luther B. Wilson, who laid the corner stone July 17. Former pastors of the church were in attendance. The afternoon meeting was in charge of Rev. Dr. Jesse L. Hurlbut, and the sermon at night was preached by Rev. Dr. George C. Vogel, pastor of the Centenary Methodist Episcopal church, Newark. Rev. Thomas T. Crawford is pastor of the new church.

PLAN TO WIDEN MADISON AVENUE

Public Hearing to Be Given by City Council on Monday Night, March 16.

The councilmanic street committee is planning to widen Madison avenue, between Front street and the railroad bridge, in accordance with the ordinance introduced some time ago and the report of commissioners who assessed benefits and damages for the improvement. Another step will be taken in this matter on Monday night, when the Common Council will give a public hearing on the proposed ordinance.

It is expected that as before there will be opposition on the part of the Dreier estate, but the street committee as well as other members of the Council appear to feel that the improvement is one that should be made for the welfare of the general public, and it is understood that it is the intention of the Council to go ahead with the widening in the early spring.

When the matter was first introduced there was some talk of widening that thoroughfare and then allow the trolley company to run its tracks through from Front street to connect with the Fourth street line, but whether this plan will be carried out is problematical at present.

CANDIDATES FOR ELECTION TO P. H. S. ORACLE BOARD

The annual election of members of the Oracle board, the official literary organ of the Plainfield High School, will be held Thursday morning and the following have been nominated for the various offices: Business manager, Morris Mann, Herbert Peacock and Daniel F. McNamee; reporters, juniors (four to be elected), Muriel Cockburn, Gladys Dickerson, Helen MacKillop, Dorothy Stelle, Roger Cockburn, Harold Davis, Randolph Stelle and Adelbert Whitford; sophomores (three to be elected), Augusta Allen, Marion Blanchard, Elizabeth Moyer, Florence Moyer, Florence Neilson, Mary Smith, Horace Bunker, Godfried Clay and Joseph Gallagher; freshman (one to be elected), Marion Archer, Hazel Coddington, Muriel Courser, Caryl Dunavan, Lois Loizeaux, Virginia Sminck, Burnham Carter, Everett Case and Lewis Zeek.

The entire student body is eligible to ballot for the varius candidates. The retiring board has been in charge of the publication of the issue since March last and will make way for the new members as soon as the latter can be agreed upon.

EASY TO DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

You Can Bring Back Color and Lustre With Sage Tea and Sulphur.

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture though, at home is mussy and troublesome. For 50 cents you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use tonic called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant. You will also discover dandruff is gone and hair has stopped falling.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur and look years younger.—Adv.

BIG EATERS GET KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts at First Sign of Bladder Irritation or Backache.

The American men and women must guard constantly against kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out, they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney troubles, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage, and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.—Adv.

SAFETY FIRST

In making a new banking connection, safety is the first consideration. The State Trust Company has a capital of One Hundred Thousand Dollars and a surplus of more than Fifty Thousand Dollars which constitutes a safety fund of approximately one to four in relation to deposits. In addition to this strong position, its funds are so invested that a large proportion of its assets can be converted into cash in twenty-four hours.

These facts are commended to the consideration of anyone contemplating a banking connection or a change in arrangements already existing.

CITIZENS FAIL TO ENDORSE TICKET

BOARD IS SUSTAINED

Mayor Robert Clark, Jr., A. C. Pleydell, Dr. J. H. Cooley and Former Mayor N. B. Smalley Make Pertinent Remarks.

Those who attended the meeting of citizens held under the auspices of citizens to discuss North Plainfield school matters in the Somerset street schoolrooms, last night, heard an open discussion on the best methods to overcome what some termed "peculiarities of a peculiar" municipality. This was the keynote of the gathering and each speaker referred in some way to the conditions that exist at the present time in the borough. As was originally proposed, the meeting brought before the people of the borough the reasons for and against the authorization of the spending of certain funds of the school board in the work of remodeling the Somerset street institution in an effort to bring it up to the requirements of the State school authorities.

Representatives of the municipality and of the Board of Education discussed the matter openly and at the conclusion of the remarks it was the consensus of opinion that the members of the school board were competent to decide such a question and that the matter should be left entirely within its province.

An audience of about 100 men and women attended the meeting, for it had been rumored about the borough that there would be a lively discussion. The "dove of peace" hovered above the heads of those interested in North Plainfield's educational possibilities until efforts were made to have the meeting endorse a certain ticket for the four vacancies in the North Plainfield Board of Education to occur next week, and for which an election will be held Tuesday night. The presentation of the four names brought immediate opposition from A. C. Pleydell and Former Mayor Newton B. Smalley. In a short speech Mr. Pleydell outlined the fact that the meeting had been called for the discussion of educational problems and not for endorsement purposes and concluded his talk by referring to the presentation of the ticket as a pretty "high-handed piece of politics." After a great deal of discussion on the subject during which a number of motions were made, the "ticket" was withdrawn and as a result no candidates were endorsed.

The names for endorsement for election to the board were Fred O. Ball, Judd Stewart, George M. Hoagland and Charles Clark. They were presented by James R. Joy. Other nominations were called for, but after some discussion, Mr. Joy withdrew the names offered by himself. It was stated, however, that these candidates will have the support of many of those present at last night's meeting, including the women. Charles W. McCutchen commended the idea of a citizen's meeting to discuss neighborhood affairs, adding that it reminded him of a New England town meeting.

Ten-minute speeches were made by Dr. Justus H. Cooley, president of the Board of Education; Mayor Robert Clark, Jr., and former Mayor Newton B. Smalley. Dr. Cooley stated that the improvement of the safety devices in the Somerset street school had received lengthy consideration from the board and was only one of many improvements that have been brought to light recently. He said that the pupils of the Somerset school studied with a light that entered the room on their right, which is against the school law. He said that proper heating facilities were now in operation for the first year since he had been a member of the board, and he has served for sixteen years. "Plans not taking into consideration all of the minor details, but which provide for adequate fire protection with stairways on the outside of the building," said Dr. Cooley, "have been drawn up and it is estimated that the cost will amount to near $25,000, while it would take approximately $80,000 to erect a new structure."

Mayor Clark was of the opinion that the board was thoroughly competent to cope with the present situation. The speaker admitted that the fire protection did not come up to the requirements of the State, but stated that there were other matters that were even more urgent for consideration at the present time. Mayor Clark said "the financial condition of the borough involves much indebtedness and without the suggested school improvement there will be a bondage indebtedness during the coming year of $200,000."

YOUNG FOLKS GIVE PLEASING COTILLION

Large Audience Enjoys Exhibition of Latest Dances at Park Club.

An exhibition of the poetry of motion through dancing was given by the young women members of the dancing class of Miss Eunice C. Watson, at the dance, reception and cotillion, held at the Park Club, yesterday afternoon. Friends and families of the youthful dancers were present in large numbers and passed a thoroughly enjoyable afternoon watching the dancing and pirouetting of the fair dancers as they went through the various measures of hesitation, maxixe, tango and other steps that have of late been popularized showing faultless execution of the intricacies of step.

An aesthetic flower dance, together with calisthenics to music, was given by the entire class. Miss Ruth Smail, "the village belle," gave a solo dance The "valse brilliante" was danced charmingly by Miss Cornelia Lyle, and the execution of a Japanese dance, entitled "Saibara," by Miss Margaret Rice, a pretty little brunette, was out of the ordinary, her dancing being graceful and very pleasing to the large audience which witnessed it.

Miss Rice made a delightful little geshia, and in her Japanese costume, with its kimono sleeves and the fan, and her dark, colorful beauty, charmed her beholders. Especial praise was accorded Miss Marie Sill and Nelson Kenworthy for their dancing of the difficult Parisian maxixe and the audience was greatly pleased also with the Argentine tango, executed by Miss Louise Sill and Norman McGee. Both of the couples danced beautifully and with the precision and grace of professionals.

Handsome favors were given to those who took part in the cotillion which followed the exhibition of fancy dancing and class exercises. Miss Jubilee Rowley was the accompanist on the piano.

JEREMIAH GRIMES KILLED AT SOMERVILLE

Jeremiah Grimes, of Somerville, aged about 50 years, was almost instantly killed on the New Jersey Central Railroad, last night. He was walking on the tracks just east of the Bridge street crossing, Somerville, when he was struck by the 6.42 westbound Flemington train, in charge of Samuel Johnson. Grimes must have become confused at which track the train was to take, this train at this point being shifted over to the south side to the Flemington branch, and thus met his death.

The injured man was carried to the baggage room of the Somerville station, where he died almost immediately. He was badly cut about the head and body. Mr. Grimes was unmarried, a laborer, and owned several houses in Somerville. He leaves a brother, John Grimes, of Somerville, and was an uncle of "Red" Grimes, the well known ball player.

DAILY WEATHER SERVICE STILL OUT OF COMMISSION

John Neagle, who furnishes the government weather report to the people of this vicinity, has been obliged, temporarily, to discontinue the service owing to his failure to secure telegraphic facilities for the transmission of his messages. Service will be restored at the earliest possible time. Mr. Neagle sends the weather reports to towns along the line of the New Jersey Central, between Elizabeth and Bloomsbury, to residents from Bound Brook to Picton on the line of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, and to persons living along the line of the Reading Railroad, from Bound Brook to Trenton Junction.

ANNOUNCE ENGAGEMENT.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bechstein, of New York, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Louise Bechstein, to Albert V. Utzinger, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Valentine Utzinger, of Grandview avenue, the borough. Mr. Utzinger is a registered pharmacist, having been in the employ of L. W. Randolph, of West Front street, for several years. No date has been set for the wedding.

SEVERAL CHANGES IN HEALTH RULES

Local Authorities Decide Not to Quarantine for Measles.

REQUIRE TWO CULTURES

In Cases of Diphtheria—Arrangements Being Made With State Health Board for Tuberculosis Exhibit in May.

The Board of Health at its monthly meeting, last night, made some changes in the rules controlling communicable diseases, in addition to deciding in the future to placard, but not quarantine for measles. The principal change is in regard to diphtheria. The board will require two consecutive negative cultures from the patient and one negative culture from the attendant or other suspects in the family before quarantine is removed.

In the case of scarlet fever, quarantine will not be removed until desquamation has ceased and all clinical evidence of the disease has disappeared. All school children living in a family where there is a case of either of the above diseases will be kept from school for ten days after quarantine has been removed.

Arrangements are being made with the State Board of Health to hold a tuberculosis exhibit in Plainfield in May. In connection with this exhibit there will be conducted under the auspices of the local board, an exhibit of all the health work being done in Plainfield. The board decided to publish from time to time health bulletins for the purpose of informing the public of local conditions and suggesting means for the prevention of disease and conservation of health. N. J. Randolph Chandler was re-appointed health officer for the coming year, and Miss Harriet O. Mattison was re-appointed as assistant health officer.

During the month a report was received from the Union County Mosquito Extermination Commission, to the effect that the cellars in twelve houses had been disinfected on account of there having been cases of malaria in houses. The commission has been working in conjunction with the Board of Health and it is hoped that there will be fewer mosquitoes in Plainfield this coming year.

Fifty-four cases of communicable disease were reported to the office during the month as follows: Chicken-pox, 4; measles, 33; scarlet fever, 9; diphtheria, 2; German measles, 6; The cases of scarlet fever are located in all parts of the city and there is no connection between any of them, except in two instances where two cases were reported in each family.

Six houses are under quarantine for scarlet fever and two for diphtheria. Measles are prevalent in all parts of the State, and in some places they are having epidemics. The number here is gradually decreasing. In all twenty-six rooms in sixteen buildings were disinfected during the month. The hospital, one schoolroom and one carriage were also disinfected. Twenty-two cultures for contagious diseases were examined in the laborotory. There were forty-nine birth returns, one still birth, eleven marriages and twenty-three deaths.

These inspections were made during the month: Milk supply, 29; food, 30; nuisances, 45; general, 77; communicable disease, 49; disinfections, 41; plumbing, 76; a total of 347. The minimum period of exclusion from school of those suffering from the contagious diseases not quarantined by the board has been determined as follows: Measles, 14 days; German measles, 10 days; whooping cough, 8 weeks; mumps, 14 days; chicken-pox, 14 days, or until desquamation has ceased. Anyone who has been excluded from school on account of contagious diseases will not be re-admitted without a certificate signed by the school physician.

SURPRISE "500" PARTY.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert H. Enander, of Watchung avenue, were given a surprise party at their home, last night. Progressive "Five Hundred" was the feature of the evening, after which refreshments served. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Albert H. Enander, Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Gano and daughter, Miss Cora Gano, Leslie Crane, Mr. and Mrs. Peter VanFleet and daughter, Miss May VanFleet, Dr. and Mrs. Payne, Mr. and Mrs. Kenedy, Mrs. and Mrs. Thomas Caleen, Miss Gertrude Enander, Miss McDowell, the Misses Ruth and Etta Enander, Ralph Seal and Ellis Enander.

SEEKS A LAWYER WHEN HIT BY AUTO

Israel Lewin Prefers Settlement for Injuries to Treatment at Hospital.

While crossing West Front street at the junction of Madison avenue at 10 o'clock this morning, Israel Lewin, of New York, became confused and stepped in the path of an automobile owned and driven by W. M. Powers, of Field avenue. The pedestrian was knocked to the ground and the machine passed over his body. He fell between the wheels in such a position that his body fitted in the portion of the machine that is raised above the ground and he was unhurt save for a few scratches sustained as the drip pan and other small projections passed over him.

The victim shrieked at the top of his voice and a hundred or more spectators were attracted to the scene of the accident. When the auto was stopped Lewin was lying underneath the car and during the few minutes it took to extricate him the New Yorker stirred up a fracas, this causing a rumor to be circulated that the victim was seriously injured.

When carried to the curb, Lewin appeared to be more frightened than hurt and when it was suggested that he go to the hospital in the car he protested vigorously and asked to be taken to the nearest lawyer's office in company with Mr. Powers, so that a settlement could be made. Lewin recognized the glitter of gold in the distance and as soon as the automobile driver made a satisfactory settlement the victim left for Philadelphia apparently none the worse for the accident. Lewin was en route to the Quakertown on foot and as the result of the impromptu accident he was able to proceed the remainder of the way in a parlor car.

CITIZENS' COMMITTEE NAME MEN FOR BOROUGH BOARD

"The Citizens' Committee of North Plainfield" has requested publication of the following statement, which is self-explanatory, and has some bearing on the meeting held last night in the Somerset School:

"There has been in the past week a 'Citizens' Committee' formed in the borough of North Plainfield, composed of the mothers of North Plainfield school children.

"There are to be four vacancies in the School Board of the borough to be filled at the annual meeting of the Board, Tuesday evening, March 17.

"The ladies of the committee take the position that all good citizens should interest themselves in this election. With this in mind they have put forth their utmost endeavor to secure the names of four capable men who will consent to serve if chosen by the voters at Tuesday's meeting.

"The committee desire to give the people of North Plainfield full opportunity to consider these names before the election. They offer for the consideration of the voters the names of Judd Stewart, 57 Willow avenue; F. O. Ball, 44 Washington avenue; George M. Hoagland, 226 Somerset street; Charles E. Clark, 43 Summit avenue.

"The committee ask the voters, whether or not after due consideration they approve of these candidates, to be present at the annual meeting and do their duty as citizens in this most important matter of school Board elections."

MRS. E. G. READ CHOSEN PRES'T OF MISSION SOCIETY

An enthusiastic meeting of the Foreign Missionary Society of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church was held yesterday afternoon, at which time annual reports were received and the election of officers took place. During the meeting Mrs. Lucie Rising addressed the gathering on her recent trip to Syria.

The officers elected were as follows: President, Mrs. Edward G. Read; first vice-president, Mrs. John Sheridan Zelie; second vice-president, Mrs. I. W. Cochran; third vice-president; Mrs. F. Samuel Carter; secretary, Mrs. W. H. Murray; treasurer, Mrs. William E. Hoyt; secretary of literature, Mrs. Lamar VanSyckle, and superintendent of collections, Mrs. A. V. D. Honeyman.

SWEDISH CHURCH MEETING.

There will be a vestry meeting of the Swedish Lutheran church at 8 o'clock tonight, at 727 East Seventh street, at which it is hoped there will be a full attendance.

SESAME CLUB MEETING.

The Sesame Club will meet tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock at the home of Mrs. J. Hervey Doane, at 435 East Seventh street.

CALL CONVICT IN POISON PEN CASE

Proceedings Will Not Be Ready for the Jury Before First of Next Week.

FURTHER DEVELOPMENT

Defense Will Attempt to Prove That Mysterious Letters Were Written on Mrs. Polard's Typewriter While She Was Absent From Home.

Elizabeth, March 11.—Eleventh hour developments in Elizabeth's notorious "Poison Pen" trial indicate that the case will not go to the jury until the first part of next week instead of this afternoon, as was at first thought. The proceedings took a decided turn in favor of Mrs. Nelson L. Pollard, who is accused of writing scurrilous anonymous letters to Mrs. Charles F. Jones, today, when Miss Minnie Ohler, a domestic once in the employ of the defendant, testified for the State. Although subpoenaed by the prosecution the witness gave testimony that will considerably strengthen the case of the defense.

Miss Ohler testified to having seen Mrs. Jones enter Mrs. Pollard's home through the back door on a number of different occasions when the proprietress was away from home and use the latter's typewriter. As the result of this revelation it is understood that Samuel Schliemer, the counsel for the defense, will attempt to prove that the letters were written on Mrs. Pollard's machine by Mrs. Jones as the result of a plot to discredit his client.

Many were disappointed this morning when Mrs. Pollard did not take the stand and from their comments they evidently hope to hear one of the letters read before night. William J. Kingsley, the typewriting expert, took the stand again this morning, and while he was testifying interest lagged considerably.

William Rayfield, a negro convict now in State prison at Trenton, has been subpoenaed by the defense and it is hinted that his testimony will be a big surprise to the prosecution. The defendant's counsel, in asking for a court order for the prisoner's appearance, said it would be unsafe for Mrs. Pollard to go on with the trial without the convict's testimony.

BLIZZARD COSTLY TO SOMERSET COUNTY

Bills Aggregating $2,000 Presented to Board of Freeholders.

The blizzard of last week cost Somerset county about $2,000, according to reports presented at the meeting of the Board of Freeholders, yesterday. Of this amount $500 was chargeable to the road from Somerville to Pluckemin. The report of the finance committee showed total expenditures to date of $21,073.63. The report of County Collector Allen showed receipts of his office for the month of February to be $1,639.52.

The Board decided to discontinue its appeal in the case of Codington vs. Somerset county and to pay the judgment which was given the plaintiff. Codington entered suit against the county to recover damages for injuries to a horse, caused by what he claimed was a faulty approach to a bridge in North Plainfield township. He got a judgment for $85 in the District Court of the county. On appeal to the Supreme Court the county lost.

The request of the Standard Oil Company for permission to erect road markers as advertisements was referred to the counsel of the Board. The Board decided to take steps for the recovery of interest due on the estate of Mary Mosher, deceased, a former inmate of the State Hospital, Trenton, for maintenance charges.

The Finderne road was the subject of a lengthy discussion, when a member of the Board requested that plans be produced in order that bids might be advertised for its construction. The Board directed that a committee composed of the director, the county superintendent of roads and counsel of the Board, be appointed to secure the plans for presentation at the next meeting.

The Board adjourned to meet on the Greenbrook road bridge in North Plainfield borough Thursday morning, March 19, at 10:30, after which they will visit the Watchung bridge in North Plainfield township.

BOARD PLANS FOR GREATER EFFICIENCY

An Inspection Committee to Be Named Monthly at Muhlenberg Hospital.

An inspection committee appointed by the board of governors of Muhlenberg Hospital, at its monthly meeting, this week, is the latest step taken by that body to secure greater efficiency in the detail work of the institution. It was introduced recently and is said to be working satisfactorily. The committee comprises two members of the board who are not members of the executive committee, and in addition to the inspection duties they sit as members of the executive committee during the month of their appointment.

In this way every member of the board at some period during the year becomes part of the executive committee and acquainted with the details of management that would not be brought to his attention otherwise in the general matters and policy and management directed by the board.

Charles J. Fisk, who resigned as a member of the board at the last meeting, and Benjamin Arrowsmith Hegeman, Jr., whose resignation was accepted some time ago, have been elected honorary members of the board. The by-laws provide that any person who has given special service to the hospital or who otherwise may be deemed worthy may be elected an honorary member. Both of these men, by virtue of their service and gifts to the hospital, are entitled, it is believed, to this distinguished recognition and the governors welcomed the opportunity of conferring this honor. Clifford W. Baker has been elected to the board in the class whose terms expire 1915.

The report of the treasurer shows that the subscriptions to the campaign fund are coming in slowly and that there is still outstanding subscriptions to this fund aggregating over $8,400. It is a matter of considerable disappointment to the board that this amount has not been largely reduced before the present time. The hospital has grown to such an extent in the past few years that it has been found necessary by the management to have a registered pharmacist to look after the medicine room and Louis J. Oliff, of this city, has been placed in charge of that department.

The president of the board has appointed to the executive committee S. Durell Lounsbery to fill the unexpired term of H. W. Marshall whose resignation was accepted at the last meeting of the board.

THE TEMPERATURE.

The temperature report from The State Trust Company today is as follows: 9 a. m., 30 degrees; 11 a. m., 32 degrees; 1 p. m., 34 degrees.

MANY HAVE NOT FILED RETURNS

Plainfield Residents Said to Have Been Slow in Stating Their Incomes.

SUCH MAY BE FINED

Neglect Believed by Officials of the Internal Revenue Department to Be Due to Ignorance of the Law—Time Extended to March 31.

That there are many persons in Plainfield who are liable to a severe penalty because of their failure to file an income tax report, is the opinion of officials of the Internal Revenue Bureau, of Newark, who are said to be conducting an investigation in this city at the present time. It is said that there is good ground for believing that many Plainfield men and women, who are subject to taxation under the measure mentioned, have failed to file the required reports as to the amount of their yearly income.

Reason for the neglect of people of comparative wealth to make the reports required by the government, is largely attributed to ignorance of the provisions of the law or to a misunderstanding of the true situation, rather than to wilful ignoring of the statute.

Plainfielders, and many of them, are said to have made the common mistake, of deducting their specific exemptions of $3,000, if single, or $4,000, if married, from their gross receipts, in order to arrive at a conclusion as to what the amount of their net income is. Such a practice is absolutely wrong. Frequently, when such a course has been followed, it was said today by an Internal Reveune official, the result has been to bring the net income below the $3,000 mark, the lowest amount on which an income tax is collected, when, actually, it should be in excess of $3,000. The result is that these individuals, through such an error, believe that they are not liable to the income tax, and accordingly all such failed to file a return, because their net income was not figured, in their wrongful calculation, as being less than $3,000.

An individual, after calculating his gross receipts, is entitled to deduct taxes, interest on his mortgages, repairs or depreciation on his house or business and similar items, in arriving at the amount of his net income. He is not however, permitted under the law, to deduct his exemption of $3,000 which the law allows him if single or the allowance of $4,000, which is exempted, if he is married. If, without deducting this specific exemption, the net income does not reach or exceed $3,000, he does not have to make a return. Otherwise, he must. He is allowed to claim his exemption of either $3,000 or $4,000, as the case may be, upon the return, and the Internal Revenue officials will allow it, if satisfactory.

Without attempting to cause any unnecessary alarm to those residents of this community who from carelessness, ignorance of the law, or for other reasons, have failed to file their returns concerning their incomes, it may be stated that unless such a return is made to the Internal Revenue authorities before Tuesday, March 31, the delinquents are quite likely to face considerable trouble. Certainly, they will suffer inconvenience and not inconsiderable humiliation. Even by filing their return on or before the last day of the present month the tardy Plainfielders will be required to present due and sufficient cause to account for their long delay. Almost every day, in conversation with people living in this city and vicinity, one can learn of specific cases where the income tax return has not yet been made.

AN EVENING OF PICTURES GIVEN BY GEORGE E. HALL

"An Evening of Pictures," given by George E. Hall, attracted a capacity audience to the Temple Baptist church, last night. Mr. Hall took his audience through the Pacific coast, showing not only the many beautiful scenes in some of the larger cities, including Denver, Omaha, Salt Lake City, Los Angeles, San Francisco, etc., but in contrast some of the mining villages. He also exhibited many beautiful pictures of scenery along the line of travel.

More than one hundred slides were shown, most of which Mr. Hall took personally, making the entertainment of more interest. As they were thrown on the screen in his own unique way Mr. Hall related many incidents in connection with them that made the views more real. It was a profitable evening to all who had the privilege of being present.

The Quality of What We Sell

A villianously abused word is "quality!" It is the seductive cry of the commercial charlatan. You have heard it and responded, with perhaps but a poor redemption of the merchant's advertised promises.

We have always had a religious regard for quality, and have consistently refrained from overstating the quality of anything. Nevertheless we insist upon it to a marked degree in even the most trifling of things. Our insistence is the weighty insistence of a big and powerful organization. Few manufacturers wittingly disregard it.

Assuredly, this must mean something to those of you who buy conservatively, demanding the most that the dollar will yield. You will find quality ingrained in every item, however trifling, that we offer you in the complete assortments in every department of our new store.

Daniel N. Whitlock, of Trenton, is spending a few days with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. Whitlock, of Beechwood Heights.

The Lenten preacher tomorrow night at St. Paul's church will be Rev. Edward W. Hall, of St. John's church, New Brunswick.

Miss Emma Conover, of Dunellen, was a visitor with friends in this place yesterday.

Roger Parkin, of Princeton, has been visiting with Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Beam, of South Bound Brook.

Warren Perry, of Bordentown Military Academy, has been spending a few days with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. David Perry.

Isaac S. Brokaw has secured employment as lineman for the Public Service Railway Company.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry S. Johnson, of South Bound Brook, have been visiting with relatives at Lincoln.

Roy Rinehart has been visiting with his parents at North Branch Depot.

The funeral services of Miss Jennie Ball were held at the home of Mrs. Sadie Mathews at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon, conducted by Rev. C. J. Culp, pastor of the Presbyterian church. Interment was made in the Bound Brook cemetery by Director Edgerton.

DANGEROUS TO DISCIPLINE, POLICE BILL IS DEFEATED

Trenton, March 11.—Declarations that police discipline would be destroyed if House 396, by Mr. Branegan, became a law, caused defeat for the bill yesterday in the Assembly. The bill prevents the reduction or dismissal of a policeman entitled to a pension. Mr. Branegan said that changes of political administration often brought changes in the rank of police, and the bill would prevent it. Mr. Fisk asserted the bill would prevent police boards from punishing policemen who neglected duty or became drunk.

TO HONOR FORMER JUDGE.

Chicago, Ill., March 11—The Independent Order of Bonai B'rith has completed arrangements for a banquet to be given to former Judge Philip Stein, tomorrow night, on the occasion of his seventieth birthday anniversary. Mr. Stein came to this country from Berlin in 1854. After two years he returned to Berlin, where he took up the study of law. After graduation he again came to America, and was admitted to the bar in Milwaukee. In 1886 he came to Chicago and began the practice of law. In 1892 he was elected to the bench of the Superior Court, where he served twelve years.

WESTFIELD DEED DISPUTE CONTINUED TO MARCH 24

Vice-Chancellor Emery, yesterday, continued until March 24 an application for a receiver to take charge of a $3,500 property in Westfield, title to which is in dispute.

The property consists of a double frame dwelling house on a large lot. It was bought in 1896 by John Dimler, now seventy-three years old, who, according to a bill filed in his behalf by William R. Wilson, directed that the deed be made out in the names of himself and his wife, with the idea that in case of death of either the other would take possession without the necessity of a will, there being no children.

Mrs. Dimler died six years ago, and her husband has continued to live in the house until now. When, last November, he undertook to borrow money on a mortgage he learned, to his surprise that his name was not in the deed and that because there were no children his wife's heirs could come in for the property.

Accordingly, Dimler caused a bill to be filed, praying that the deed be reformed by the inclusion of his name.

The property is claimed by Mrs. Caroline Caldwell, of Elizabeth, daughter of a sister of Mrs. Dimler, for whom Mr. Eldridge is acting, and Gottfried Sohn, of Germany, a brother.

NEW PROVIDENCE SCHOOL BOARD SEEKS 1913 TAXES

New Providence, March 11.—The township Board of Education, Monday night passed a resolution directing the district clerk to make a demand on the township collector for all money still due on account of the 1913 taxes. The amount due on the appropriations made in March 1913 is $2,189.47. The amount appropriated then was $3,400. There is still due, aside from the above, $621 special tax and $337.50 interest on bonds, making a total of $3,147.97.

The original district appropriation amounted to $3,400, which was divided into a current expense account $1,600, and deficiency account, $1,800. Of the latter, only $273.03 has been paid, and of the former $937.50 has been received.

One difficulty in the collection of the money is the fact that all of it has not been raised. One thousand dollars of the district appropriation of $1,800 in the deficiency account was clipped off last fall by the Township Committee and was not included in the levy made by the assessors. Members of the school board have questioned the right of the committee to cut down the school appropriations and have written to the attorney general for an opinion.

A letter has been received from Commissioner Betts, stating that the committee had no right to cut any item from the school budget and adding that the board could demand the money.

11 CANDIDATES FOR MAYOR.

St. Paul, Minn., March 11.—The campaign for St. Paul's first primaries since the adoption of the commission plan of municipal government closes this week. On Tuesday next the primaries will be held for the nomination of candidates for mayor, councilmen, city controller, municipal judge and justices of the peace. Those receiving the most votes in the primaries will get their names on the ballot at the final election in May. Eleven candidates are contesting for the mayoralty nomination. Owing to the unusually large number of candidates contesting in the primaries it will be necessary to issue the ballots in two sections.

OFFER TO SELL OVERLOOK IS FORMALLY WITHDRAWN

Summit, March 11.—A formal communication withdrawing the offer to sell the Overlook Hospital was received at a meeting of the Summit Hospital Association from Dr. William H. Lawrence, Jr., head of the institution. The formal withdrawal of the offer was read by Dr. Hamilton Wright Mabie, head of the association, and was a terse notification merely setting forth that the offer of sale was withdrawn and not going into the causes for the action.

Dr. Mabie said that incident of the offer and withdrawal of the hospital from the market had not impaired the cordial relations between the association and Dr. Lawrence, and that the association would continue the work as an auxiliary aid to the hospital.

KINNEY BUILDING SALOON LICENSE UPHELD BY COURT

Trenton, March 11.—The Supreme Court yesterday dismissed the application of the First Presbyterian church, of Newark, to set aside the transfer of a license to Arthur Straub and a subsequent renewal of license at 788-794 Broad street, the Kinney building.

Justice Trenchard held that the building was not a "new place" within meaning of the law, after it was rebuilt. Hence, it was not necessary to determine whether the saloon property was within 200 feet of the church.

TO PRODUCE COKE.

New York, March 11—A busy and prosperous year for the steel industry was forecasted in the reports presented today at the annual meeting of the Sloss-Sheffield Steel and Iron Company, in this city. In the near future the company plans to spend $1,000,000 in building a great battery of coke ovens in connection with its mills at Birmingham.

EMMELINE PANKHURST.

Her Arrest Aroused Ire of the Militants in England.

In retaliation for the arrest of Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst in Glasgow, Miss Mary Richardson, one of the most active of the militant suffragettes, invaded the National gallery in London and mutilated the famous Velasquez "Venus," known as the Rokeby "Venus."

"VENUS" SLASHED BY VENGEFUL MILITANT

Famous Painting Is Badly Damaged In London.

London, March 11.—All England is indignant at the act of vandalism on the part of militant Miss Mary Richardson, who invaded the National gallery and mutilated the famous Velasquez "Venus," known as the Rokeby "Venus."

With a meat chopper with a five inch blade Miss Richardson slashed the canvas six times. Officials of the gallery, which was immediately closed to the public, said they believed the damage could be repaired. The painting was recently purchased by popular subscription.

"I tried to destroy the picture of the most beautiful woman in mythology as a protest against the government destroying Mrs. Pankhurst, the most beautiful character in modern history," the militant said when she was arrested and taken to a police station. She was held for trial.

In Bow street police court, where Mary Richardson was arraigned and held without bail for trial, Hawes Harrison Turner, keeper and secretary of the National gallery since 1898, testified that the suffragette's mutilation had reduced the selling price of the Venus from $200,000 to $75,000.

"Home Secretary McKenna's 'cat and mouse' act has made the British criminal code a comic valentine," said Miss Richardson, admitting ten arrests within the year for militant outrages. "McKenna is afraid of killing me and the other suffragettes by forcible feeding, but I am not afraid to die for the cause."

The Rokeby "Venus," valued at $250,000, was one of the famous paintings of the world. It took its name from Rokeby hall, in Yorkshire, where it hung for many years before it was brought to London. The painting shows Venus half reclining before a mirror. At the time the painting was brought to the National gallery, about seven years ago, several Americans tried to buy it. The National gallery had to pay what was then considered an enormous sum to retain the painting in England.

MARTIAL LAW EXTENDED.

State of Ceara Included—Federals Protect Property at Fortaleza.

Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, March 11.—Martial law, which has existed here since last week, was proclaimed throughout the state of Ceara. Federal troops have been placed on guard at the principal commercial and private houses in Fortaleza, the state capital, owing to the outbreak of a strike.

The commander of the federal troops there telegraphed to the minister of war that trade had been brought to a standstill and the strikers were parading the streets, threatening the population and breaking into private dwellings.

MURPHY OUSTED BY DEMOCRATS

Tammany Chieftain Is Expelled From Club.

SEVERAL OTHERS ALSO GO

Judge O'Dwyer Invokes Little Used Rule For Nonpayment of Dues—Foley, Plunkitt, Gaffney and Darlington Go With Him—Move Hotly Fought.

New York, March 11.—The board of governors of the national Democratic club at a tumultuous meeting read Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall, and James E. Gaffney, Thomas F. Foley, Thomas Darlington and George W. Plunkitt out of the club for nonpayment of dues. Judge Edward F. O'Dwyer of the city court, president of the club, frankly said that it was detrimental to the best interests the club as well as to the national administration to have Murphy and the others continued as members and that he would exert every influence to have them kept out.

The pretext upon which the five Tammany men were thrown out was that they had not paid their dues. Under the rules of the club a member is automatically retired two months after the dues are payable. Mr. Murphy and his four companions should have paid up on Jan. 1. They had not paid on March 1. Therefore their membership ceased.

But that was a decision which the seventeen governors reached only after a bitter struggle. The original intention of Justice Edward F. O'Dwyer, president of the club, was to pass through the board a resolution retiring Mr. Murphy and the four others. Thomas F. Smith, secretary of Tammany Hall, raised the point that their membership had ceased already, thereby beating the judge to it.

So the real point to the proceedings was assumed to be that Mr. Murphy, Tom Foley and the rest had been thrown out bodily.

Detrimental to Interests.

"I took this action," said Judge O'Dwyer later, "because Mr. Murphy and the others are detrimental to the interests of the party and to the National Democratic club and are in opposition to the principles of progressive democracy."

The judge spoke with a rising inflection, showing that he was still hot from the events which had transpired in the governors' room upstairs.

"Yes," said Thomas F. Smith, who split sentences with the judge in telling the story of the meeting to the newspaper men, "and it's the first time in the history of the club that any special resolution of this character has been put through."

"Will they get back again if they pay their dues?" somebody asked.

"They won't if I have my say about it," said Judge O'Dwyer.

As an extra slap at Tammany Hall the governors—the O'Dwyer faction was easily in control from the beginning—elected to membership in the club Governor Glynn, Dudley Field Malone, who has been busy reflecting President Wilson's attitude against Tammany Hall; Fire Commissioner Robert Adamson, who conducted the fusion campaign which resulted in the defeat of Judge McCall in the last election; Henry P. Velte, an anti-Tammany Democratic senator from Williamsburg, and Joseph P. Tumulty, President Wilson's secretary.

TANNENBAUM INDICTED.

Grand Jury's Charge Is Punishable With $500 Fine.

New York, March 11.—Frank Tannenbaum, the young leader of the I. W. W. unemployed who invaded St. Alphonsus' Roman Catholic church at Sullivan street and West Broadway on the night of March 4, was indicted by the grand jury on the charge of "participating in an unlawful assembly." The offense is a misdemeanor and is punishable with a fine of $500. The indictment was handed in to Judge Rosalsky in the court of general sessions.

Tannenbaum will be arraigned in Judge Rosalsky's court to plead to the indictment. The witnesses before the additional grand jury which heard the case were Detective Lieutenant Patrick H. Gildea and Fathers John S. Schneider and James C. Kessler of St. Alphonsus' church.

GIRL BRAVES ICE TO WED.

Crosses Hudson In Rowboat Through Floes to Meet Sweetheart.

Yonkers, March 11.—Miss Maud Allison of Alpine, N. J., braved the ice floes in the Hudson river to get married.

Accompanied by her father, August Allison, she crossed the river in a row boat and came to Yonkers. At the public pier she was met by her fiance, Albert G. Reichenback, of 79 Yonkers avenue.

The two were married at the Yonkers city hall by Alderman Diedrick.

Corporation Notice.

Public notice is hereby given that at a meeting of the Common Council of the City of Plainfield, New Jersey, held on Monday, the second day of March, 1914, an ordinance of which the following is a true copy, to wit:

AN ORDINANCE

To Provide for the Construction of a Further Addition to the System of Sewerage Already Constructed in the City of Plainfield.

WHEREAS, There has been constructed in said city a system of sewerage and such action in relation thereto has from time to time been taken as is set forth in the preamble to the ordinance of said city, entitled "An ordinance to provide for the construction of an addition to the system of sewerage already constructed in the city of Plainfield," approved November 6, 1897, to which preamble reference is hereby made for greater certainty and

WHEREAS, In the opinion of the Common Council the public good requires that a further addition, as herein described, to the system of sewerage already constructed, should be now constructed in and for said city under the provisions of the Act in said preamble referred to, and the Common Council has so determined and does hereby so determine; therefore,

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. That the Common Council doth hereby direct and order that a further addition to the system of sewerage already constructed under said Act and acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto, be constructed in and for said city under the provisions of the Act of the Legislature above referred to, with all the appurtenances necessary to complete the same, and of such dimensions and material and according to such plans as the said Common Council may hereafter direct, in and through the following described streets, avenues, property, lands and rights of way described, mentioned and referred to in this ordinance to wit:

West Third Street, from Grant Avenue to Clinton Avenue;

Clinton Avenue, from West Third Street to Myrtle Avenue;

Myrtle Avenue, from Clinton Avenue to the property of the Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield and through said property to the sewage disposal works.

Sec. 2. That house connections shall be constructed from the above named sewers to the curb lines.

Was presented, read and ordered to be considered and acted upon by said Common Council at a regular meeting thereof to be held in the Council Chamber, No. 149 North Avenue, in said City of Plainfield, on Monday, the sixth day of April, 1914, at the hour of 8 o'clock in the evening of that day, and at such meeting ample opportunity will be given to all parties in favor of or opposed to the improvement contemplated by said ordinance, to present their views with reference to the same in writing or otherwise, as the Common Council may at that time direct, and public notice is hereby given of the intention of the Common Council to cause said improvement set forth in this ordinance to be made, and such persons or corporations as may object thereto, are requested to present their objections in writing at the City Clerk's office, No. 151 North Avenue, in the City of Plainfield, N. J., at or before the expiration of ten days from the date of this notice, or to the Common Council at its first meeting held after the expiration of the said ten days, and said Common Council at such meeting, to be held on the sixth day of April, 1914, as above stated, or afterward, may proceed to consider and pass such ordinance, notwithstanding any objection.

By order of the Common Council.

J. T. MacMURRAY, City Clerk.

WORK FOR HEALTH INSPECTOR.

The condition of street cars is an important issue at this period of the year and patrons and officials should do their part in co-operating with the company employes to keep the cars in a sanitary condition. Thousands use the street cars every day and unclean ones quickly cause and spread disease. Temperature and ventilation are correlated and at this season of the year it is difficult to control these problems. It is often hot and stuffy on trains and the New Jersey Central authorities are doing all in their power to supply adequate ventilation, but the patrons should do their share in the cause by appointing themselves individual committees to help in the work.

Responsibility for the cleanliness of the cars is wholly up to the operating companies, but at the same time to keep them sanitary it is necessary that there should be co-operation upon the part of patrons. Expectorating on the floor is a habit indulged in by some persons who have no consideration for the general public. Offenders are liable to a fine for each offense but to date there have been no arrests that we have heard of, although flagrant disregard of the health ordinance has been noted at times on the street cars. There is no more offensive habit and aside from being an infraction of law it is a disgusting practice and inexcusable. Conductors apparently do not always notice the violation of the ordinance against expectoration and passengers hesitate to make themselves conspicuous by complaining to the authorities as it would be necessary to appear in court.

The Board of Health could make a splendid example by putting an inspector at work, riding about town on the cars, especially on Saturday night, and acting as complaining witness against health law violators.

WIDOWHOOD PREVENTION.

Recent statistics go to show that many of the woes and conditions which lead to dependent widowhood and orphanage are preventable. Death during the productive age when man is raising a growing family is unnatural to a very great degree and, being so, it is possible to do much to prevent the overpowering of home by such a catastrophe. The means at hand include the elimination of tuberculosis, enforcement of compulsory workmen's insurance, enforcement of safety rules and safety appliances where men work, improvement of general health conditions, bettering of housing and provision for training in better paying industry and better paid employment.

Widowhood in the future promises to be subjected to less of the hardships and privations than in the past because of the recently added widows' pensions in New Jersey, organized charity and a more tender heartedness on the part of humanity and municipality. But the greater point is this,—that there is to be less widowhood itself. One of the saddest states of existence is that of the dependent widowed mother who must call upon charity to keep her family intact. As with other economic problems which we are facing, we are bound to realize that prevention is far better and cheaper than relief and dependency.

Human life is held more sacred and is rated at a higher value nowadays. However, America is far behind European nations where social insurance and pensions conduce to the utmost conservation of the vital spark. Eventually we shall come to their way of thinking and doing; meanwhile, we are doing better than we ever have before.

A recent survey was conducted of widowhood. It was found that in 230 families out of 985, the husband's death was caused by tuberculosis. We are teaching the prevention of the white plague and establishing sanitoria for treatment of the scourge. Many other families were deprived of their means of support by needless accidents. We are growing to the belief that accidents are preventable as well as consumption. In most cases, the husbands had earned very meager salaries and left little behind when they died. We are teaching vocations in schoolrooms and directing employment into remunerative channels.

Humanity looks upon widowhood from the sentimental side but widowhood is a disaster chiefly of an economical nature. The immediate sadness and disappointment are soon over-shadowed in many cases by the struggle for existence. Organized relief savoring not too much of charity is essential but prevention is imperative.

Considerable comment has been current of late concerning the sidewalk in front of the new building which is in the course of construction at 510-512 West Third street. This walk has been closed to the use of the public for the past six or eight weeks and pedstrians have been forced to take to the gutter and street during the recent stormy season. This condition is excusable for a time, but becomes inexcusable when the streets are in a deplorable state. It has been suggested that the Street Department look into the matter of making necessary arrangements so that pedestrians need not journey through a foot of slush, snow, water and mud.

THE FORUM.

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

W. C. Redfield, Secretary of Commerce, in his speech on United States exports, in Brooklyn, last night, said that "our year's exports ending January 31, 1913, show a balance of trade in our favor of $676,000,000 over imports," Can you, or any of your readers tell me in what way that balance is in our favor? Does Mr. Redfield mean that the country, or tradesman, as the case may be, who pays out more than he receives is more favored than the country or tradesman who receives more than he pays out? It looks to me that if this is his meaning, we are somewhat mixed up. Will you, Mr. Editor, please print this in your valuable journal? By so doing you will help to remove the sand from the eyes of many of your readers, as well as the eyes of

Yours respectfully,
J. W. HARRISON.

March 10, 1914.

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

I notice an article in today's issue of the Daily Press in reference to the poll tax. I wish to call your attention to the Laws of 1903 in reference to this poll tax or any other tax or assessment made by the municipal assessors. There is no reason why all taxes are not collected, as the laws of the State are very plain in this matter and impose a penalty on collectors for not making the collections without good and sufficient cause. If you will look up the laws above referred to you will find that collectors are subject to a fine of thirty-two dollars for each and every neglect. Such fine are recovered by the taxing district in action on contract in any court of competent jurisdiction. Why repeal the present law? No taxes go by default in Fanwood.

Respectfully,
CHARLES SHEELEN,
Collector (15 years).

Fanwood, March . 1914.

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

Permit me space to make a suggestion to the residents of the city which would, if followed, materially hasten the drying of the streets as the snow thaws. It is that each one not only open his gutter to allow the water to get to the culverts, but have a gully cut every twenty feet across his lot from the middle of the road to the gutters, permitting drainage. With the snow as it is now the water lies in the middle of the road by day, to freeze again at night. This is probably partly due to the tar and oil preparations which make the roads less dusty in dry weather, but prevents as rapid soakage as formerly.

R. V. LAWRENCE.

Editor the Plainfield Press:

Your editorials are always interesting, but the one contained in your issue of the 9th, on "Kickers and Knockers," is very good indeed and I take this opportunity of complimenting you, not so much on account of this one particular editorial, but the spirit which enables you to grind them out. I wish that you might even extend your influences a little further and point out to the people of Plainfield that the Board of Trade deserves their support. The dues are only $3 a year and it is manifestly the duty of every right thinking person in the community to belong to such an organization for it is through organization that many things are accomplished. I am often stopped on the street by well meaning people who say, "Well, what is the Board of Trade going to do now? What is it doing now? Why don't you do this and why don't you do that?" The trouble is these people are so engrossed in their own conceit of what should be done and what we should do as a Board of Trade that they do not realize that every man jack of us, especially those who are doing the work, are paying dues to belong to the Board of Trade. It costs us a great deal of money to do things, and last but not least, it takes up an enormous amount of time, yet these people do not see that the least they can do is to pay their $3, join the Board of Trade, attend its meetings and give a kick or knock or whatever they desire, for good, able, energetic men will be there to take care of knockers. If anybody thinks of joining the Board of Trade for the purpose of promoting his own selfish and personal interest, the best thing he can do, is to forget it, for the present management of the board can give no encouragement to people of that kind.

Yours cordially,
WM. JEFFERY,
President Board of Trade,
Plainfield, N. J.

Editor, Plainfield Press:

I notice in the Plainfield Press of March 5 that the price of the Darling farm on which the proposed sewer beds are to be locaed is $36,000 for about 90 acres, partly under water at times, I understand. At $400 per acre I think they are "putting one over on us." "A Darling farm it must be." How far would the $36,000 plus the cost of installing a costly sewer bed or septic tank go toward a trunk line to tide water? It was the same thing about twenty years ago when Plainfield bought the Smock farm. They told us it would last for generations. Wasn't long before the sewer beds were clogged up and wouldn't take the sewage. The newly built costly septic tanks, which one would suppose from the talk going around at the time, would last forever. Now it's the same old story only the name is changed from the Smock farm to the Darling farm. It is the same line of talk. The first time we were excusable, now if we are "stung" again it's our own fault. By all means build a permanent sewer to tidewater then there will be no further trouble. If we install sewer beds in Piscataway township we are to bring a lawsuit. By the time that is settled and paid for it will be time to move on. Our taxes are getting higher every year. If we have to install a new sewer system every score of years they will continue to soar. We haven't paid for the old sewer beds yet. While we're at it, do it right. Go to tide water. The initial cost will be more but then we'll have something that will last for all time.

MRS. CATHERINE BOHL DIES IN 80TH YEAR

Mrs. Catherine Bohl, widow of William Bohl, died yesterday morning at the home of her son, Henry Bohl of Arlington avenue, following a three months' illness of heart trouble and other ailments incident to the infirmities of age. She was a native of New York, in which city she was born 80 years ago, but removed to Mt. Bethel shortly after her marriage. Her husband died from the results of an accident about twenty years ago and some time later Mrs. Bohl came to Plainfield, where she has since made her home. She is survived by two sons, William and Henry Bohl, of this city, and the following daughters:

Mrs. George Kirch, of the borough; Mrs. Matilda Holley, of Arlington avenue; Mrs. August Zimmerman, of Elizabeth, and Miss Annie Bohl, of Paterson.

Arrangements for the funeral have not as yet been made.

CHANGE IN BUSINESS.

Announcement is made that the Somerset Dyeing and Cleaning Works at 62 Somerset street, formerly owned by H. Rubenson, who recently sailed for Africa, has been purchased by John Matthews, who was formerly engaged in the tailoring business for men and women, on Fifth avenue, in New York. It is the intention of the new owner to do first-class work, and all orders given him will receive careful and prompt attention.

THE DAILY PRESS IN LINCOLN will be found on sale or delivered to any address every afternoon by E. Purvis, newsdealer.

BAPTIST BIBLE CLASSES PLAN FOR BIG MEETING

A notable gathering of church men will take place tomorrow evening at the First Baptist church, when, under the auspices of the Men's Conference Bible Class and the Probasco Bible Class, they will entertain Men's Bible Classes of the various Baptist churches of this city, Scotch Plains, South Plainfield and New Market.

An elaborate program of music and a list of speeches on various lines of thought has been arranged to appeal strongly to the men who are expected to be in attendance. A spread of no mean dimentions will mark the close of the occasion.

PERSONAL.

Miss Louise Layton, of Somerset street, severely injured her foot while coasting on the Park Golf Club grounds, on Westervelt avenue, yesterday, by the upsetting of the large bobsled on which she was riding.

John Bremble, of East Seventh street, who has been at Muhlenberg Hospital for the past few weeks, undergoing an operation for appendicitis, is expected to be removed to his home tonight.

Elmer Gayle, of Vine street, sustained an injury to his leg, last night, in an accident that happened on the Westervelt avenue hill, where he was coasting.

Miss Ethel Gaskill, of West Fifth street, is spending a few days visiting her cousins, Mrs. Arthur Warman and Mrs. Harold Drake, of Trenton.

Daniel Galbraith, of Spooner avenue, returned home yesterday from the Alexian Brothers' hospital, Elizabeth, where he had been under treatment for three weeks.

William Durant, of West Fifth street, is able to be out again after a week's illness with grip and complications.

Councilman Edmund Rushmore, of the borough, is in Atlantic City, where Mrs. Rushmore is spending some time.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hardman, of West Sixth street, have gone to Poughkeepsie, N. Y., for a few weeks' visit with relatives.

Not a home in this city but has its quota of discarded furniture, rugs, stoves perhaps, a wheelbarrow maybe.

A few cents for a Press want ad and some one who needs the very article that lies rotting in your garret will call and pay you for it.

You are better off—new owner is pleased—and the article itself is contributing to the reduction of the high cost of living.

CLOGGED NOSTRILS OPEN AT ONCE, HEAD COLDS AND CATARRH VANISH

In One Minute Your Stuffy Nose and Head Clears, Sneezing and Nose Running Cease, Dull Headache Goes.

Try "Ely's Cream Balm."

Get a small bottle anyway, just to try it. Apply a little in the nostrils and instantly your clogged nose and stopped-up air passages of the head will open; you will breathe freely; dullness and headache disappear. By morning the catarrh, cold-in-head or catarrhal sore throat will be gone.

End such misery now! Get the small bottle of "Ely's Cream Balm" at any drug store. This sweet, fragrant balm dissolves by the heat of the nostrils; penetrates and heals the inflamed, swollen membrane which lines the nose, head and throat, clears the air passages; stops nasty discharges and a feeling of cleansing soothing relief comes immediately.

Don't lay awake tonight struggling for breath, with head stuffed, nostrils closed, hawking and blowing. Catarrh or a cold, with its running nose, foul mucous dropping into the throat, and raw dryness is distressing but truly needless.

Put your faith—just once—in "Ely's Cream Balm" and your cold or catarrh will surely disappear.—Adv

MISS MOON TO BE DARK LADY TONIGHT

An Almost Total Eclipse May Be Visible With Clear Skies.

Plainfielders, who are abroad tonight, may, if the skies are clear, witness an almost total eclipse of the moon. It is one of the most mysterious and impressive of all Nature's strange phenomena. The moon is full at 11:19 o'clock, at which phase only that satellite can be eclipsed. Then only it is directly opposite the sun, and hence exhibits the full the lumination of that side which is ever turned towards the earth. And it is only when the moon is thus opposite the sun that it is liable to run into the shadow of the earth and have the sun's light cut off, from which alone it derives its own radiance. That is all there is about an eclipse of the moon and its explanation is exceedingly simple. There is a full moon every month, or thereabouts, yet we have an eclipse of the moon only at infrequent intervals.

The moon, tonight, is at the descending node—that is, crossing the sun's path downward on the very day when it is also full or opposite the sun. Hence the three bodies are—the sun, the earth and the moon—arranged in a straight line and the moon is eclipsed. It happens that the very next day the moon is at perigee, her nearest approach to the earth—30 000 miles nearer than when at apogee, her furthest—and so it is now distant only 222,400 miles which makes her disc larger than commonly and causes her to drive through the earth's shadow at a point where it is broader than further out, for this shadow is conical in shape and at a certain distance from the earth terminates in a point. If the moon's orbit lay beyond that point, it would never be eclipsed.

Today the full-orbed moon will rise splendidly in the east just as the sun sets in the west, and ascend the sky as if nothing were about to happen, but at 8:41 eastern time it will encounter the penumbra or partial shadow of the earth, where the sun's light is only partly cut off.

It may be some minutes before Plainfield eyes can distinguish that the eclipse has begun, but an hour later, at 9:42 o'clock, the solid dense shades, or umbra, will be encountered, and the moon, which has thus dimmed considerably will rapidly fall until the climax is reached at 11:11 o'clock. At that time about eleven twelfths of the moon's face will be eclipsed, the eclipse being not quite total. From then on, the moon will be emerging from the earth's shadow, escaping the umbra at 11:41 o'clock and the penumbra at 1:41 o'clock tomorrow morning.

That the moon can be seen when totally eclipsed is explained by the fact that scattering rays from the sun are refracted through the earth's atmosphere so that they fall upon the moon and dimly reveal its form and position. To this is attributed the reddish appearance of the moon at such a time as has been here described.

H. H. WILLIAMS PROSECUTING CASE UNDER SHERMAN ACT

Howard H. Williams, of Kensington avenue, is chief counsel in an action which has been brought in Ohio against what is known as the "tire trust," by the Automobile Co-operative Association, an organization composed of a number of well known New Yorkers, and which includes among its stockholders several Plainfield people. It is claimed by Mr. Williams' clients that the tire trust violated the Sherman act in restraint of trade, and that because of their refusal to sell goods to the plaintiffs in the case, the Auto Co-operative Association was driven into bankruptcy. Among the tire companies involved in the case are said to be the Diamond, Goodrich, United States, Firestone and Republic. $450,000 damages is sought. Associated with Mr. Williams in the case are James A. Fowler, who was one of the "trust busters" of the Taft administration, and O. E. Harrison, another well-known attorney.

FINE PROGRAM FOR ORGAN RECITAL AND CONCERT

All arrangements have been completed for the public organ recital and concert which is to be given tomorrow night at the Crescent Avenue church, under the auspices of the Plainfield Public Recreation Committee. Dr. E. Mettler Davis, organist, will be assisted by Organist G. Stevenson, Miss Lillian Vernon Watt, soprano, and Miss Grace J. Carroll, contralto.

The program that has been arranged for the occasion is a long one and the selections have been well chosen. The doors of the church will be opened at 7:30 o'clock and admission will be by ticket until 8:05 o'clock after which time entrance will be free to all. Tickets have been distributed to schools, drug stores, at Marshall's laundry and at various other places in the east and west ends of the city. It is expected that the attendance at tomorrow night's concert will be large.

FUNERAL OF MRS. DANIEL M'DEVITT LARGELY ATTENDED

The funeral of Mrs. Daniel McDevitt, whose death occurred at her home at 333 Manson place on Sunday last, was held in St. Mary's church this morning, in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends. A solemn high mass was said by Father B. M. Bogan as celebrant, Rev. Father Vincent Sciolla, as deacon and Father Daniel Hogan, as sub-deacon.

Departing from the usual custom Father Hogan took occasion to pay a tribute to Mrs. McDevitt, praising her as a wife and a mother and extolling her manifold virtues as exemplified by her Christian character. There were many handsome floral tributes, several large set pieces being included. Burial was made in St. Mary's cemetery, the following acting as pall bearers: Harry Foristel, Thelespore Parent, Patrick McConnon, Patrick Devier, Daniel Harkins and John Devier.

MRS. CATHERINE CONNERS DIES AT AKRON, OHIO

Telegrams received by relatives, this morning, announced the death of Mrs. Catherine Connors, of this city, at Akron, Ohio, yesterday. No details as to the cause of demise were given. Mrs. Conners had been making her home with her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Julie Conners, of John street, and left for the West several months since to spend some time with a son and daughter who reside in Akron. Before coming to Plainfield Mrs. Conners for many years lived at Bound Brook. Besides the relatives mentioned, she leaves another daughter, who resides in Baltimore, Md., and who wired today that she would be unable to attend her mother's funeral, as one of her children also died yesterday.

Mrs. Conners' other son, John Conners, was very well-known throughout this city at the time his death occurred eight years ago. At the time he was the assistant superintendent of the local branch of the Prudential Insurance Company. The funeral service for Mrs. Conners was held in Akron this morning, and the body will be brought to Plainfield tomorrow morning, arriving from the West at 11:52 o'clock. Burial will be made in St. Mary's cemetery following its arrival.

DANCING CLASS MEETING.

Members of the class in national dancing, which is conducted under the auspices of the Public Recreation Committee, will meet this evening. It will be the first meeting of the class since the exhibition which was given on Washington's Birthday. This is said to be a good time for new members of the class to join as a new series of dances are to be taught. The dancing class meets every Wednesday night at Washington School, on Darrow avenue.

DR. HERRING'S LECTURE.

Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring will give his lecture on "Paradiso," the last of the series in Vincent chapel, of the First M. E. church, tomorrow afternoon, at 3:30 o'clock.

PLAYS AND PLAYERS

FEMININE BASKET TOSSERS REGAIN LAURELS LOST BY THE BOYS' TEAM

Thirteen fouls by Miss Dorothy Crane and one sensational field goal by Miss Esther Philips, of Plainfield High School, was enough to defeat the North Plainfield High School girls' basketball team in the final game for the league championship on the Y. M. C. A. court, yesterday afternoon. The final score was 15 to 14. The game was the finest and fastest that has ever been played by the girls' teams of the two high schools and the decision was in doubt throughout the entire contest. Both teams were primed for the occasion and when they took the floor neither was considered the favorite by more than a few points. The gallery of the association building was filled to the doors and spectators were allowed on the floor shortly before the game started. There was as much cheering for the two teams as there was at the final game between the boys and this continued during the game.

All of the ten players on the floor went into the game from the very start and neither side admitted defeat until Miss Marjorie Burtis missed a foul shot that would have caused the game to go overtime. Miss "Dot" Crane started the scoring when she dropped in a foul for the first point of the game. Two more chances were given her before the boroughites had a chance, but, under the great strain, she failed. The score was tied by Miss Burtis from the fifteen foot mark but her midget opponent soon put the city girls in the lead by scoring three fouls in a row. The North Plainfield star then retaliated with a field goal that brought the spectators to their feet. Many fouls were called on both teams, the boroughites making the larger number, which gave Miss Crane a fine chance to increase the lead. Lillian Spencer added to the borough score with a field goal but fouls again put the cityites at the top. The score zigzagged for the entire fifteen minutes of play and at the last part of the period Miss Douglas tied the score by making a fine field goal from the centre of the floor. The first half ended with the score standing 7 to 7.

After a rest of ten minutes the teams faced each other for the last half and fouls again featured the playing. Both teams used side centres. The officials were forced to call them on first one team and then the other and it was the stellar shooting of the Plainfield forward that practically won the game. The boroughites came back strong at the beginning of the final stanza and obtained a four point lead over their opponents, which would have been enough to win had they not committed so many fouls. Plainfield's only field goal of the game came at the right time, when Miss Philips caged a basket that tied the score after her running mate had scored two fouls. The Misses Crane and Burtis then had a game by themselves at foul shooting and when the former would put one in her opponent would follow the example. When the city team was one point in the lead the timer's whistle blew announcing the end of the game but at the same time the referee's whistle blew announcing a foul on Plainfield. Miss Burtis toed the mark but the ball bounced off the backboard. Miss Crane was the high score girl of the game, getting thirteen fouls and Miss Burtis was next with one field goal and a half dozen fouls to her credit.

"Sportdom Tips"

Replete with thrills and every minute presenting a miniature battle in itself, the third and deciding contest played between the North Plainfield and Plainfield High School feminine forces yesterday afternoon in the Y. M. C. A. gym, was one of the best exhibitions of this particular kind of basketball ever seen in this city. It bore a strong resemblance to the finals of the 1912 season when the boroughites trimmed the Plainfielders in the rubber contest after a similar display of individualism. Where Miss Dorothy Crane was the star for Plainfield yesterday and won the contest for her school, Miss Helen Hummel was the shining light in 1912, and her efforts were in many respects similar to those of the little Plainfield maiden who pulled down the laurels yesterday. The game will be one long remembered by the cohorts of both sides and although the boroughites came in the favorite and went away defeated they deserve honorable mention for the remarkable battle they put up. It was anybody's game up to the last whistle, and even after the timer's whistle had been heard Miss Burtis took the chance that might have tied the score and resulted in a different tale being related.

Now that we have suggested almost everything else along the sport line for the two rival schools, we may as well go one step further and advocate something to settle the argument so tangled up at the present time. The boys of North Plainfield won the male fight and the Plainfield girls evened up matters and it would be appropriate at the present time for the faculty of the two institutions to enter conflict and decide the real champion. Plainfield High has the quantity in this line, but North Plainfield is pretty nearly on a par as far as quality is concerned. It's not too late to get even and this exhibition would be another thriller from present indications.

At the present time there are very many healthy-minded schoolboy athletes who are attracted to college not alone by opportunities for making money out of athletics. Those institutions that have gone into the business of offering inducements of one sort or another have often overlooked this field. In their haste to pick up the promising youngster they have sometimes forgotten that he can be appealed to through the sheer interest of the college man in his work on track, field or stream. Many a good football or baseball player has been obtained through the efforts of graduates who had not even a job tending furnace to offer.

It would be easy to make out a list as long as one's arm of men gathered in in this way, but it seems to be the fashion nowadays to accuse every young man who "makes good" at the university of his choice of having been corralled by "inducements" of one sort or another.

Especially in the case of well coached college baseball and football teams there have been accessions simply because there were glaring vacancies on these teams after a successful season, with the certainty that the newcomer would be coached thoroughly and would stand better than an even chance to make the team after his freshman year.

And now approaches an unpleasant task for the dear manager. Picking the best bets among all the rookies and recruits that aspire to a big league berth is never very great pleasure to the chiefs. It generally amounts to a process of elimination, the impossible and the worst being dispatched speedily to whence they came. Of course, the ever present possibility that a real star may be chanced upon is what makes managers give careful heed to the inspection of the youngsters who report, but the job is always a hard one and generally trying. A kid may report for a tryout and appear to have a lot of stuff at first. But so often they are unable to stand up under a regular every-day stunt. This is found to be especially true among the amateur stars of the larger towns who tempt the scouts by their dazzling play Saturdays and Sundays. These youngsters are frequently able to get out once a week and perform like Walter Johnsons or Eddie Collinses. But when they are weighed on the regular everyday stunt they are found wanting.

It now looks as though the only way Paul Collier could legitimately keep those fifty iron men is to have them inscribed—Paul has shown his good sportsmanship in clinging to his amateur standing, however, and if there were more like him sports would flourish better in this city.

The feeling that has been aroused between the students of North Plainfield and Plainfield, is anything but a commendable one, and something should be done to produce harmony. If matters are allowed to go on as they are now traveling something is due to burst at any moment.

It's creditable to be able to win a championship, but even more creditable to be able to take a defeat in a sportsmanlike way—the borough girls certainly took the jolt in the best of form.

NEW RACING CIRCUIT FORMED.

Boston, Mass., March 11.—The completion here today of the organization of the Bay State Short Ship Circuit assures Massachusetts of a long season of harness racing this year. The season will open June 17 and continue until the second week of August. The circuit embraces tracks in Medford, Taunton, Worcester, Framingham, Providence, Haverhill, Fitchburg and Springfield.

Johnny Kilbane vs. Johnny Dundee, 6 rounds, at Philadelphia.

LAING'S COLTS TOOK TWO AND LOST THIRD

Double Centuries by Captain Won the Initial Pair of Games Last Night.

Edward Laing's team, of the Elks' Club Bowling League, took two in a row and dropped the third contest rolled with the aggregation captained by Johnny Campbell on the Elks' alleys, last night. Seventy-three pins separated the rivals in the first encounter, the lead was cut down to twenty pins in the second, and the Campbell outfit won out by fifteen pins in the third.

Laing was the only man to pass the 200 mark during the evening and his double centuries kept the No. 5 combination in the winning class for the first two rounds.

The scores:

BOYS' TEAM PLANS TO REWARD WINNERS

Plainfield High School Girls Will Be Presented With Medals.

A meeting of the boys interested in athletic competition in the Plainfield High School was called yesterday, immediately after the girls' basketball team had defeated the North Plainfield feminine quintet for the league championship, and by a unanimous vote it was decided to inaugurate a voluntary subscription list to raise funds for the purchase of medals which will be presented to the members of the champion team. The basketball team has taken the initiative in the matter and the boys are planning a vigorous campaign in behalf of the movement.

This is the first championship the girls have won in four years and the feminine athletes of the school are much elated over the outcome. The following committee was elected to take charge of the matter: Andrew Hetfield, Donald Sminck, Daniel F. McNamee, Nicholas Zelmas and William Peacock. The idea has met with a general response and contributions have already started to pour in.

LOCAL BOY MAKING GOOD.

Monroe Good, a graduate of the Plainfield High School in the class of 1913, is playing basketball with the freshman quintet of Colgate University. His team won the Marsh trophy for the interclass championship. He is now a candidate for the varsity baseball nine and played a substitute back on the football eleven.

NEAF APGAR FIFTH.

Neaf Apgar, the local sharpshooter, finished fifth in the trapshooters' tournament at the Grand Central Palace Travel and Sportsman's Show, New York, last night, clipping thirty-nine out of a possible fifty birds.

COLLIER WILL HAVE TO RETURN THE GIFT

Decision of the Amateur Athletic Union in the Matter Leaves But One Course.

When presented with a purse of $50 in gold by the North Plainfield High School Athletic Association, in recognition of the work he has done for the championship basketball team this year, Paul R. Collier, the coach, declined to accept the token officially until he had ascertained certain points regarding the Amateur Athletic Union's ruling in the matter and that information has now been secured through The Daily Press, the official organ of the A. A. U. in this city. Collier is desirous of maintaining his amateur status and for this reason he has held back in accepting the gift.

Official information from Barton S. Weeks, of the A. A. U., makes it necessary for Collier to return the money and this he will probably do and accompany it with a request to have something purchased with the money. The following letter is self explanatory:

Dear Sir:

Your letter of March 2 has been referred to me by Mr. Sullivan's office. My opinion is, that if Collier accepts the cash payment, he would forfeit his amateur standing, but I see no objection to his receiving a testimonial, suitably inscribed, from the men whom he coached, providing the giving of such testimonial was in no sense agreed upon or understood in advance, which from the language of your letter does not seem to have been the case.

Yours very truly,
BARTON S. WEEKS,

TRUE SPORTSMANSHIP HAS BEEN REPLACED

Deplorable Feeling of Bitterness Exists Between Local and Borough Schools.

During the past five months of interscholastic basketball competition, both male and feminine, and most noticeably during the last month, a feeling of animosity has been stirred up between the members of the rival institutions that is deplorable. The good natured rivalry that has existed in past years has been blotted out for some reason or other and at the present time a bitter feeling exists between the two factions.

Although the games fought this year has been unusually close and the outcome has been a matter of doubt up to the last minute the spirit of true sportsmanship has been absent and the rival forces battled for blood in each encounter. A feeling has existed after each game and some of the players and not a few of the cohorts have not been backward in expressing their relations with the opposing team or faction.

The original intent of this organization was to promote a good natured rivalry between the local and borough schools and it is to be regretted that the principals have deviated from the old established methods. While the winning of games means much to one faction, the losing means equally as much to the opposite side and this should be taken into consideration by the enthusiastic celebrants.

The methods employed to impress the victory on the public in some cases has been far from sportsmanlike and this has been noticed by many of those interested in educational work in this city and North Plainfield. The manner in which victory is lauded and defeat belittled has been the cause for much adverse criticism and unless something is done to patch up the differences and bitter feeling between the two sides something disastrous is bound to occur in the near future.

VETERAN SPORT WRITER DIES IN SAN FRANCISCO

San Francisco, March 11.—W. W. Naughton, the dean of the sporting writers on the Pacific coast, died yesterday afternoon. He had been ill of heart failure for two weeks. Naughton was taken to St. Mary's Hospital two weeks ago, suffering from acute indigestion and heart failure and his progress was so favorable that he was removed to his home several days ago. Mr. Naughton was thought to be sleeping, but his wife on entering his room found him dead. He leaves a wife and two children.

Naughton, dean of American sporting writers and an authority of world-wide distinction in all matters pertaining to the manlier sports, was born in Auckland, New Zealand, on July 31, 1854.

OXFORD AT PENN RELAYS.

London, March 11.—It is practically settled, says The Pall Mall Gazette, that representatives of the Oxford University Athletic Club will visit America to compete in the four-mile race at the University of Pennsylvania relay meet in Philadelphia on April 25. Oxford's team will be A. N. S. Jackson, N. S. Taber, D. N. Jaussen, and G. M. Sproule.

LOCAL STORM SCENES IN MOVIES AT PROCTOR'S

While the usual star bill will be presented at Proctor's theatre during the last three days of this week, there will be one feature that will be of more local interest than any other. This will be the first showing in this city of the pictures which were made during the storm last week by Henry Brynairski operator at the local Proctor house. The pictures include scenes on Front street during the blizzard, the stalled trolley cars, scenes at the railroad station, falling telegraph poles, and other things which will be of unusual interest to those local people who were unable to get to the business section of the city during the blizzard.

At Proctor's today the feature is "Our Mutual Girl," a serial picture which appears once each week. In the film shown she is shown going about New York in last week's blizzard, visiting the children's home nursery, at several leading fashion establishments and meeting many notable personages.

The two part drama of the Orient, "The Desert Tribesmen," is of interest for today, as is the latest "Pathe's Weekly," "The Highwaymen's Shoes," a two part drama, and many other interesting features.

For Thursday and Friday, a feature will be the four part production, "The Battle of Shiloh." Recently shown in New York, it scored one of the biggest hits ever registered by any picture play. There are thousands of actors in the cast of this picture story of battle and romance, with the principal roles played by Robert Drouet, Lionel Lawrence and Peggy O'Neill.

STUDENTS FORCE PREACHER TO STOP

Drown Out Sunday Sermon by Coughing.

ARE AGAINST CHAPEL RULE

Demonstration Has Been Chief Topic of Conversation on Princeton's Campus—Names of Ringleaders Are Not Known—Wilson, When College Head, Compelled Students to Be at Service.

Trenton, N. J., March 11.—The students of Princeton university joined on Sunday in a demonstration against the compulsory chapel rule. The matter has been the chief topic of conversation on the campus since the incident, but the facts have been carefully suppressed by the faculty and the leaders of the student body.

The disturbance came as the Rev. W. G. Thayer, head master of St. Mark's school, was preaching a sermon to the students. It began by sounds of coughing in several parts of the building, which in a few seconds became an epidemic. Nearly every student in the chapel took it up, and their combined efforts were so successful that the preacher was compelled to stop abruptly before the end of the sermon. Then the students flocked out, cured of their coughs. The noon hour had arrived.

Dean McClenahan, Proctor Coan and members of the senior council have been investigating the episode, but the names of the ringleaders have not become known.

In yesterday's issue the Daily Princetonian, the students' paper, said:

"Yesterday's asthmatic affliction of the Sunday consumptives was a deliberately irreverent act of consummate profanity to their God. It was a discourteous piece of premeditated insolence toward the university preacher. Finally, it was a conclusive demonstration of the much advanced theory of undergraduate puerility. It was the most childishly, impatient, the most petty reasoned case of mental infantile paralysis yet observed."

Periodically the Princeton students have revolted against Sunday chapel. The sole object of it, they said, was to keep them from leaving Princeton on Sundays. There are no trains out from Princeton on Sunday until evening, so chapel attendance has caused many a student to break engagements in New York and Philadelphia.

Before Woodrow Wilson became president of Princeton in 1092 there was compulsory daily chapel. President Wilson modified the rule so that the only requirement was attendance twice a week for a fifteen minute service and every other Sunday. Failure to comply with the rule made a student liable to suspension.

BARGAIN SALE TO PAY FINE.

Peddler Offers Rain Coats Cheap, and Police Buy Him Out.

Paterson, N. J., March 11.—Leon Hermele of New York was fined $12 by Recorder James F. Carroll for peddling without a license.

Hermere didn't have the money to pay the fine, so he unbuckled his pack in the police station and offered bargains in rain coats. As soon as Mrs. Nolan, the police matron, donned a garment Desk Officer Albert Morrison decided his wife needed one and purchased it.

Judge Abe Cohen, who is an auctioneer, offered to cry a sale for Hermele free of charge, but Detective Robert Close declared he was a rain coat salesman himself at one time.

SCARLET FEVER GRIPS TOWN.

Florence, N. J., With 2,000 Inhabitants, Has Had 10 Deaths, 35 Cases.

Florence, N. J., March 11.—Ten persons, one of them the mother of a family, have died of scarlet fever since Feb. 27, and of the twenty-three persons now being treated several are not expected to survive. Dr. David Baird, Jr., is the only physician in the town.

Florence's population is about 2,000. The village is situated twenty-three miles north of Camden, on the road to Burlington. Scarlet fever has been appearing spasmodically in Burlington county since last December, but at no place has the disease made such ravages. In Florence there have been thirty-five cases since Dec. 1.

COLONEL R. P. DAVIS.

Colonel R. P. Davis came all the way from California to appear as a witness in the court martial of Major Benjamin M. Koehler, which is being held at Fort Terry, Conn. Colonel Davis is expected to give sensational testimony, and on the outcome of his story, it is said, will probably hinge the verdict.

ASTOR BATTERY MEN OFFER KOEHLER HELP

Defense Closes Case In His Court Martial.

New London, Conn., March 11.—Major Benjamin M. Koehler's defense closed, and the prosecution began rebuttal evidence in the Port Terry court martial. This means that the end of the trial will probably come this week. After rebuttal the defense will have a last short inning, and then the case will go to the court.

Major Koehler has not used and will not use all the witnesses available in his behalf. A telegram to him from William E. Hills told him to send word to 15 William street, New York, if he needed help and continued substantially as follows:

"Practically every man in Astor battery will gladly testify for you. Will pay our own expenses. You were the life of our command. If you want us just say the word."

Major Koehler was for a time with this volunteer battery, which was formed by Colonel John Jacob Astor and served in the Spanish war.

The list of rebuttal witnesses as far as completed is Captain George W. Cochen, artillery engineer of Long Island sound defense, from Fort Wright; Captain Gordon Robinson, quartermaster of Long Island sound district, from Fort Wright; Second Lieutenant Harry L. King, coast artillery, from Fort Totten; Master Electrician Byron Brown, from Fort Terry, and Leonard L. Davis, formerly a musician in the Fort Terry band.

The members of the court martial were treated to a dog fight. The eleven colonels and majors had just hung up their cloaks and red and gold caps in the anteroom of the library and were about to enter the back room where the court sits when Irish, Major Koehler's dog, attacked Socks, Captain Richard T. Ellis' dog. The colonels and majors shouted and stamped with great presence of mind, but the only person who made a move was Major Koehler. He collared Irish, and the dogs were shooed outdoors, one at a time.

COLQUITT DEFIES UNITED STATES

Denounces Federal Policy of "Watchful Waiting."

TO PROTECT U. S. CITIZENS

Fort Worth, Tex., March 11.—Governor O. B. Colquitt openly defied the United States government to prevent him from taking steps to protect citizens along the Mexican border, bitterly denounced the federal policy of "watchful waiting" and declared his authority to protect the border was greater than that of President Wilson. Colquitt made these strong assertions in an address before the Texas Cattle Raisers' association, which convened here. His speech was applauded and assailed in turn. However, when he asked the convention to indorse his attitude he created much furore among the delegates.

A resolution to indorse Colquitt's speech and aggressive Mexican attitude was introduced by J. M. Bassett of Crosbyton. Delegates shouted for recognition, declaring the governor had imposed on the courtesy of the convention by bringing politics into its session, while others cheered for the resolution.

San Antonio, Tex., March 11.—Consul Garrett accompanied the party who crossed the border to recover Vergara's body, according to the official report of Mexican Consul R. S. Bravo at Laredo. The report was sent to Arturo Mijias, Mexican consul general at San Antonio, who forwarded it to Mexico City. The report said in part:

"On Saturday morning American Consul Garrett left here, accompanied by a ranger and some custom house officials, for Palafox. From there Garrett crossed into Hidalgo, where he remained all day Saturday and Sunday. They passed a dead body from the Mexican side to American territory and which was said to be the body of Vergara, but thus far only the family of Vergara has been able to identify him.

"The persons who passed the body included Juan Garza, three brothers of Vergara and another unnamed man. They deposited the body in a garage and permitted no one to see it."

The Mexican consul at Laredo sent an envoy to make an examination, and this envoy says the body has not been identified except by members of the family.

Bryan Thinks Crisis Averted.

Washington, March 11.—There was real improvement in the Mexican situation, in the opinion of Secretary of State Bryan and other high administration officials. The grave danger of international complications growing out of the forcible recovery of Clemente Vergara's body from the grave in the Hidalgo cemetery, where it was buried, is believed to have been averted. The raid into Mexican territory turns out to have been a commercial transaction pure and simple. Relatives of the dead rancher paid $400 for an expedition, most of the members of which were Mexicans and no one of whom was a Texas ranger, to recover the body. And it was not until it was actually on American soil that the federal and state officials were notified.

Incidentally army officers disproved in their official reports the claims of Governor Colquitt of Texas and his aids that Vergara had been tortured by fire before death. The undertaker who took charge of the body reported that there are no traces of burns on it.

The reports from General Bliss to the war department and from Consul Garrett to the state department, both of which were considered at length at the cabinet meeting, agree in almost every detail. They clear Texas authorities from the earlier allegations that they had winked at a deliberate armed invasion of friendly territory. And Garrett clears himself of the charge that he was party to the expedition. It is understood that at the cabinet meeting another chief topic of discussion was whether the charges of the opponents of the Wilson administration policy, especially those in congress, shall be further answered.

BILLS TO IMPROVE COURTS.

And Prevent Duplication of Trials In Criminal Cases.

Albany, N. Y., March 11.—Radical changes will be made in the criminal courts of New York city under the terms of bills introduced in the legislature by Senator Patten. The measures are designed to prevent duplication of legal proceedings in criminal cases and to prevent delays of the law. They are backed by the committee on criminal courts of the Charity Organization Society of the City of New York. It is understood the city administration is behind the bills.

One of the important provisions of these bills would give the magistrates the power to dispose of cases involving a misdemeanor.

ALBERT B. FALL.

New Mexico Senator Who Denounced Wilson Policy.

Senator Albert B. Fall, in one of the bitterest speeches made in the senate, denounced the administration's attitude on the Mexican situation. He declared that it was only those that lived near the border that knew the real conditions existing there.

CARMODY FILES FINAL BRIEF IN THAW CASE

Argues For Extradition of New York Fugitive.

Concord, N. H., March 11.—The final brief of Attorney General Carmody of the state of New York in the Thaw case was filed with Burns P. Hodgman, clerk of the United States court the document coming by mail from Albany. The attorney general first takes up the matter of bail and says that in view of the uncertainty in the law it is submitted that unless power to admit the petitioner to bail be found elsewhere than in an assumed inherent right of the court it would clearly be wiser to leave the question of bail to the United States supreme court or a justice thereof on appeal.

The second part of the brief is devoted to a discussion of the suggestion of Judge Aldrich that an error had been committed in the selection of the remedy applicable to the case at bar.

On this point Attorney General Carmody says that if New York was simply seeking to recover the custody and guardianship of Thaw as an insane person it would have mistaken its remedy.

This is not what the state of New York is seeking to do by this proceeding. The matter of the custody and guardianship of the petitioner as an insane person is one that at present the state is not at all concerned with. This is an entirely subordinate and comparatively unimportant matter and may be left to subsequent determination.

What the state of New York seeks by these proceedings is to secure the body of Thaw that it may punish him for the crime committed in the state of New York.

WILL NOT REOPEN CASE.

War Department's Attitude In Matter of McClure of Kentucky.

Washington, March 11.—Unless specifically directed by President Wilson, the war department will not reopen the case of James W. McClure of Paris, Ky., who was excluded from appointment as a cadet at the West Point Military academy, thereby leading his father to prefer charges against Major General Thomas H. Barry, former superintendent, and Major Fred W. Slayden, commandant of cadets, of making false statements in the matter.

Senator Paynter, who had interested himself in the case, has been informed by the war department that the academic board reported that McClure had resigned his cadetship to escape trial, which fact had been regarded sufficient to warrant the disapproval of his application for a new appointment.

THE TYPE OF EMBROIDERED LINGERIE BLOUSE THAT IS A GOOD INVESTMENT

The lingerie blouse is quite indispensable for it is appropriate on so many occasions and if one has few clothes a well tailored suit and a few dainty blouses of this type will cover almost any need. The back-closing blouse is particularly becoming to the girlish figure and is always in good style. This one may be cut by pattern 7821, which can be supplied in sizes 34 to 42 inches bust measure. Any size requires 2¼ yards of 36-inch material.

Made of batiste, handkerchief linen, crêpe voile or one of the new cotton crêpe weaves, this would be very pretty embroidered, as illustrated, with transfer pattern 14588. This design, taken from an imported French waist, may be developed in a variety of ways. Punched work may be used in the scrolls or lace insertion may be buttonholed in and the material cut out underneath or these spaces may be filled in with darning or seed-stitch. The rest of the design may be carried out in solid or eyelet work as one may choose. A blouse of crêpe de Chine, either white or colored, made by this pattern and embroidered in twisted silks would be appropriate for afternoon wear with a skirt of taffeta, eponge or wool material.

Blouse pattern 7821 and transfer pattern 14588 can be supplied to readers on receipt of price, 15 cents.

SWEET potatoes may be served in many appetizing ways to give zest to the winter menu. The potatoes are now so reasonable in price that they may be alternated with the white potatoes to give variety to the bill of fare.

Baked in the Oven.

Sweet Potatoes and Cheese.—Take raw sweet potatoes, peel and cut into thin slices. Place in a shallow pan, cover with water and cook until partly done. Drain, then place in layers in a buttered baking dish. Between each layer sprinkle a very little salt and pepper and dot with bits of butter. When well packed grate over it a thick layer of cheese, pour in a few spoonfuls of milk and bake until the potatoes are tender.

Sweet Potato Pie.—Take some sweet potatoes; boil till they are dry. After draining them and allowing them to dry some, peel and press through a sieve. To each pint of the prepared mashed potatoes add a pint and a half of sweet milk and a half teacupful of cream. Beat two eggs thoroughly and add to the other ingredients—potatoes, milk and cream. Mix well together and lastly stir into the mixture a little salt, sugar and flavoring to taste.

With Cold Potatoes.

Scalloped Sweet Potatoes.—Take some cold boiled sweet potatoes, peel and cut in thick slices. In the bottom of a baking dish put bits of butter, sprinkle with sugar and put in a layer of potatoes. Add more butter, sugar and potatoes until the pan is full. Strew bits of butter and sugar over the top and add a cupful of water. Place in the oven and when the mixture begins to cook moisten the top with a little butter and water to dissolve the sugar and prevent its drying into a hard crust. Use a cupful of sugar and half a pound of butter to two quarts of potatoes. Bake slowly.

Sweet Potato Cakes.—Take eight or nine sweet potatoes. Boil and peel them and put the pulp through a potato ricer. To a quart of pulp allow two tablespoonfuls butter, one and one-half teaspoonfuls salt, one-fourth teaspoonful pepper and one-half teaspoonful onion juice. Mix, form into flat cakes, dip in flour and brown in bacon.

Daddy's Bedtime Story — How the Jolly Brownies Enjoyed The Slush.

The Round Brownies Waited on Them.

"MOST people don't think a day when it is half raining and snowing is nice, but I can tell you the Brownies did," said daddy to Jack and Evelyn.

"It was evening, and all day they had been snuggled in different little hiding places, bobbing up and down with excitement as they watched the hot sun melt the snow. They ran behind trees as they traveled to the village near by their woods just so they could see the people looking annoyed at the slush, and when they heard any one say, 'What horrid weather we're having now; I do dislike March so!' the Brownies almost chuckled aloud, and they certainly grinned from ear to ear. The Brownies thought people were very ridiculous when they grumbled about the weather.

"So they waited with glee until the evening came. Then they had a party. The Brownies divided themselves into two sides for the evening. Each side was given a separate part of the woods in which to get up something original. Six judges were chosen apart. The Brownies which had the best exhibit were to sit still during supper and be waited on by the others. They were to get all the goodies first. So each side worked hard to make its exhibit win. One side was called the fat Brownies and the other side the round Brownies.

"The exhibit of the round Brownies was a snow house, which, of course, was beautifully made because the snow was wet and stuck together well.

"But the fat Brownies had made a fine park. They had made paths and smoothed off the snow to edge the paths with flower beds. In the flower beds they had stuck twigs and little branches. On these they had put snowballs, which, too, had stuck because of the wet snow.

"Really their park looked very funny, but the Brownies all thought it was perfect, and the round Brownies agreed with the judges when they said that the fat Brownies had the most original and interesting exhibit.

"So they all sat down on little snowy stumps of trees while the round Brownies waited on them. They had Brownie soup, which is perfectly delicious, and, of course, it was piping hot. They call it Brownie soup because it is brown. Then they had croquettes with brown gravy and brown potatoes, and for dessert they had brown Betty pudding.

"The judges' wives had cooked the supper, and they received a great deal of praise for it. The fat Brownies thought it was wonderful to be waited on, and the round Brownies enjoyed popping up and getting everything, for then they thought they appreciated the good things to eat still more.

"And they all hoped the snow would melt some more so that they could have another party the next night and wear their new rubber boots."

VOTES FOR WOMEN

Conducted by the Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield.

THE ANTI-FEMINIST NOT A NEW SPECIMEN.

"They do not appear to be satisfied with having unsexed themselves, but they desire to unsex every female in the land, and to set the whole community ablaze with unhallowed fire. * * * The object of these unsexed women is to overthrow the most sacred of our institutions, to set at defiance the divine law, which declares man and wife to be one, and to establish on its ruins what will be in fact and in principle but a species of legalized adultery."

"There! Who said that? Wasn't it Professor Sedgewick or someone? I'm glad someone has answered these awful feminist articles."

"But my dear, that wasn't said by Professor Sedgewick at all, though I don't wonder that you gave him credit for it. As a matter of fact that is from the speech of one Assemblyman Burnett, of Onondaga, back in the year 1854. And the occasion? Why some of the women of New York State had petitioned their Legislature to grant married women a right to their own earnings. Horribly brazen on the part of these women, wasn't it? But now almost every State in the Union does not allow married women the right to their own earnings, and runs the risk of setting 'the whole community ablaze with unhallowed fire.'"

"If we make this experiment we shall destroy the race, which will be blasted by Almighty God."

Doesn't that sound to you like an impassioned reply to some ultra-radical who has voiced extreme views relative to motherhood? Calm yourself. It is merely a remark made back in 1879 by a Massachusetts legislator who looked with horror upon the spectacle of his dear Bay State granting school suffrage to women!

And what is this that "threatens the home, threatens the sacredness of the marriage tie, threatens the church, and undermines the foundation of our great republic?" Ah, this must be that unspeakable danger of "Free Love" that we are so loudly warned against nowadays. No? Worse than that? Well, out with it, what can it be then? Why, the quotation is from a letter written as late as 1899 by the Albany Association Opposed to the Further Extension of Suffage to Women and addressed to the cities committee of the Assembly, protesting against a bill requiring that women should form part of every school board in the State of New York!

In England, when the university examinations at Oxford were thrown open to women, the Dean of Chichester preached a sermon against it, in which he said:

"I have ascertained by extended inquiry among gentlewomen that, with true feminine instinct they either entirely distrust or else look with downright disfavor on so wild an innovation and interference with the best traditions of their sex."

When Vassar was opened, a prominent woman said: "The mere fact that it is called a 'college for women' is enough to condemn it. Of one thing we may be sure—no refined Christian mother will ever send her daughters to Vassar College!"

Even an Anti must gaze upon these interesting relics with a smile—and if she were blessed with a logical mind she could hardly fail to catch their significance paraphrased as follows from the well known epitaph:

Anti, pause as you pass by:
As you are now, so once was I;
As I am now so you must be;
Prepare for VOTES,—or follow me.

The Abysmal Brute

By JACK LONDON

Copyright, 1913, by The Century Co.

CHAPTER V.

BUT the purses grew larger and larger. In place of $100, such as his first battles had earned him, he was now receiving from $20,000 to $30,000 a fight, as well as equally large sums from the moving picture men.

Stubener took his manager's percentage of all this according to the terms of the contract old Pat had drawn up, and both he and Glendon, despite their heavy expenses, were waxing rich.

This was due more than anything else to the clean lives they lived. They were not wasters.

Stubener was attracted to real estate, and his holdings in San Francisco, consisting of building flats and apartment houses, were bigger than Glendon ever dreamed.

There was a secret syndicate of betters, however, which could have made an accurate guess at the size of Stubener's holdings, while heavy bonus after heavy bonus, of which Glendon never heard, was paid over to his manager by the moving picture men.

Stubener's most serious task was in maintaining the innocence of his young gladiator. Nor did he find it difficult.

Glendon, who had nothing to do with the business end, was little interested. Besides, wherever his travels took him, he spent his spare time in hunting and fishing. He rarely mingled with those of the sporting world, was notoriously shy and secluded and preferred art galleries and books of verse to sporting gossip.

Also, his trainers and sparring partners were rigorously instructed by the manager to keep their tongues away from the slightest hints of ring rottenness.

In every way Stubener intervened between Glendon and the world. He was never even interviewed save in Stubener's presence.

Only once was Glendon approached. It was just prior to his battle with

"It's only con, Pat."

Henderson, and an offer of $100,000 was made to him to throw the fight.

It was made hurriedly, in swift whispers, in a hotel corridor, and it was fortunate for the man that Pat controlled his temper and shouldered past him without reply. He brought the tale of it to Stubener, who said:

"It's only con, Pat. They were trying to josh you." He noted the blue eyes blaze. "And maybe worse than that. If they could have got you to fall for it there might have been a big sensation in the papers that would have finished you. But I doubt it.

"Such things don't happen any more. It's a myth, that's what it is, that has come down from the middle history of the ring. There has been rottenness in the past, but no fighter or manager of reputation would dare anything of the sort today.

"Why, Pat, the men in the game are as clean and straight as those in professional baseball, than which there is nothing cleaner or straighter."

And all the while he talked Stubener knew in his heart that the forthcoming fight with Henderson was not to be shorter than twelve rounds—this for the moving pictures—and not longer than the fourteenth round.

And he knew, furthermore, so big were the stakes involved, that Henderson himself was pledged not to last beyond the fourteenth.

And Glendon, never approached again, dismissed the matter from his mind and went out to spend the afternoon in taking color photographs. The camera had become his latest hobby. Loving pictures, yet unable to paint, he had compromised by taking up photography. In his hand baggage was one grip packed with books on the subject, and he spent long hours in the dark room, realizing for himself the various processes.

Never had there been a great fighter who was as aloof from the fighting world as he. Because he had little to say with those he encountered he was called sullen and unsocial, and out of this a newspaper reputation took form that was not an exaggeration so much as it was an entire misconception.

Boiled down, his character in print was that of an ox muscled and dumbly stupid brute, and one callow sporting writer dubbed him the "abysmal brute."

The name stuck. The rest of the fraternity hailed it with delight, and thereafter Glendon's name never appeared in print unconnected with it. Often, in a headline or under a photograph, "The Abysmal Brute," capitalized and without quotation marks, appeared alone.

All the world knew who was this brute. This made him draw into himself closer than ever, while it developed a bitter prejudice against newspaper folk.

Regarding fighting itself, his earlier mild interest grew stronger. The men he now fought were anything but dubs, and victory did not come so easily. They were picked men, experienced ring generals, and each battle was a problem.

There were occasions when he found it impossible to put them out in any designated later round of a fight. Thus with Sulzberger, the gigantic German, try as he would in the eighteenth round, he failed to get him. In the nineteenth it was the same story, and not till the twentieth did he manage to break through the baffling guard and drop him.

Glendon's increasing enjoyment of the game was accompanied by severer and prolonged training. Never dissipating, spending much of his time on hunting trips in the hills, he was practically always in the pink of condition, and, unlike his father, no unfortunate accidents marred his career. He never broke a bone, nor injured so much as a knuckle.

One thing that Stubener noted with secret glee was that his young fighter no longer talked of going permanently back to his mountains when he had won the championship away from Jim Hanford.

The consummation of his career was rapidly approaching. The great champion had even publicly intimated his readiness to take on Glendon as soon as the latter had disposed of the three or four aspirants for the championship who intervened.

In six months Pat managed to put away Kid McGrath and Philadelphia Jack McBride, and there remained only Nat Powers and Tom Cannam. And all would have been well had not a certain society girl gone adventuring into journalism, and had not Stubener agreed to an interview with the woman reporter of the San Francisco Courier-Journal.

Her work was always published over the name of Maud Sangster, which, by the way, was her own name. The Sangsters were a notoriously wealthy family.

The founder, old Jacob Sangster, had packed his blankets and worked as a farm hand in the west. He had discovered an inexhaustible borax deposit in Nevada, and, from hauling it out by mule teams, had built a railroad to do the freighting. Following that he had poured the profits of borax into the purchase of hundreds and thousands of square miles of timber lands in California, Oregon and Washington.

Still later he had combined politics with business, had bought statesmen, judges and machines and become a captain of complicated industry. And after that he had died, full of honor and pessimism, leaving his name a muddy blot for future historians to smudge, and also leaving a matter of a couple of hundreds of millions for his four sons to squabble over.

The legal, industrial and political battles that followed vexed and amused California for a generation and culminated in deadly hatred and unspeaking terms between the four sons.

The youngest, Theodore, in middle life experienced a change of heart, sold out his stock farms and racing stables and plunged into a fight with all the corrupt powers of his native state, including most of its millionaires, in a quixotic attempt to purge it of the infamy which had been implanted by old Jacob Sangster.

Maud Sangster was Theodore's oldest daughter. The Sangster stock uniformly bred fighters among the men and beauties among the women, nor was Maud an exception; also she must have inherited some of the virus of adventure from the Sangster breed, for she had come to womanhood and done a multitude of things of which no woman in her position should have been guilty.

A match in ten thousand, she remained unmarried. She had sojourned in Europe without bringing home a nobleman for spouse and had declined a goodly portion of her own set at home.

She had gone in for outdoor sports, won the tennis championship of the state, kept the society weeklies agog with her unconventionalities, walked from San Mateo to Santa Cruz against time on a wager and once caused a sensation by playing polo in a men's team at a private Burlingame practice game. Incidentally she had gone in for art and maintained a studio in San Francisco's Latin quarter.

All this had been of little moment until her father's reform attack became acute. Passionately independent, never yet having met the man to whom she could gladly submit and bored by those who had aspired, she resented her father's interference with her way of life and put the climax on all her social misdeeds by leaving home and going to work on the Courier-Journal.

Beginning at $20 a week, her salary had swiftly risen to $50. Her work was principally musical, dramatic and art criticism, though she was not above mere journalistic stunts if they promised to be sufficiently interesting.

Thus she scooped the big interview with Morgan at a time when he was being futilely trailed by a dozen New York star journalists, went down to the bottom of the Golden Gate in a diver's suit and flew with Rood, the bird man, when he broke all records of continuous flight by reaching as far as Riverside.

"What do they want to come butting into the game for?"

Now, it must not be imagined that Maud Sangster was a hard bitten amazon. On the contrary, she was a gray eyed, slender young woman of three or four and twenty, of medium stature and possessing uncommonly small hands and feet for an outdoor woman or any other kind of a woman.

Also, far in excess of most outdoor women, she knew how to be daintily feminine.

It was on her own suggestion that she received the editor's commission to interview Pat Glendon. With the exception of having caught a glimpse once of Bob Fitzsimmons in evening dress at the Palace grill, she had never seen a prizefighter in her life.

Nor was she curious to see one—at least, she had not been curious until young Pat Glendon came to San Francisco to train for his fight with Nat Powers. Then his newspaper reputation had aroused her.

Practical Fashion Hints

By Alice Gibson

There is something very chic about a plain, well-cut skirt of mannish serge and a tailored blouse of linen or silk.

No. 7994 is a model that lends itself admirably to serge, cloth or linen; any of the heavier materials may be used to advantage with it.

It is a two-piece design with a shaped girdle, which may be used or omitted as preferred, and just a slight fullness in back, which may be arranged in dart tucks or gathers.

There are several ways of finishing the seams of tailored skirts; the welted seam is perhaps the one most in use. The seam of the skirt is stitched in the regular way, but instead of opening it and pressing it open, it is turned toward the back or the front and stitched flat from the right side.

This skirt may be made in size 24, with 2⅝ yards of 42 inch material.

The pattern is cut in 8 sizes; 22 to 36.

This Is a Perfect Pattern.

Be sure to give right size, passing the tape tightly around the smallest part of the waist and loosely around the widest part of the hips.

It may be obtained by filling out the coupon and enclosing 15 cents in stamps or coin, to the Pattern Department of this paper.

VITAL STATISTICS PROVE INTERESTING

Record of Deaths, Births and Marriages Prepared by Miss Harriet O. Mattison.

There were forty-nine births, eleven marriages and twenty-three deaths in Plainfield during last month, according to figures compiled by Miss Harriet O. Mattison, registrar of vital statistics of the Board of Health, and submitted in her report for the month of February. During the same month last year there were forty-nine births, sixteen marriages and twenty-five deaths in this city. The high cost of living may possibly be responsible for the fact that five fewer marriages were celebrated than occurred in the same month last year, although the number of children born was the same. There were thirty-one boys and eighteen girls received in Plainfield homes last month. Of these forty-five were white and four were colored. Of the couples married during last month seven were white and four colored. Of the twenty-three persons who died nineteen were white and four were colored. Fourteen men died during the past month and nine women.

Five of last months brides were between the ages of 18 and 25 years and four of the bridegrooms were between the ages of 25 and 30 years. Two brides were between the ages of 25 and 30 years, two between the ages of 30 and 35 years, one was between 35 and 40 years of age, one between the age of 40 and 45 years and one was under the age of 18 years. Three of the bridegrooms were between the age of 30 and 35 years, two were between the ages of 40 and 45 years, and two between the ages of 21 and 25 years.

Of those who died in Plainfield during the past month five were between the ages of 50 and 55 years, three were between the ages of 65 and 70 years, one between the ages of 70 and 75 years, and one between the ages of 80 and 85 years. Four infants less than a month old died, one child of less than one year of age, one between the ages of 10 and 15 years, and the other two deaths for the month were those of persons between the ages of 35 and 40 years and 30 and 35 years.

There were, according to the official figures of the Board of Health, 181 couples married in the year 1912. The number of births recorded in Plainfield for that year totalled 499 and during the year the deaths numbered 298. The marriages were at the rate of 8.23 for each one thousand residents of this city and the death rate for that year was 13.55. The birth rate per thousand population was 22.45.

WILL SEEK AFFILIATION OF EPWORTH LEAGUERS

The congress of the local Christian Endeavor Union was held, last night, at the Y. M. C. A. parlors when an extensive discussion was taken up relative to the possibility of having the Epworth Leaguers of this city and Dunellen join the central body of young people's societies in this city. Frank Stewart and Walter I. Firstbrook were finally appointed a committee to confer with the Epworth Leagues of the various Methodist churches relative to the matter.

Another question of importance brought before the meeting was the arranging of a series of weekly meetings at the Plainfield Rescue Mission, an invitation having been received from Superintendent John LaMatty, suggesting that the several societies conduct one meeting a week. The prayer meeting committee of the union will arrange the schedule of services and announce the dates later.

Preliminary plans for May mass meetings were discussed at length. The following committee on nominations were appointed by President Arnold Finkle, who presided: Howard Perry, chairman; Miss Lone Becker, Miss Ella Adams, Miss Marie Hahn and Raymond Burdick. The May mass meeting, the complete details of which are in charge of Russell Doeringer, will be held in the Trinity Reformed church. The annual election of officers will take place at that time.

YOUNG PEOPLE ENJOY STRAWRIDE AND DANCE

An enjoyable strawride party was given Monday evening by a number of young people of this city, the destination being Westfield, where dancing and supper were features of the affair. The party returned home late in the evening. Among those making the trip were the Misses Grace Beeching, Edna Beeching, Elizabeth Stenson, Marion Delaman, Grace LeMatty, Edna Sherwin Jennie DeMott, Erma Enander, Mamie Steiner, and James Manning, Harold Delaman, Lyle Beeching, William Banks, David Weiss, Arthur Briggs, John Darby, Pierson Bailey and Charles Cregar.

THE DAILY PRESS IN BOUND BROOK will be found on sale or delivered to any address every afternoon by Hoagland, Union News Stand at station, and A. Aaron, newsdealer.

FAIL TO ENDORSE TICKET

He advocated leaving the matter entirely within the discretion of the board members and suggested that borough residents patronize Somerset street merchants instead of those on the other side of the brook. He stated that fifty per cent. of those claiming the borough as their home dealt exclusively in Plainfield.

Former Mayor Smalley said in part: "We have a system of fire drills that requires but one and one-half minutes for the clearance of the school, and the school is held in the day time with a man constantly in charge of the fires. Therefore I see no immediate danger along these lines. We have a residential section alone, and we have to depend upon the assessments on the houses and lots for the money we get to carry on municipal affairs. The school taxes are already high and further improvement will produce still higher taxation. The present building has been patched for twenty years, and considerably more patching will probably take place before we are through. The light question is not an essential one."

WILL THERE BE WOMEN SCHOOL CANDIDATES?

Following Discusion at Borough Mass Meting Two May Be Candidates.

Although the members of the North Plainfield Parent-Teacher Association had previously voted not to endorse women candidates for the vacancies to be filled on the borough Board of Education next week, it was the opinion among those who attended the meeting held in the Somerset street school, last night, that women have a right to hold such an office.

There are four vacancies to be filled at the school election next Tuesday night and it now seems probable that at least two of the candidates will be women. It was originally thought best to nominate one candidate of that sex, but after considerable discussion it was decided that with two or more on the board they could accomplish much more. No candidates were endorsed at the meeting, but they will be nominated at the election next Tuesday night.

Women were conspicuous in the assemblage last night and took an active interest in the various discussions in which their husbands presented their views. Many of the men expressed themselves as favorable to the proposition of having women on the board.

Among the arguments offered in favor of the election of women was the fact that men do not have time to personally investigate the conditions that exist in the classrooms, under the present conditions.

Although women are allowed to hold office on the board under the New Jersey school law, they are only permitted to cast a ballot for the election of members of the body when they are property owners. In the event of the nomination of two candidates the women will have to devote their efforts to campaigning among the men. Four members of the board retire this season, three terms having expired and a fourth having moved to Philadelphia. The ones remaining in the borough have expressed a desire not to be re-elected.

"Synagogue" will be the subject of study at the weekly meeting of the Plainfield Graded Union of Sunday school teachers at the Y. W. C. A. Monday afternoon at the usual hour. Mrs. J. A. Powlison will be in charge.

THE DAILY PRESS IN SOMERVILLE will be found on sale or delivered to any address every afternoon after 4:30 by Jacob Gernert, the Main stret newsdealer and stationer.

SAFETY FIRST

In making a new banking connection, safety is the first consideration. The State Trust Company has a capital of One Hundred Thousand Dollars and a surplus of more than Fifty Thousand Dollars which constitutes a safety fund of approximately one to four in relation to deposits. In addition to this strong position, its funds are so invested that a large proportion of its assets can be converted into cash in twenty-four hours.

These facts are commended to the consideration of anyone contemplating a banking connection or a change in arrangements already existing.

TO TEST VALIDITY OF POVERTY VOW

Argument Today on Right of Benedictine Order to Monk's Property.

MILLIONS ARE INVOLVED

Against the Constitution to Enforce the Rules of the Order It Is Said—Catholics Are Very Much Interested.

The validity of the "Vow of Poverty" of the Benedictine monks, whereby they declare that personal ownership is a vice and bind themselves to hand over all their property to the Abbot, will be argued in Washington, today, before the United States Supreme Court. The question at issue is whether the heirs-at-law of a monk may recover his property or whether the oath may be enforced so as to deprive monks of their testamentary rights.

Catholics of prominence in Plainfield are interested in the decision which will affect not only the Benedictine Order, but a large number of religious orders in the United States. Millions of dollars are involved.

The case to be decided related to the estate of Father Augustine Worth, a Bavarian, who for ten years was a member of the Order of St. Benedict of New Jersey, and was in their monastry in Newark. In 1897 he quarreled with the order and quit it to become a secular priest at Springfield, Minn. He died in 1907, having an estate valued at $10,000, which he acquired chiefly by royalties on books of which he was the author.

The heirs-at-law, a brother, a nephew and a niece, all living in Nebraska City, started a suit against Benziger Brothers, publishers, for Father Augustine, for an accounting. An equity defense was set up, in which it was asserted that the Benedictine Order of New Jersey were the true owners of the property, by reason of the "Vow of Poverty," which Father Augustine took when he became a monk. A Federal judge then issued an injunction restraining the heirs from an action at law. The "Vow of Poverty" is based upon a regulation of the Benedictine, which reads:

"The vice of personal ownership must, above all things, be cut off in the monastry by its very root, so that no one may presume to give or receive anything without the command of the abbot, since monks are allowed to have neither their bodies nor their will in their own power.

"Everything that is necessary, whatever they must look for from the father of the monastry, and let it not be allowed for any one to have anything which the abbot does not give or permit him to have."

The order then brought suit to compel the administrator to hand over the estate on the ground that by the poverty vow, Father Augusten had given all his possessions to his monastery. The heirs set up the defense that the principles of the vow were unenforcible in the United States, and that the vow was invalid, because it was inconsistent with the fundamental principles of American institutions, as expressed in the Constitution. The courts decided in favor of the order.

The heirs took an appeal to the Eighth United States Court of Appeals, who reversed the decision of the lower court. It held that the vow of poverty not only "binds the member in physical and mentral servitude to the other for life or until the head of the Church shall see fit to absolve him from its obligation, but also surrenders all control of his will to the order."

"Such an agreement," it continues, "is no more enforcible, in the civil courts at least, than would be an agreement by one to surrender or forfeit to another his life. In this country it is the inherant and natural right of every person to acquire and hold property in his own right, and the State is interested in preserving the liberties as well as the lives of its members."

The New Jersey monastery obtained a writ of certiorari, which is to be argued in Washington today.

MARTINE IS MADE CHAIRMAN OF EXPOSITIONS COMMITTEE

Washington, March 10—In the realignment of committee assignments consequent on the death of Senator Bacon, of Georgia, Senator Martine, of New Jersey, has been named by the Vice-President to the chairmanship of the industrial exposition committee.

The Senator will give up his chairmanship on the coast defenses committee, to keep the committee assignment balance even.

MISS MELVIN TO RETIRE TEMPORARILY

Will Be Succeeded by Her Mother as Supervisor of Recreation Activities.

Miss Anne Melvin, who has been supervisor of the activities of the Public Recreation Committee, is compelled to give up her work entirely for possibly two or three months and take a complete rest, owing to the injury to her leg. Soon after coming to Plainfield, Miss Melvin stumbled and fell while leaving the High School. An investigation showed a fracture and since that time she has been under the care of local physicians. The injury has not been improving as rapidly as hoped for, and a specialist was summoned. He recommends complete rest.

These facts were learned at the monthly meeting of the Recreation Committee, last night, and the committee then decided to appoint Miss Melvin's mother, Mrs. Melvin, of Baltimore, who has been visiting here for several months, as acting supervisor until the daughter can again take up her work. Mrs. Melvin is acquainted with the work, and enjoys the distinction of being New Jersey's first policewoman, having served in that capacity at Asbury Park last summer.

The question of asking the city for an appropriation of $1,500 for the coming year was discussed and representatives of the committee will attend a meeting of the councilmanic finance committee tomorrow night, to explain the details of the work. The annual meeting of the committee will be held in April and Champlain L. Riley, Mrs. Stephen H. Voorhees and Samuel Rothberg were named as a nominating committee to present a list of officers to be voted upon at that time. Other business of the evening was of a routine character.

DEMOCRATIC CLUB GIVING AWAY SEEDS

Senator Martine Sends on Big Consignment With Political Tendencies.

United States Senator James E. Martine has forwarded to the Plainfield Democratic Club for distribution, a carload of garden seeds, especially selected for this section by the Department of Agriculture.

All amateur gardeners wishing to take a chance are asked to notify the chairman of the city committee, John "W." Caulfield, and sample packages will be sent them.

The consignment includes all of the comman garden variety of vegetables, and any new ones. Mr. Caulfield warmly recommends a postoffice parsnip, which, if properly cultivated, makes good candidate food. There is a also a Wilson watermelon, which is inclined to be slow in moving along if held by Mexicans, but is worth bothering with for temperament and size. Other varieties mentioned are a Bryan beet,, slated to thrive well if sprinkled occasionally with grape juice, which will stand for a lot of rough usage before maturity, and an income parsley, quite large and corpulent, but hard to collect. The seeds are going fast so send your names in early.

ROYAL ARCANUMITES TO HOLD A RALLY AT RAHWAY

Members of Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum, will go to Rahway tonight to attend the big rally and initiation of the councils of the order of Union, Middlesex and Somerset counties. The local lodge men will assemble at their headquarters at 7:30 tonight and will make the trip in a body. Grand Regent Charles H. Haring, of Elizabeth, will be chairman of the rally tonight.

Supreme Regent Frank B. Wickersham, of Harrisburg, Pa., wil be the speaker. Indications are, it was said today, that tonight's gathering will outrival the large assemblage which was held by Royal Arcanumites last November, in Westfield. The mysteries of the order are to be exemplified by the degree team of Bayonne Council, No. 695, R. A. This is said to be the banner team of the State. The team has worked in Plainfield at initiation ceremonies and its appearance called for much favorable comment.

DANCING CLASS RESUMED.

TELEPHONES FAST BEING REPAIRED

Linemen Have Put 1,700 Phones in Working Order Since the Storm.

600 PHONES STILL OUT

Long Distance Lines in Operation But Many Long Circuits Will Have to Be Run in Local Field—Telegraph Lines Idle.

While 1,700 out of approximately 2,300 telephones which were put out of commission by the big storm of a week ago in the Plainfield district, which includes Plainfield, Somerville and Bound Brook, have been put in working order, some 600 instruments will not have service restored for some time yet. The delay is necessitated through the need of running long circuits by the linemen in many localities. Everything possible is being done by the local telephone company officials to restore service to all its subscribers and in the shortest possible time. Two hundred linemen and construction men are working today in the Plainfield district. The task of replacing wires and of repairing wrecked lines is said to be an almost superhuman one. Many of the telephone repair gangs have been working for twenty hours at a stretch. Some of the officials of the company, and members of the commercial department of the local office, have climbed poles in this city and helped to restore service to subscribers. All of the repair work has been done under difficulties in the more remote sections of the Plainfield district, it is said.

In commenting upon the situation today one of the telephone company officials said that one thing which had made the repair work so hard outside of Plainfield proper was the fact that employes of the telephone company, because of the deep snow, were at times obliged to become street cleaners. For miles paths have had to be shoveled so as to allow the linemen access to the poles and wires that were down. Damage done telephone and telegraph lines hereabouts by the recent great storm was far greater than any previous storm havoc. In many sections of the State conditions as regards telephone and telegraph service are still chaotic.

Before the last storm brought damage and devastation to the wires the New Jersey division of the telephone company claimed the world's record for speed in repairing faults on the line. Such a degree of celerity had been reached that it was said to have averaged only one hour and twenty minutes from the time that trouble was reported by a subscriber until his line was again in order and working smoothly. This figure is said to have been less than one-third of the average elapsed time two years ago. The various repair gangs of the New Jersey division have been brought to a high state of efficiency. In all New Jersey there were, it is estimated, approximately 19,000 telephones put out of commission by the last storm. That the residents of Plainfield and the immediate vicinity to as large a number as 1,700 have service on their 'phones and are again in touch with "the voice that follows the wire," is regarded by telephone officials as being little short of miraculous. Such a result has been accomplished by the augmentation of the regular force of repair men by large gangs from other States. Workmen who are experts in line construction and repair work of all sorts have been rushed to the aid of New Jersey lines from every section of the east.

In some parts of this State it will be weeks still before complete telephone service is restored. These however, are, for the most part, isolated cases where it is more a question of reconstruction than one of repairing. There are also said to be some points where telephone wires are crossed with electric light wires and, not being designed to carry heavy currents, require the replacement of entire cables. This necessitates considerable detail.

Creditable work on the part of the local telephone company's workmen has resulted in restoring the long distance circuits to working order. The wire chief, together with his assistants, has many times worked all night on the repairs to the long distance lines.

The Western Union Telegraph Company has a force of 300 men working on its lines between Jersey City and Plainfield. Much of the work is rebuilding rather than repairing. Manager Davis, of the local office, said today that conditions so far as telegraphic service is concerned in Plainfield were not a bit better than they were the day following the storm. The messages handled are sent to New York via Newark, the company having a direct and undamaged line from that city across the river.

THIEVES GET $61 FROM CASH REGISTER

Thieves entered the shoe store owned by Kenneth Stuart on West Front street sometime during the early hours of last night and stole $61 in cash from a register in the store. Entrance was gained through a back window and the police have no clue as to who committed the act.

Mr. Stuart is of the opinion that the place was robbed about 10 o'clock. The thieves were after money and left everything else untouched. This is one of the numerous places in the business section that have been entered during the past two weeks by burglars who were after money and in a majority of cases nothing else has been taken. It is the belief of those interested in the cases that the robberies are the work of those familiar with the town, possibly boys.

BISHOP COURTNEY TO PREACH AT HOLY CROSS

The Rt. Rev. Frederick Courtney D. D., D. C. L., former Bishop of New York will preach at the Holy Cross church, tonight, at 7:45 o'clock. This distinguished clergyman has been a prominent figure in the Episcopal church for many years, and doubtless there will be a large number of people present to hear him preach tonight. Rev. C. H. Kues, rector of the church, cordially invites the public.

Bishop Courtney was born in Plymouth, Eng., was educated at King's College, London. Racine College honored him with the degree of doctor of divinity, and throughout his career in this country had held many important charges, including one at St. Thomas' church, New York; St. James', in Chicago; St. Paul's, Boston. He was Bishop of Nova Scotia, 1888-1904.

PROGRESSIVE MERCHANT ERECTS HANDSOME SIGN

Hyman Adelberg, the well-known dealer in clothing for men, women and children, of this city, has just placed a large and handsome electric sign in front of his store at 139 East Front street. The sign bears the name "Adelbergs," the letters being perpendicular, and at the bottom, in red light, is seen the words "Charge accounts opened." The sign is said to be one of the finest in Plainfield. The store windows have been handsomely decorated in pale blue plush, with blue and white silk cording to match and garnet is used as a trim at the sides of the large show windows. The display of clothing in both windows of the Adelberg store is unusually pleasing. Mr. Adelberg is one of Plainfield's most progressive merchants and has been in business here for about nine years.

JUDGE ROBERT CAREY TO SPEAK AT "PEOPLE'S FORUM"

Judge Robert Carey, of Hudson County, has been secured as the speaker for the next meeting of the 'People's Forum,' to be held at the Washington School, on Tuesday night at 8 o'clock. He will speak on a popular subject. As Judge Carey is widely known throughout the State there will probably be a large numbers of people present to hear this interesting speaker.

A SPECIAL MEETING.

The Parent-Teacher Association of the North Plainfield schools will hold a special meeting in the High School building next Saturday afternoon. This meeting was called to act on a motion that was made at the borough meeting that the association select two women that are willing to be candidates for the board of trustees.

DUNBAR'S CLUB PROGRAM.

An athletic meet, of the indoor variety, will be held for the benefit of the members of the Dunbar Social and Educational Club, in the Washington School Auditorium, tomorrow night. Many novelties are promised in the events programmed and dancing will follow.

DEAL IS CLOSED FOR DARLING FARM

Joint Sewage Commission Authorizes Purchase of Land for Disposal Works.

READY TO SIGN PAPERS

Common Council Meets Tonight to Plan Bond Issue—Construction Engineer to be Selected at Next Meeting of Commission.

Formal authorization for the purchase of the Darling farm of 90 acres as a site for the sewage disposal beds was made by the joint sewer commission of Plainfield, North Plainfield and Dunellen, at its meeting held last night. Either today or tomorrow a partial payment will be paid John Darling, the owner of the farm tract, to bind the bargain, and a contract to purchase will at the same time be entered into. Payment of the balance of the $36,000 will, it is said, be made at the convenience of the interested parties. There is no need, nor disposition on the part of the three municipalities interested, to delay the payment of the balance which will permit of title being taken to the farm in question.

All of the legal details and formalities attendant upon the execution of the contract of sale and purchase will be supervised and looked after by the law firm of Lindabury, Depue & Faulks, of Newark, the legal advisers of the joint sewer commission. It was this firm that gave the opinion some days since that the Darling farm could be acquired by the joint sewer commission, at private sale, without any fear of distressing legal complications arising and resulting from such purchase. Vexatious delays and a not inconsiderable expenditure of money in legal fees and in advertising, would, it is believed, have resulted had the Darling farm been sought by the three municipalities interested through the bringing of condemnation proceedings.

This fact has led many of those men who are vitally interested in the proposed big trunk sewer and disposal beds project to believe that the price of $36,000, which is to be paid for the 90 acres of farm land, and a part of which is swampy, and is at times under water is not particularly excessive.

At tonight's meeting of the Common Council of Plainfield steps will in all likelihood be taken to authorize the issuance of bonds to a sufficient amount to defray Plainfield's cost of the sewer improvement. North Plainfield has already arranged to sell its issue of bonds, it is said. Plainfield, North Plainfield and Dunellen will each dispose of their respective bond issues for the sewer project separately. The bonds will be offered for sale in the open market and an opportunity will thus be afforded each municipality to sell them as advantageously as possible.

Once selection has been made of a supervising engineer to take charge *of the installation of the sewage dis*posal beds and the work of building the proposed big pipe line, there will be no further delay in the projected improvement. The construction of the pipe line, with all of the excavation that will be necessary, will give employment to many laborers. Many of the unemployed in Plainfield and vicinity will be given a chance to work, if they desire such employment, and at the usual wages paid for that class of work.

It is believed that the estimated cost of $300,000 for the sewer will be more than sufficient to cover all necessary expenditures.

BIBLE CLASS BANQUET TO BE HELD APRIL 2

Mrs. Lewis Matlack's Bible class of young women met last night at the home of Miss Lillian Teeter, of Clinton avenue. Miss Ethel Webster, class president, was in charge of the meeting. Plans were discussed for purchasing either class rings or pins, but no decision was reached, but a committee was appointed to look into the matter.

The date for the annual banquet of the class was set for Thursday night, April 2, in the Sunday-school room of the church. Following last night's meeting there was a social time and refreshments were served by the hostess.

TO ADDRESS Y.M.C.A. DIRECTORS

Secretary Herbert E. Parker, of the Young Men's Christian Association, has accepted an invitation to speak to the directors of the Elizabeth Y. M. C. A., next Thursday evening, on "Making the Motion Picture an Ally to the Y. M. C. A." The Elizabeth directors are considering the installation of equipment and the promotion of educational motion picture exhibition similar to those given by the local Y. M. C. A. during the past three years.

ENGINE STALLED ON AN ICY SLOPE

No Chains on Front Wheels Causes Big Truck to Swing off the Road.

While trying to negotiate the Belvidere avenue hill shortly after 9 o'clock this morning, "Imperator," the new auto engine, became stalled a short distance from the summit and required a full hour to be extricated. The big engine was equipped with chains on the rear wheels, but the front ones were unprotected. When near the top the steering wheels skidded and were forced to the gutter on one side by the pushing force from the rear wheels.

A truck belonging to the Public Service Corporation was attached to the stalled apparatus by means of a long rope, but the pulling devise broke with the strain. At this time Phillip Jahn, a contractor, happened along and offered a barrel of sand and a number of men for the work. The men set to work to dig out a footing for the wheels and discovered ice of flint hardness to the depth of six inches. Sand and bricks laid over the top of this covering formed a bed upon which the wheels got a grip and the engine was soon piloted to the top of the hill. Chief Doane and those in charge of the fire fighting auto secured emergency chains for the front wheels of the apparatus, this morning, and not further trouble is anticipated along this line.

The fire was located in a barrel of rubbish in the basement of the home of W. W. Coriell, at 744 Belvidere avenue, and was put out with chemicals.

JUNIOR SUFFRAGE LEAGUE IS FORMED

Young People Organize to Assist in the Cause of Equal Rights.

The Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield has taken another step in the interest of its cause through the formation of a Junior Equal Suffrage League at a meeting held yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Bruce Lachlan, of Park avenue. A nominating ballot was taken and the names of officers for the league will be presented for election at the next meeting to be held Friday afternoon, March 20, at 3 o'clock in the public library.

A committee was appointed to draw up a constitution and by-laws which will be voted on at the next meeting. In order that the meeting shall not result in "all work and no play' a short program has been arranged. Mrs. Maxwell Perkins will read the "Anti-Suffrage Monologue," beginning at 3 o'clock sharp, and those who are acquainted with the delightful humor of the monologue anticipate a treat. All the young women in the city are invited to attend either as guests or members of the league.

DUNELLEN METHODISTS CALL REV. THOMAS CLARK

The official members of the Methodist church, Dunellen, have extended a unanimous call to Rev. Thomas J. Clark, of Midvale, to become pastor of the church as successor to Rev. W. A. Knox, who is to leave the charge this year. Greatly to the satisfaction of the congregation, Mr. Clark has accepted the call with the understanding that he will assume the pastroate with the concurrence of Bishop Wilson, who is to preside at the Newark Conference next week.

Mr. Clark has been doing a good work at Midvale, where he is said to be highly esteemed. During his pastorate at Dunellen, Mr. Knox has also accomplished much and has worked earnestly and faithfully for the success of the church.

ELKS ARRANGING RECEPTION.

At last night's meeting of Plainfield Lodge, B. P. O. E., a motion was passed to appoint a committee of three to arrange for a reception and dance to formally open the new club house on Watchung avenue. The affair will be held directly after Lent. The committee will be named soon by Exalted Ruler Frank H. Smith and will co-operate with the standing entertainment committee. At last night's meeting several new members were elected.

—Owing to a drop in the wholesale market, Neuman Brothers announce a further reduction in the butter market. Rockdale print at 37c lb, fancy creamery at 36c, Elgin creamery at 34c lb are among the attractive offers at the Watchung avenue market.—Adv. ***

POISON PEN CASE CAUSES DISORDER

Wild Scenes in Court Room as Witnesses Are Examined For the Defense.

MRS. POLLARD CHEERED

Defendant Gained Many Points During the Morning—Effort to Prove that the Ten-page Letter Was Not Written on Her Typewriter.

Wild scenes of disorder featured the morning's proceedings in the Poison Pen trial in Elizabeth, today, the society and church folk that crowded the courtroom breaking into thunderous applause as each point was gained in favor of the defense. Judge James C. Connolly kept his gavel banging on the desk for order during the forenoon hours and so severe was the strain that the head of the gavel snapped off. Mrs. Nelson L. Pollard, the alleged writer of the anonymous scurrilous letters sat calmly at the right of the minister who has been ever at her side and was unmoved by the wild demonstrations.

Miss Minnie Sohler, the servant girl, again took the stand, this morning, and her testimony was in accord with the contention of the defense that personal animosity among the members of the Jones family, the State's witnesses, was at the bottom of the trouble. Although a witness for the defense, the servant girl said that Mrs. Thomas G. Jones, a sister-in-law of Mrs. Charles Jones, the central figure in the State's case, frequently visited the Pollard home to spy on her relative. She testified that Mrs. Ernest Jones, another sister-in-law would sneak in the back door of the Pollard home so that the Jones family next door would not know that she was there and use Mrs. Pollard's typewriter which stood in the library.

Alfred A. Stein, county prosecutor, who is trying the case for the State, and Samuel L. Schleimer, counsel for the defense, nearly came to blows in the courtroom this morning. Stein and Schleimer engaged in a number of wordy fracasses and the respective factions in the spectators' seats howled with glee as one side gained a point or relinguished a claim. Mrs. Pollard's case is growing stronger as it progresses, and it was the consensus of opinion among the experts who attended this morning's hearing that she would be freed of the charge.

Though disappointed because Mrs. Pollard did not take the stand this morning, the crowd found enough that was sensational in the technical testimony to keep it occupied. It is rumored that several new experts will be called by Counsellor Schleimer in his efforts to prove that his client did not write the ten-page calumnious letter. Several minor points were gained by the defense when several persons appeared briefly to testify to the character of the witnesses.

MISS LAFOLLETTE WILL SPEAK HERE ON MARCH 19

A MAN'S GAME WHICH DELIGHTS WOMEN AND CHILDREN

By special arrangement with the publisher, the Daily Press will distribute to its readers the new, up-to-date and interesting game known as

CHANCE BASEBALL.

The game is a scientific arrangement of nearly fifty different plays in baseball. Practically every play arising in the National game including the famous "Squeeze Play" of the Champion Athletics, and the spectacular "Double Steal" of the New York Giants. It is so simple that a person with only a smattering of baseball knowledge can play it and the person who knows nothing about baseball can learn the game in a short time and in a practical manner.

THE WAY IT WORKS.

Walter Johnson is pitching. Ty Cobb at the bat. Ty hits for a single. Watch him steal second. Then down to third on a sacrifice. Now what do you think of that "dub?" He's out napping at third. The plays are all there and you're sure to make 'em.

GET IN THE GAME.

Take one home. Teach your wife and avoid some foolish and embarrassing questions at the Polo Grounds next summer.

MAKE A HIT

With the folks by obtaining one. You'll make an error if you don't. It is as much fun for the grown-ups as it is for the youngsters. Get a grand stand seat for the price of a score-card and make rooters out of the entire family.

To get this miniature baseball game, which is superior to all others that have ever been offered, clip the coupon below and bring it to the Daily Press office, with 8 cents in stamps or money. If you want it mailed, add two cents more.

PLAINFIELD PRESS COMPANY.

FIELDER MEETS WITH OPPOSITION

Six Democratic Assemblymen Bolt Caucus.

DIFFERENCES OF OPINION

Plan to Turn It Into a Binding Caucus to Pledge Support on Revenue Raising Measures Causes Bitter Discussion—House Passes Inheritance Tax Bill by 39 to 13 Vote.

Trenton, N. J., March 12.—Governor Fielder encountered the first serious opposition during his administration from members of his own party when six Democratic assemblymen bolted a conference in the executive chamber when it was proposed to turn it into a caucus.

The conference was called by the governor with a view of explaining to the assemblymen the necessity for some definite plan of action regarding the various measures now pending in order to avert a direct state tax, which has seemed imminent.

The conference proceeded smoothly enough notwithstanding some differences of opinion among the members until it was proposed to turn it into a binding caucus to pledge the members to support the administration's revenue raising measures.

This suggestion by Leader Branegan provoked some bitter discussion, at the close of which Assemblymen Foley, Fisk, Carhart, McDermott, Brackner and Rowe left the caucus. Mr. Foley declared before doing so that the days of caucuses had passed and that neither the governor, Mr. Branegan or any other man in the state could control him by such means.

Notwithstanding this flareup on the part of the associates, the twenty-eight assemblymen remaining went ahead with the caucus and pledged their support to the legislation designed to raise the license fees for automobiles, imposing a direct inheritance tax and the taxation of bank stock under the Pierce bill passed in the senate.

At the close of the conference Gov*ernor Fielder said he told the house* members he thought it was their duty to give to the state the kind of legislation that was needed at this time.

The first results of the caucus became apparent when the house passed the direct inheritance tax bill by a vote of 39 to 13. All the Democrats voted for the measure, thirteen Republicans under the leadership of Mr. Scovel of Camden joining them. Minority Leader Richards of Atlantic tried to line up the Republicans against the bill and drew fire from Mr. Scovel, who assailed him for trying to make a party issue of the bill. This break between the minority leader and Mr. Scovel had been anticipated for some time.

POWDER MILL BLOWS UP.

One Killed When Du Pont Nitroglycerin House Lets Go.

Paterson, N. J., March 12.—One man was blown to atoms and six other workmen in the plant of the E. I. Du Pont de Nemours Powder company at Haskell, fourteen miles west of here, had narrow escapes when the nitroglycerin house was destroyed by a terrific explosion. The shock was felt for three or four miles.

Families of workmen living near the plant were not allowed to enter the grounds by the superintendent, who told them that nobody had been hurt.

Officials in charge of the plant refused to give out the name of the man killed, but County Physician Robert R. Armstrong of Passaic, who was notified by a representative of the concern, learned his name was Archibald Torrance of Haskell.

BISHOP SCARBOROUGH ILL.

Aged Bishop of New Jersey In Critical State With Pneumonia.

Trenton, N. J., March 12.—The Right Rev. John Scarborough, Protestant Episcopal bishop of New Jersey, is critically ill at his home on Greenwood avenue with pleuro pneumonia contracted during the recent snow storm.

Physicians at once diagnosed his case as pleuro pneumonia, a diagnosis which revealed that the aged bishop was in a critical condition and perhaps might not recover. Bishop Scarborough is more than seventy years of age and has been bishop of New Jersey for several years.

MRS. CHARLES F. JONES.

Recipient of the "Poison Pen" Letter and Her Son.

Scores of fashionably gowned women, prominent in social and church circles of Elizabeth, N. J., crowded the county courtroom in that city as the case against Mrs. Anna J. Pollard, accused of sending the "poison typewriter" letters, drew to a close. The last witness for the prosecution was Thomas Carey, a private detec*tive employed by Dr. Charles F. Jones,* whose wife received the letters.

MAID AIDS MISTRESS IN "POISON PEN" CASE

Says Accuser's Sister-in-law Used Typewriter.

Elizabeth, N. J., March 12.—The last witness for the state against Mrs. Nelson L. Pollard, the alleged author of scurrilous letters to her next door neighbor, Mrs. Charles F. Jones, swore that Mrs. Thomas G. Jones, the complaining witness' sister-in-law, with whom she was "on the outs" for a long time, had "sneaked in by the back door" of the Pollard house and used Mrs. Pollard's typewriter several times. This witness was Miss Minnie Sohler, who was Mrs. Pollard's maid when the letters are supposed to have been written.

Her testimony, with Mrs. Pollard's counsel's statement to the jury at the opening of the defense that he would prove there was a conspiracy against the defendant, the result of a criminal, willful, diseased or jealous mind, furnished two of the three sensations for the crowd of prominent Elizabeth folk who filled the courtroom. The other was Deputy Sheriff Thomas L. Carey's declaration that Dr. Harrison K. Dunn, Mrs. Pollard's brother, had offered him a bribe not to take her to police headquarters when he arrested her on May 31 last year. This was denied later by Dr. Dunn.

Miss Sohler was called by Prosecutor Stein apparently just to prove that Mrs. Pollard owned a typewriter. He went no further with her, but Samuel Schleimer, Mrs. Pollard's counsel, got her to admit on cross examination that she had seen many people use it. The maid said any one seemed to have the right to use it and did so.

"I saw Mr. Rittenhouse use it," she said and added, in answer to other questions: "Mrs. Tom Jones was in the room where the typewriter was very often. I saw her sitting at it and working it without instructions once or twice."

Mrs. Tom Jones was asked to stand up in the courtroom, and Miss Sohler identified her as the woman who had used Mrs. Pollard's machine.

SHAKEUP IN STATE BOARD.

Martin I. Decker Is Out as Public Service Chairman.

Albany, March 12.—Martin I. Decker resigned as chairman of the up state public service commission, and Governor Glynn immediately designated Seymour Van Santvoord of Troy, the new public service commissioner, as chairman. Mr. Decker does not resign from the commission. His term as a member expires next February.

The commission today declined to accept the offer of $200,000 from the New York Telephone company to meet the expenses of a physical valuation of the properties of the company with a view of a rearrangement of telephone tolls in New York city. The commission believes that this offer is an unlawful one and that in any event it would be unwise for the commission to accept private funds.

BRYAN ON THE ROAD AGAIN.

Satisfied With Mexican Outlook, He Ventures Into Lecture Field.

Washington, March 12.—Secretary Bryan received a score of dispatches from consular and diplomatic agents along the border and in Mexico proper. So much improved did the secretary of state consider the entire Mexican situation that he took another flier into the lecture field. He left here for Annapolis, where he will address a joint session of the Maryland legislature on the initiative and referendum.

FREE COLLEGE COURSE FOR YOUR GIRL?

This is a question which ought to be of keen interest to every woman, whether she be mother, guardian, friend or teacher of a young girl. To every woman who realizes that in the little girl we have the potential mother of the race and that the level to which the future of the race will attain, depends also upon the same little girl, this question is not only one of interest, but one of paramount importance.

It is estimated that this year 2,400 pupils will be graduated from the high schools of our State. Of this number two-thirds will be girls. What is to be their future? Mothers' Probably for most of them, I hope eventually for all of them. In the meantime, what are they likely to do? At the present time eighty per cent. of the teachers in New Jersey are women. For these the State provides no education other than that of the normal schools. Yet in order to teach most subjects in the majority of the high schools one is required to have had a full college course. Such a course as now obtainable in the privately endowed colleges of our own and neighboring States is estimated to cost at least $450 annually. It is needless to add that this cost makes a college training prohibitive to many of the best and the brightest girl students who leave our free high schools every year.

Moreover there is a great demand just now for vocational grammar and high schools, that our children may go out into the world equipped not only with learning, but also with a means of livelihood. In many of the western States there are already established such technical and domestic economy high schools. If we wish to offer similar opportunities to our children, where are we to find teachers properly equipped for the work. The state college has the essential facilities for such training, which should be placed at the service of all who desire to become teachers in vocational schools.

Statistics of the Intercollegiate Bureau of Occupation show, that following the modern trend for skilled labor, there has been a constantly increasing demand for girls with a college education to fill positions as court stenographers, private secretaries, etc. Moreover the field of occupation for women is broadening day by day and every thinking woman who hopes to enter any profession, trade, science or art, knows that she needs education and all the education she can get in order to be able to compete with present day conditions.

This fact is also true in the great field of public philanthropic and charitable work. All social workers realize that if any inroads are to be made against existing social evils it is only by the efforts of men and women who combine the forces of a trained mind with the desire to help in the general social uplift. Yet you all know that many of our mothers, our teachers, our charitable workers come from that class of society where training in a private college is entirely out of the question. What these women educated by the State to a high point of efficiency, might become; what they might do for their families or for their State we will never know or we, in New Jersey, have not provided the means for their training.

But what of the other States in the Union? What are they doing for their women of today and the coming woman of tomorrow? Just this: in every State of the Union, except in Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and New Jersey there are either separate state colleges for women students or co-educational state universities which offer the same courses to women that are offered to men. These colleges or universities stand in direct connection with the high schools of the States. They begin where the high schools end and thus complete for both sexes the thorough education which the States provide. Moreover it is a fact attested by the presidents of the co-educational colleges that the women, who form only an average about one-quarter of the entire student body, compare most favorably with the men, as a rule averaging higher in scholarship.

In New Jersey we have no State college for women which bears the same relation to the free high schools that the high schools bear to the free grammar schools. But since 1864 the State Agricultural College connected with Rutgers College at New Brunswick, has stood in this relation to the male graduates of our high schools and has received money from both the Federal and the State governments for this purpose.

In 1862 Congress passed what is known as the Morrill Land-Grant Act, by which each State and Territory under certain conditions received a gift of public land, the proceeds from the sale of which were to be kept as a perpetual fund in trust by the State, and the interest from which was to be used to maintain at least one college, "where"—in the words of the grant—"the leading object shall be to teach such branches of learning as are related to agriculture and the mechanic arts, without excluding other scientific and classical studies." This Federal grant of 1862 produced $116,000 for New Jersey which sum is held as a fund by the State and the interest, $5,800, is paid annually by the State to Rutgers College.

Furthermore by the second Morrill Act of 1890 and the Nelson Amendment of 1907, each State and Territory now receives the sum of $50,000 annually from the Federal government for the maintenance of the colleges established under the Act of 1862. In some States this amount is divided between two institutions, but in New Jersey the entire amount goes to one college. Moreover, as the State agricultural experiment station is also connected with Rutgers College, the latter receives an additional $30,000 annually for its maintenance, making $80,000 in all received by the State college from the Federal government.

During the past year, ending June 1912, Rutgers College has also received State appropriations to the amount of $65,612 for current expenses, which amount does not include a special additional appropriation for a new building to be erected soon, which it is estimated will cost $100,000.

Now then, in the majority of the States where colleges exist as a result of the above-mentioned Act of 1862, and which likewise receive funds from the State and from the Federal government for their maintenance, the State college is considered as an integral part of the great free public school system, offered by the State to its youth, and all courses, literary and scientific as well as agricultural, are open to both the young women and the young men of the State alike; in the same way as the grammar and high schools are open to all children irrespective of sex.

Considering all the above facts, the New Jersey State Federation of Women's Clubs feels that it is only just and right that the girl graduates of our high schools desiring further education should receive the same consideration from the State as at present is accorded the boy graduates. At the same time the federation realizes that the great western State colleges did not start in the almost perfect form in which many of them exist today. On the contrary they have been the result of growth due to the active interest taken in them by the citizens of the various States. Neither have they been able to develop by means of State and Federal aid alone. Each college has had to have recourse to private donations as well, many buildings being erected through the generosity of individual friends or by funds raised through the hard work and enthusiasm of interested citizens.

For example, the Student Building of Indiana University was built at a cost of $100,000 from funds contributed half by the students and friends of the university and half by John D. Rockefeller. Likewise the erection of Hill Auditorium of the University of Michigan was the re*sult of the $200,000 bequest from* the late Regent Arthur Hill, together with $75,000 raised by the university itself. So, also, the new dormitory for women students at Cornell, the State university of New York, has been made possible only by the gift of two generous donors; that of Emerson McMillan of $20,000 and that of Mrs. Russell Sage of $300,000. Similar facts could be cited of every State university in the country. And those colleges have been the most successful and the most progressive in which the people of the State have taken great pride and for which they have worked to obtain donations and to secure good legislation.

A committee from the federation has therefore been appointed to see what can be done in our State. President Demarest, of Rutgers, has been consulted and has expressed himself in favor of giving full academic, scientific and agricultural courses to women, should there be a demand for such, in a State college which shall not in any sense be co-educational but which shall be affiliated with Rutgers under an arrangement similar to that which now exists between Barnard and Columbia. In such an affiliated college the women would be instructed by the same faculty and have the use of the same library, museum, laboratories, college farm, etc., which are at present at the disposal of the young men of our State. But instruction would be given in an entirely separate building, which would be used as both recitation hall and dormitory for women students. It is estimated that such a building erected in the vicinity of Rutgers campus would cost approximately $100,000. If we, the women of New Jersey, will raise this sum and present it for a woman's building, there is every reason to believe that the Legislature of New Jersey would equip it and thereafter maintain full collegiate courses for women as an integral part of our free public school system. And we will have done something for the coming women of our State which will last for all time.

As chairman of the committee on the State college I first presented this project to the College Club of Jersey City. In response to my appeal a resolution was adopted by that club to actively support it by inaugurating a popular one-dollar subscription fund; such resolution to be brought before as many women in the State as possible and the proceeds to be put toward the woman's building at Rutgers.

The support of each individual woman is therefore earnestly desired in this great undertaking to advance New Jersey educationally into equal rank with the other States of our Union. In three years Rutgers College will celebrate the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of its founding. What finer circumstance could mark the celebration of that event than the opening of the doors of the Woman's College? This could undoubtedly be accomplished if each one of us will begin to work at once among our friends and neighbors for this great object. And the young girls now studying in our high schools would have a splendid State college to go to in 1916! I need the influence of your names and subscriptions to push this work to a successful conclusion. All interest shown and aid given by anyone will be of material assisstance.

WIDOWS COST HUDSON $9,000.

Jersey City, March 12—When the warrants came into the office of County Collector Fred Rider, yesterday, for payment it was learned that there are forty-six widows drawing pensions from Hudson county under the Mothers' Pension Act passed last year, and that they are costing the county close to $9,000 a year. The total amount to be paid for the month of February for these pensions is $740. Sixteen widows are drawing $18 a month, fourteen are drawing $14, seven are drawing $9, four get $22, three get $19 and two get $26 a month.

OFFICER RETIRES FOR AGE.

Washington, D. C., March 12.—Col. John T. Van Orsdale, of the Seventeenth Infantry, recently on duty at Fort McPherson, Ga., was placed on the retired list of the army today on account of having reached the age limit of sixty-two years.

THE BOROUGH SCHOOLS.

Judging from the developments of the past couple of years the most prolific topic for discussion in the local newspapers is the North Plainfield school system. As a result a whole lot has been printed that was inaccurate, and some which has been only too accurate, and erroneous impressions have undoubtedly gone forth about the true conditions of affairs "over the brook."

The truth of the matter is that the North Plainfield public school system, taken in all its aspects, is no worse than most of the others in the State, and much better than the large majority. The teaching staff is efficient, the prescribed course of study is satisfactory, and aside from defects in the Somerset School building, which effort is being made to remedy as fast as the funds will allow, there is little to criticise.

The large majority of the people in the borough are intently and seriously interested in bettering conditions, and while different groups may go about it in different ways, all want to reach the same ultimate result. It would seem that the best solution of the whole matter would be to do all that is possible to bring about consolidation and annexation of the city and borough, and merge all into one splendid educational system, using the city high school now nearing completion, and turning the Somerset street building into a first class grammar school. This is undoubtedly the opinion of the thinking people of the borough who have the best interests of their children at heart, and we believe that they are in the great majority.

"WE CONQUER EARTH."

"I promise to conquer a portion of the earth and to train it to grow things good to eat or beautiful to the eye."

With this pledge some 10,000 school children of Los Angeles, Cal., have enlisted as "city garden soldiers" in the city's Garden Clubs. The object of the children, of whom 40,000 are expected to join the movement, is to put in practice on vacant lots and rear yards the lessons in agriculture and botany, which they learn in the schoolroom. Each child will have 400 square feet of earth "to conquer" and individual and company prizes await the successful young gardeners who work in groups of five, each group with its own captain.

"We Conquer Earth" is an inspiring motto, the underlying idea and slogan of the movement which is proving most successful. An auxiliary organization of adults are aiding the youngsters in the work of beautifying the city and attacking the high cost of living via the vacant lot, erstwhile eyesores. Annual garden festivals under jurisdiction of the Parent-Teachers' Association, are the final culmination of the season's efforts as planned.

What Los Angeles is doing is merely what many other cities over America are doing in greater or less degree today. Garden clubs are becoming an established institution among the children of progressive communities. The movement is growing as it so much deserves to grow. Converting the vacant lot into a bower of posies or a provisioner of the table, planting downtown barren spots to pretty flowering gardens (as the school children of San Francisco are doing, nurturing flower boxes on top of low unattractive roofs in the business district, obliterating weeds and supplanting them with nature's riches (be the riches geraniums or turnips and cabbages) are to be heartily endorsed and promoted by every city.

Business men everywhere will endorse such a plan. In fact, they are now so endorsing the idea where ever they are given an opportunity and many of them are doing their share to beautify their premises with flowers. Municipal officials should fall readily in line. Women's Clubs are prime movers naturally, for many movements to benefit a municipality must start with the women if they are to start at all. Lovers of the beautiful and seekers after human welfare must join in co-operating in a plan that must help all.

But best of all about the vacant lot gardening movement, "We Conquer Earth" is a mighty good slogan for the boys and girls who someday hope to aspire to "Conquer the Earth."

Twice recently the editorials contributed on Saturdays to the Daily Press have been written by women. Both times the articles have been read with more than passing interest, for the topics discussed interested a wide circle of readers. On Saturday of this week another woman will be the contributing editor, and she will also have something to say of more than passing interest, especially to the residents of the borough.

Councilman Cose's contention that only local junkmen be licensed is a good one. There is no business that needs careful watching more than this, and when reputable local men are engaged in it, as is now the case, there is no danger of stolen goods being disposed of through them. This cannot be said of lots of the out-of-town men who might be given permission to do business.

We know of no punishment fit for the man who cut the temporary cable strung by the telegraph company in order to give service following the storm last week which took down every wire running through Plainfield. The authorities should use every effort to apprehend the culprit and see that the maximum penalty is given him.

From the point of view of sturdy adherence to the principles of the Democratic party, Fred Endress certainly would be a desirable candidate for sheriff. No one disputes his honesty and integrity as a man or public official, and the Democratic party could go a long way without finding a better business man for the office.

It'll be time for the umpire to shout "play ball" almost before we know it. Judging from the time it is taking for the snow to disappear, the game hereabouts will have to be started on white diamonds.

PLANS FOR THE M. E. CONFERENCE

Details of Program Which Promises to Be of Unusual Interest.

EXPECT MANY CHANGES

Prevailing Impression That There Will Be a General Shift in Pastorates—Two District Superintendents to Be Named.

Plainfield churchmen and ministers will attend the annual session of the Newark Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, which will open in the Halsey Street church, Newark, next Wednesday, March 18. It is expected that the sessions will be of unusual interest. Already there is much conjecture as to whom will be appointed to the two vacant district superintendents. A successor is to be named to Rev. Dr. D. B. F. Randolph, of this city, of the Elizabeth district, which embraces Plainfield, and also to the post occupied until recently by Rev. Dr. J. L. Hurlbut, of the Newark district, who has resigned. There are said to be numerous candidates for both of these places, already in the field.

The coming sessions of the Newark Conference will be presided over by Bishop Wilson, who will for the second time be so honored. He presided over the deliberations of the conference last year.

Of particular interest to Plainfield Methodists is the question as to whether the local ministers, whom they have elected to retain, provided Bishop Wilson is willing, will be sent back to their pastorates in this city. They are Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, of the First Methodist church; Rev. C. C. Cain, of Grace Methodist church, and Rev. F. J. Hubach, of Monroe Avenue Methodist church.

While candidates will be examined Tuesday morning, March 17, the opening session of the conference will not take place until Wednesday morning, March 18, at 10 o'clock. There will be a memorial service and at 11:30 observance of the Lord's Supper. In the afternoon, at 2 o'clock, Rev. Dr. Charles L. Mead will address the Women's Foreign Missionary Society. At 4 o'clock there will be a conference of the Life Insurance Society, and in the evening at 8 o'clock, a lecture will be delivered by Franklin Hamilton, chancellor of the American University at Washington, D. C. He will take as his subject, "The Fire Bringer—A Love Tragedy."

Thursday morning at 9 o'clock there will be a business session of the conference. At 10:30 o'clock an address will be delivered by Rev. Dr. F. Watson Hannan, of Drew Theological Seminary, and Rev. Wallace MacMullen, also of Drew Theological Seminary, will speak before the convention on the Women's Home Missionary Socity, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. In the evening, at 8 o'clock, a lecture on "An Old Minister and His Influence," will be delivered before the conference by Rev. Nacy McGee Waters, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

Friday, March 20, will be known as "The One Day Convention." One pastor and six laymen from each church being represented, and the delegates will participate. Speakers on this occasion will be L. W. Eckard, of the American Bible Society; Harry G. McCann, of the Church Temperance Society; Edgar Blake, of the Sunday-school Board, President Crawford, of Allegheny College; I. Garland Penn, of the Freedmen's Aid Society; C. M. Boswell, of the Methodist Board of Home Missions, and Frank Mason Worth, of the Board of Foreign Missions. In the afternoon at 2 o'clock, there will be a general discussion of the theme, "Business System in Church Finance." Topics to be talked upon in this connection will be those of "A Survey of Prevailing Conditions," "The Way Out in the New Financial Plan," "What It is Doing and How to Introduce It" and "A District Policy and Program." At Friday evening's session the theme for discussion will be "The Call of the Total Task." The discussion will be in charge of Bishop Wilson and Fred B. Fisher. For the speakers on this occasion the conference will be divided among three teams, comprising secretaries of the boards, the commission of finance, the laymen's missionary movement, the so-operative campaign committee, and others.

Saturday morning, March 21, at 11 o'clock, there will be a reception given by the conference to the candidates. Saturday night at 8 o'clock, speeches will be made by Clarence True Wilson, of the Methodist Temperance Society, and James K. Shields, of the Anti-Saloon League. Sunday, March 22, at 10:30 o'clock, Bishop Wilson will preach. There will be ordination services for candidates at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon, and in the evening at 7:45 o'clock, an address will be given by Charles W. Flint, of New York, who will take as his subject, "Young People's Work." The appointments will probably be made on Monday.

THE FORUM.

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

In Tuesday's editorial on the poll tax question you state that the first objection and the logical one is that the bulk of the burden of this tax falls on those already paying tax on real and personal property, which is so as far as it goes. But why not go a little further and explain who will make up the deficiency arising from the failure of anyone paying a poll tax. For the sake of argument let us take Warren township. Our duplicate shows that we raised $14,000 in round numbers in the year 1913 to defray our expenses for that year of every description. It also shows that there was $300 of poll tax assessed and about $250 collected, leaving a shortage of $50 to be paid by someone, and, in my mind would have to be paid by them already paying their taxes. Of course in a small township of a few hundred taxpayers it don't amount to much, but in large cities it would amount to a large amount of money. Personally I am in favor of everybody paying a share towards carrying the burden of taxes for they surely are getting burdensome and I think a man very small that don't think the privileges he enjoys in this land of ours is cheap at that price. In conclusion let me say that with us the fellow that makes the most noise and finds the most fault in most of cases is that poll tax dodger.

Yours truly,
JOHN C. COOPER.

of that company between this city and Jersey City. Damage done to its lines was especially severe. Manager Hendrickson, of the local office, said today that while there was still much work to be done, before through telegraphic service would be restored between Plainfield and New York, that nevertheless conditions were improved. Instead of telephoning all messages to Newark, from which point they are relayed to their destinations, the Postal now telephones its Elizabeth office which clears all messages direct to New York.

MISS MARGARET KURTZ DEAD IN HER 84TH YEAR

Miss Margaret Kurtz died last night at her home, at 13 Grove street. She was nearly 84 years old. The late Miss Kurtz was an aunt of Cornelius Compton, Charles Ammerman and of Mrs. Jennie Hoffman, all of this city. She was the last surviving member of an old and well known family and had made her home at 13 Grove street, where she died, for about five years.

The funeral will be held at her late home tomorrow afternoon, at 2:30 o'clock. Rev. C. C. Cain, of Grace Methodist church, will officiate. Burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

LADIES' AID SOCIETY TO HOLD RUMMAGE SALE

The Ladies' Aid Society of Grace M. E. church held its annual meeting on Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Andrew Lutkins. The officers were all re-elected for the ensuing year. The society has been very successful throughout the past year and has greatly helped the church by its work.

On Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week it is planned to hold a rummage sale at the store at the corner of Madison avenue and West Second street. Gifts of articles of clothing, shoes, furniture, books and other things are solicited for the coming sale. Such gifts will be called for if Mrs. George Nelson, of 29 Somerset street, is notified.

MRS. ELIAS H. BONNELL DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Mrs. Elias Herbert Bonnell, sister of Augustus J. Brunson, president of the First National Bank, this city, died yesterday at her home, Woodlands, Short Hills, following a long illness from complications. She had a similar illness about a year ago, but her health seemed to be considerably improved for a time. News of her death is deeply regretted by many friends in this city.

Mrs. Bonnell, who was Miss Mary Brunson, formerly lived at Orange, where her husband is engaged in the banking business. She frequently visited in this city. There survives a husband and one brother, Augustus J. Brunson. The funeral will be held at the late home, Sunday afternoon, March 15, on the arrival of the train reaching Milburn at 2:02 o'clock on the Lackawanna Railroad. Carriages will meet the train.

MRS. JOHN HEIMER DIES AT RARITAN, AGED 53

Mrs. Ella Heimer wife of John Heimer, of Raritan, and one of the best known residents of that place, died at her home yesterday morning, following a two months' illness. She was fifty-three years old and had been a resident of this section practically all her life. Mrs. Heimer was possessed of many estimable traits, one of which was a fondness for children. There are very few boys or girls in the town who did not know and love her. Both she and her husband also had many friends in Plainfield. Mr. Heimer has been a boss spinner in the Raritan Woolen mill for twentyl-five years and for thirty years has been a member of Raritan Hose Company.

Mrs. Heimer leaves besides her husband one sister, Miss Margart Maxwell, of Raritan; a sister-in-law, Mrs. Maurice Kennedy, of 981 West Fourth street, this city, and the following nephews and nieces: Mrs George Singer, of Dover; Thomas Kennedy, at present of New Haven Conn., and Miss Mary Kennedy and Joseph Kennedy, of Plainfield.

The funeral will be held in St. Bernard's church, Raritan, Saturday morning at 9 o'clock, when a solemn high mass of requiem will be said for the repose of her soul. Burial will afterward be made in St. Mary's cemetery, this city.

SPARANO FINED $10.

Daniel Sparano, an Italian youth was arraigned before City Judge De Meza in the city court, this morning charged with stopping up a drain in the local jail several months ago when he was arrested as a bicycle thief. Sparano stuffed a disposal pipe with pieces of old wire necessitating the work of a plumber. The act cost the city $10 for repanrs, and the prisoner was told to make good the amount this morning.

SAILS FOR IRELAND.

Miss Rose Spillane, of Madison avenue, sailed this morning, on the White Star line steamer "Baltic," for her former home in Ireland. She had intended making the trip in the coming July but the serious illness of her mother compelled a change of plans. Miss Spillane was graduated from Muhlenberg Hospital training school in the class of 1912 and has since been practicing locally as nurse.

IMPERIAL TEAM HERE.

ALL ENGLAND'S ART UNDER LOCK AND KEY

Mrs. Pankhurst Starts on a Hunger Strike.

London, March 12.—Owing to the mutilation by a militant suffragette of the famous Velasquez painting known as the Rokeby "Venus," in the National gallery, Great Britain's art treasures were placed under lock and key. In the coming season London visitors will be deprived of seeing much of the world's greatest art.

King George ordered Windsor castle closed to the public for an indefinite period. Heretofore certain parts of the royal abode have been open to visitors.

The trustees of the National gallery and of the celebrated Wallace art collection have locked the doors, and extra guards are stationed about the grounds.

Kensington palace and Hampton court palace, which receive thousands of visitors every year, have been closed. The extensive collection of oriental porcelains, bronzes and miniatures, valued at $20,000,000, given to South Kensington museum by the Danish collector, the late George Salting, has been withdrawn from the public.

Continuing their campaign of retaliation for the rearrest of Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, suffragettes today burned the public buildings of the town of Bulham. The damage was estimated at many thousands of dollars. The "arsonettes" scattered militant placards and literature about the place.

The buildings burned stood on the town corporation's farm. Much live stock perished in the flames.

Mary Richardson, the young woman who slashed the Rokeby "Venus," began a hunger and thirst strike today in jail, refusing to touch either food or drink. No effort was made to feed her by force. Mrs. Pankhurst, who was again locked up yesterday, has taken no food since her arrest.

TWO REGIMENTS SENT TO BORDER

Wilson Takes Measures to Avert a "Raid."

BRINGS FORCE UP TO 18,000

Three Hundred Federals Fall In a Battle Near Torreon—Hand to Hand Combat Ensues, In Which Two Hundred Are Taken Prisoners.

Washington, March 12.—Alarmed over the likelihood of a "Jameson raid" into Mexico by Texas rangers or indignant citizens, President Wilson directed the secretary of war to order two additional regiments of infantry to the border for the purpose of preventing such incursions. This action is a direct response to the virtual threat of Governor Colquitt of Texas to use his own means to protect citizens of his state from the depredations of Mexicans and to arrest and punish the persons committing such depredations. Incidentally it is intended as notice to Governor Colquitt that the armed forces of the federal government will be employed against any state troops that may attempt to cross the international boundary with hostile intent. This brings the force along the border up to 18,000.

The situation has elements of danger in that a conflict between the federal government and the state authorities may develop from it. In ordering the two additional regiments to the boundary the president was encouraged by the attitude of Senator Sheppard of Texas, who went to the White House with many telegrams from citizens of the state asserting that the policy of Governor Colquitt was not representative of Texas feeling.

President's Answer to Colquitt.

The president's decision to send the re-enforcements was the outcome of a conference with Secretary Garrison. It is supposed that the immediate cause of the action taken was the speech delivered at Fort Worth by Governor Colquitt, in which he said:

"I defy any authority on the face of the earth, Washington included, to prevent me from protecting our citizens along the border."

The orders issued by Secretary Garrison provide for the movement to Texas of the Ninth infantry and the Seventeenth infantry regiments. The entire Seventeenth is stationed at Fort McPherson, near Atlanta. The first and second battalions of the Ninth are at Fort Thomas, Ky., near Cincinnati, while the remaining battalion is at Fort Logan H. Root, Ark.

Chihuahua, March 12.—A detailed report received at General Francisco Villa's headquarters of a battle fought at Loma, southwest of Torreon, says that General Contreras' Durango division of Constitutionalists routed a federal force under General Benjamin Argumedo.

The fighting, says the report, lasted twenty-four hours and was of the fiercest character, at several points the troops being engaged hand to hand. The federals are said to have left 300 dead on the field. Two hundred of them were captured. The delay in the receipt of the report was due to the fact that a courier had to take it on horseback 300 kilometers to Escalon by way of Nazas.

Another dispatch said a Constitutionalist force of 1,500 commanded by General Tomas Urbina is at Rosario, south of Parral, prepared to prevent any flanking movement or attempt to reach the rebel rear.

There are no federals west of Torreon except a few at Mapimi, who make almost daily raids on the haciendas in the vicinity for cattle and forage for troops in Torreon and their mounts.

General Villa confirmed reports that he had restored La Regina ranch to W. B. Snyman, formerly a Boer and now a British subject. The property was confiscated ten days ago. Villa said he was convinced by the records that Snyman had purchased the property in good faith before the outbreak of the Madero revolution in 1911.

El Paso, Tex., March 12.—Rafael Mezquiz, consular agent of the Mexican Constitutionalists in El Paso, discredited the report sent out from Moraies, Ariz., that 2,500 Constitutionalists had been trapped at Mazatlan and annihilated. He would not say the story was untrue, but he declared he was confident he would have been notified by rebel officers at Hermosillo or Nogales, Sonora, if it had not been false.

ANTS PUZZLED CUSTOMS MEN

Finally Classified as "Not Especially Enumerated Objects."

Philadelphia, March 12.—Customs officials here were puzzled to determine how to classify a colony of 10,000 ants which arrived from London. They are consigned to L. E. Wells, a student of natural history at Danville, Pa., and customs inspectors said it was the first importation of ants ever received at this port. It was decided finally to classify them as a "not especially enumerated object," and a duty of 10 per cent ad valorem was imposed.

The insects, which are known as amber colored meadow ants, will be used for educational purposes.

SIEGEL AND VOGEL FACE THEFT TRIAL

Held In $25,000 Bail For Bank Frauds.

New York, March 12.—Three indictments charging felony were filed against Henry Siegel and Frank E. Vogel by the additional grand jury which has been investigating the affairs of Siegel and Vogel's enterprises since a week ago Monday. The indictments charge the heads of the Siegel private bank with grand larceny and the acceptance of deposits when they knew the bank was insolvent. Three indictments were returned against each defendant.

While the grand jury was filing indictments against Siegel and Vogel depositors of Siegel's defunct bank were rioting again in the federal building. Expecting that both Siegel and Vogel would appear before the hearing they had gathered by hundreds in the corridors of the building hoping for the chance of a personal encounter with the two men.

Fearing scenes of disorder would again be enacted it had been announced that only three depositors would be allowed to attend the hearing and, anticipating trouble, Marshal Henkel and his deputies were on hand to enforce order. When the latter attempted to eject the frenzied depositors free for all fights resulted.

Threats of mobbing Siegel were made loudly and Marshal Henkel hustled Siegel into a private room after he had finished his testimony. As the crowd was growing more threatening every minute the marshal finally decided to get Siegel from the building without the depositors' knowledge. Accordingly Siegel was whisked down to the street in a private mail elevator. He quickly disappeared after reaching the street and his counsel said he had been taken to their office, while others said he had gone straight to the criminal courts building.

RAISE DEATH LIST TO 48.

Names of Seventeen Transients In Club Fire May Never Be Known.

St. Louis, March 12.—The list of those who lost their lives in the fire which destroyed the Missouri Athletic club early Monday morning is estimated at forty-eight, according to Mr. Bornmueller, secretary of the organization. The increase in the death toll from thirty-one to forty-eight came after it had been learned that seventeen transients had registered for the night. Who they are or from where they came will probably never be known, as the register was destroyed by the flames.

With the finding of three more bodies the number of identified dead is now ten. It may be several days before the smoldering debris in the basement of the kitchen cools sufficiently for firemen and the police to make a thorough search. It is believed, however, that all bodies there would be burned beyond recognition.

PISTOL BATTLE IN SLEIGH.

Robbers Kill Officers Who Tried to Arrest Them.

Montreal, March 12.—After a wild dash over the snow in a sleigh four burglars escaped after killing Constable Honore Bourdon and August Guyon near here. The two officers jumped into the sleigh in an attempt to arrest the robbers. The men immediately opened fire and after killing the officers threw their bodies out on the side of the road.

NEEDLEWORK

AN EFFECTIVE DESIGN FOR EMBROIDERING A NIGHTGOWN

Even the woman who has had no experience whatever in sewing, can make very dainty, pretty nightgowns by this simple one-piece pattern, for the only seams are at the sides and these may be either stitched on the machine or run by hand in the French way. Hand embroidery is quite the most satisfactory trimming for nightgowns as it is not only the most inexpensive but the most serviceable. Valenciennes lace and insertion are very pretty when new, but invariably wear out long before the garment, while hand embroidery, even if done by an amateur, outwears the material. Pattern 7267, for cutting this nightgown comes in sizes 32, 36, 40 and 44 inches bust measure; requiring 3¾ yards of 36-inch material for the medium size. Fine longcloth, batiste, nainsook, cotton crepon and some of the new trade-marked cotton fabrics are all satisfactory for making nightgowns, although longcloth is perhaps, the most durable and least expensive.

The embroidery illustrated may be stamped with transfer pattern 14536 and if the large leaves are carried out in punched work, it would give a very pretty, lacey effect. Explicit directions and diagrams for doing the punched work are given on the pattern envelope, but if you do not care for this style of embroidery, the leaves may be worked in outline and seed-stitch.

The cutting pattern 7267 and transfer pattern 14536 can be supplied to readers on receipt of price, 15 cents each.

Some Cookery Suggestions

SOME STEAMED PUDDINGS.

FOOD is said to be steamed when it is cooked in the heated vapor of water. It is a process rather similar to boiling, but as it takes longer and the temperature is never so high it renders food very tender. Steaming is a more expensive method of cooking than boiling, as the slower process consume more fuel.

Puddings are frequently steamed, and some meats, vegetables and poultry are cooked in the same manner. The utensils required are an ordinary kitchen steamer fixed to the top of a large saucepan, with a close fitting lid. The food is prepared in the same way as for boiling, but for a longer time, as steaming is a very slow process.

Apple Puddings.

Steamed Apple Pudding.—Take four ounces of finely chopped suet, one pound of apples, one-half gill of milk, four ounces of breadcrumbs, four ounces of flour, four ounces of sugar, two eggs and lemon juice and grated nutmeg. Peel, core and chop the apples, then mix them with the dry ingredients. Add the eggs (previously beaten and the milk and after mixing flavor with nutmeg and lemon juice steam for three hours in a mold.

Steamed Fruit Pudding.—Take three ounces of chopped apples, three ounces of sugar, three ounces of currants, four ounces of breadcrumbs, the juice of one lemon, pinch of salt and nutmeg and one tablespoonful of grape juice. Mix well together, steam for two hours and serve with custard.

Light Desserts.

Steamed Bread Pudding.—Take one-quarter pound each of suet, currants and moist sugar, two ounces of breadcrumbs, grated rind of one lemon, one-half pound of flour, two well beaten eggs and one-half gill of milk. Mix all the dry ingredients together and moisten them with the eggs and milk. Pour the mixture into small, well greased molds, cover with buttered paper and steam for an hour. Serve with any nice pudding sauce.

Steamed Chocolate Pudding.—Take five ounces of breadcrumbs, an ounce of powdered almonds, one-quarter pound of chocolate, three-quarters of a pint of milk, three ounces of sugar, vanilla flavoring and one egg. Boil the milk with the chocolate and sugar and pour it on to the bread. Add the yolk of the egg and flavoring and beat well; then butter a mold, beat the white of the egg to a froth, steam for an hour or until it is firm and serve.

Anna Thompson.

The King Rooster Was Crowing.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

The Rooster Who Disliked Motorcars.

JACK and Evelyn had been taken to an entertainment in the city that afternoon, and when daddy came home that evening they told him all about it. Clever dogs, hens and roosters had performed. They had tilted on seesaws and had jumped ropes and walked ropes.

"Well," daddy said, "I will have to tell you a story of the rooster who was king of the barnyard.

"It was a big farm on which he lived, and there were lots of little coops for chickens. On the very cold days they would stay inside, but on the warmer days they would play around in the sun, pick up seeds and have a nice time.

"Well, one day they were all out having a sun bath, and the king rooster was calling 'Cock-a-doodle-do!' at the top of his lungs, while all the others were admiring him. He knew they were admiring him, too, and was very proud of it. Suddenly a shrieking toot was heard, and a motorcar whizzed by.

"Now, a motorcar was an unusual sight on this country road except in midsummer, so the rooster was quite disgusted. You see, the motor's horn had taken the attention of the barnyard fowls off his solo.

"So after it had passed he said: 'I'll tell you something, now that all this absurd excitement has gone down. Years and years ago there were no motors, and there have always been hens and roosters. Now, isn't that a good point?

"At this all the barnyard creatures hung their heads in shame, for their king had corrected them for noticing the motor.

"'Motors are not at all necessary,' he continued, 'for people have ships to go in when they travel on the water. They have trains for long distances on land, and they have horses and wagons for short distances, and that is enough. It's absurd, and I do not approve of it. Now, people really can't live without us. How could they get along without eggs for breakfast? And what do they need of motors? They aren't good to eat.' (Eating was his idea of bliss, you see.) 'They make dust, a lot of noise, and we are always having to hurry out of their way on the roads in the summer. Don't you all agree with me?'

"A little cluck came from each hen.

"'And will you promise me never to notice a motor and never to get in their way so they won't have the chance to toot that common horn at us?'

"And all the hens clucked again in agreement."

"He was a strict rooster, wasn't he?" said Evelyn.

"And thought a lot of himself, too," added Jack. "And I don't believe he would have liked walking a rope for any master."

"Not he," agreed daddy.

I. W. W. LEADERS SOCIETY GUESTS

Women In Evening Gowns Entertain Haywood.

ARMY SLEEPS ON BENCHES

Horde of Idle Descend on the University Settlement, Where Their Leader Calls Forces to Revolution—Pay For Own Scanty Supper.

New York, March 12.—The leaders of the I. W. W. were entertained in Fifth avenue while their followers slept on benches at the University settlement after munching bread and drinking coffee that they had to buy themselves.

At the home of Mrs. Mabel Dodge, on the third floor of 23 Fifth avenue, two stories above General Sickles' rooms and one floor below the apartment that former Governor William Sulzer hired a few weeks ago, Big Bill Hayward Frank Strong Hamilton Frank Tannenbaum's successor as leader of the army, and other leaders discussed social problems with their hostess and a large number of her friends.

The latter were mostly in evening dress and the I. W. W. people in sweaters and less elegant garments, but all seemed to be having an interesting time.

News of the gathering in Mrs. Dodge's home was brought to Rutgers square where the unemployed were shivering in the wind while debating where to sleep for the night.

The army marched in disorderly array to the Settlement house, where they were welcomed by Dr Robins Gilman, the head worker. They disposed themselves on benches and sang their battle hymn:

Oh, why don't you work
Like the other folks do?
How the hell can I work
When there's no work to do?

Scanty Lunch Eaten.

The coffee and bread, bought with a collection of $13.40 taken in Rutgers square from the brethren themselves and some passersby, were speedily disposed of.

At 23 Fifth avenue the reporters were admitted by the colored factotum to Mrs. Dodge's rooms.

There were present some men with long, black flowing locks, who say they are anarchists, some of the Haywood type, who are leaders of industrial organizations; some who belong to social uplift movements in New York and have offices in skyscrapers uptown some women who didn't appear to have any occupations, but an overwhelming interest in the welfare of the downtrodden, and then, of course, the plain professional "unemployed."

"We will now listen to a speech from Mr. Haywood and others, but I wish to say that the movement of the I. W. W into the religious institutions recently had better be left out of the discussion," said the leader.

Red Banner There.

Mr. Haywood and some others got up and moved to the center of the room, whereupon became visible one of the red I. W. W. banners used last year in the Paterson pageant in Madison Square Garden.

Just then one of the unemployed whispered to a woman in evening dress beside whom he was standing that reporters had entered the room.

A woman with low gown removed her cigarette—several of the women were smoking and virtually all of the men—and said something that sounded like, "Oh, horrid!"

A heavy set young man came out and said that the gathering was for the purpose of discussing social problems and that all present were friends of Mrs. Dodge and that positively nothing should be published about it.

GAG RULE FOR TOLLS DEBATE

Administration Blocks Protracted Discussion of Proposed Repeal.

Washington, March 12.—Chairman Adamson of the committee on interstate and foreign commerce of the house introduced a special rule limiting debate on the bill that provides for the repeal of the clause in the Panama canal act exempting American coastwise vessels from payment of tolls.

The presentation of this rule means that the opposition to the repeal bill is more formidable than was supposed. It became apparent that in the absence of a rule limiting discussion debate on the repeal bill would be indefinitely prolonged. Accordingly Mr. Adamson, who represents the administration in the house on this question, decided to resort to the rule that limits debate to fifteen hours and prohibits the offering of amendments. Only in extreme cases is such a gag rule proposed.

The Abysmal Brute

By JACK LONDON

Copyright, 1913, by The Century Co.

CHAPTER VI.

THE abysmal brute! It certainly must be worth seeing. From what she read of him she gleaned that he was a man monster, profoundly stupid and with the sullenness and ferocity of a jungle beast.

True, his published photographs did not show all that, but they did show the hugeness of brawn that might be expected to go with it.

And so, acompanied by a staff photographer, she went out to the training quarters at the Cliff House at the hour appointed by Stubener.

That real estate owner was having trouble. Pat was rebellious. He sat, one big leg dangling over the side of the armchair and Shakespeare's "Sonnets" face downward on his knee, orating against the new woman.

"What do they want to come butting into the game for?" he demanded. "It's not their place. What do they know about it anyway? The men are bad enough as it is. I'm not a holy show. This woman's coming here to make me one. I never have stood for women around the training quarters, and I don't care if she is a reporter."

"But she's not an ordinary reporter," Stubener interposed. "You've heard of the Sangsters, the millionaires?"

Pat nodded.

"Well, she's one of them. She's high society and all that stuff. She could be running with the Blingum crowd now if she wanted to instead of working for wages. Her old man's worth $50,000,000 if he's worth a cent."

"Then what's she working on a paper for—keeping some poor devil out of a job?"

"She and the old man fell out, had a tiff or something, about the time he started to clean up San Francisco. She quit, that's all—left home and got a job. And let me tell you one thing, Pat. She can everlastingly sling English. There isn't a pen pusher on the coast can touch her when she gets going."

Pat began to show interest, and Stubener hurried on:

"She writes poetry, too, the regular ladedah stuff, just like you, only I guess hers is better, because she published a whole book of it once. And she writes up the shows. She interviews every big actor that hits this burg."

"I've seen her name in the papers," Pat commented.

"Sure you have. And you're honored, Pat, by her coming to interview you. It won't bother you any. I'll stick right by and give her most of the dope myself. You know I've always done that."

Pat looked his gratitude.

"And another thing, Pat, don't forget you've got to put up with this interviewing. It's part of your business. It's big advertising, and it comes free. We can't buy it. It interests people, draws the crowds, and it's crowds that pile up the gate receipts."

He stopped and listened, then looked at his watch. "I think that's her now. I'll go and get her and bring her in. I'll tip it off to her to cut it short, you know, and it won't take long." He turned in the doorway. "And be decent, Pat. Don't shut up like a clam. Talk a bit to her when she asks you questions."

Pat put the sonnets on the table, took up a newspaper and was apparently deep in its contents when the two entered the room and he stood up. The meeting was a mutual shock.

When blue eyes met gray it was almost as if the man and the woman shouted triumphantly to each other, as if each had found something sought and unexpected. But this was for the instant only.

Each had anticipated in the other something so totally different that the next moment the clear cry of recognition gave way to confusion.

As is the way of women, she was the first to achieve control, and she did it without having given any outward sign that she had ever lost it. She advanced most of the distance across the floor to meet Glendon. As for him, he scarcely knew how he stumbled through the introduction.

Here was a woman—a woman. He had not known that such a creature could exist. The few women he had noticed had never prefigured this. He wondered what old Pat's judgment would have been of her; if she was the sort he had recommended to hang on to with both his hands.

He discovered that in some way he was holding her hand. He looked at it, curious and fascinated, marveling at its fragility.

She, on the other hand, had proceeded to obliterate the echoes of that first clear call. It had been a peculiar experience, that was all, this sudden outrush of her toward this strange man.

For was not he the abysmal brute of the prize ring, the great, fighting, stupid bulk of a male animal who hammered up his fellow males of the same stupid order? She smiled at the way he continued to hold her hand.

"I'll have it back, please, Mr. Glendon," she said. "I—I really need it, you know."

He looked at her blankly, followed her gaze to her imprisoned hand, and dropped it in a rush of awkwardness that sent the blood in a manifest blush to his face.

She noted the blush, and the thought came to her that he did not seem quite the uncouth brute she had pictured. She could not conceive of a brute blushing at anything.

And also, she found herself pleased with the fact that he lacked the easy glibness to murmur an apology. But the way he devoured her with his eyes was disconcerting.

He stared at her as if in a trance, while his cheeks flushed even more redly.

Stubener by this time had fetched a chair for her, and Glendon automatically sank down into his.

"He's in fine shape, Miss Sangster, in fine shape," the manager was saying. "That's right, isn't it, Pat? Never felt better in your life?"

Glendon was bothered by this. His brows contracted in a troubled way, and he made no reply.

"I've wanted to meet you for a long time, Mr. Glendon," Miss Sangster said. "I never interviewed a pugilist before, so if I don't go about it expertly you'll forgive me, I am sure."

"I'll have it back, please, Mr. Glendon," she said.

"Maybe you'd better start in by seeing him in action," was the manager's suggestion. "While he's getting into his fighting togs I can tell you a lot about him—fresh stuff too. We'll call in Walsh, Pat, and go a couple of rounds."

"We'll do nothing of the sort," Glendon growled roughly, in just the way an abysmal brute should. "Go ahead with the interview."

The business went ahead unsatisfactorily. Stubener did most of the talking and suggesting, which was sufficient to irritate Maud Sangster, while Pat volunteered nothing.

She studied his fine countenance, the eyes clear blue and wide apart, the well modeled, almost aquiline, nose, the firm, chaste lips that were sweet in a masculine way in their curl at the corners and that gave no hint of any sullenness.

It was a baffling personality, she concluded, if what the papers said of him was so. In vain she sought for earmarks of the brute. And in vain she attempted to establish contacts.

For one thing, she knew too little about prizefighters and the ring, and whenever she opened up a lead it was promptly snatched away by the information oozing Stubener.

"It must be most interesting, this life of a pugilist," she said once, adding with a sigh: "I wish I knew more about it. Tell me, why do you fight? Oh, aside from money reasons." (This latter to forestall Stubener.) "Do you enjoy fighting? Are you stirred by it, by pitting yourself against other men? I hardly know how to express what I mean, so you must be patient with me."

Pat and Stubener began speaking together, but for once Pat bore his manager down.

"I didn't care for it at first"—

"You see, it was too dead easy for him," Stubener interrupted.

"But later," Pat went on, "when I encountered the better fighters, the real big, clever ones, where I was more"—

"On your mettle," she suggested.

"Yes, that's it: more on my mettle. I found I did care for it—a great deal, in fact. But still it's not so absorbing to me as it might be. You see, while each battle is a sort of problem which I must work out with my wits and muscle, yet to me the issue is never in doubt"—

"He's never had a fight go to a decision," Stubener proclaimed. "He's won every battle by the knockout route."

"And it's this certainty of the outcome that robs it of what I imagine must be its finest thrills," Pat concluded.

"Maybe you'll get some of them thrills when you go up against Jim Hanford," said the manager.

Pat smiled, but did not speak.

"Tell me some more," she urged—"more about the way you feel when you are fighting."

And then Pat amazed his manager, Miss Sangster and himself by blurting out:

"It seems to me I don't want to talk with you on such things. It's as if there are things more important for you and me to talk about. I"—

He stopped abruptly, aware of what he was saying, but unaware of why he was saying it.

"Yes," she cried eagerly. "That's it. That is what makes a good interview—the real personality, you know."

But Pat remained tongue tied, and Stubener wandered away on a statistical comparison of his champion's weights, measurements and expansions with those of Sandow, the Terrible Turk, Jeffries and the other modern strong men. This was of little interest to Maud Sangster, and she showed that she was bored. Her eyes chanced to rest on the sonnets. She picked the book up and glanced inquiringly at Stubener.

"That's Pat's," he said. "He goes in for that kind of stuff and color photography and art exhibits and such things. But for heaven's sake don't publish anything about it. It would ruin his reputation."

Practical Fashion Hints

By Alice Gibson

A most pleasing street dress design is shown in No. 7768. It is excellent for cloth, serge, ratine, silk poplin, or any of the heavier cottons or linen. If desired, the surplice vest may be made of a figured silk or brocade, in case the dress is plain or vice versa if the dress is figured. The blouse shows a drop-shoulder and an elbow sleeve (the pattern is cut for either full length or shorter) there is a pointed collar and a chemisette, which may be made with a high or round neck. A six-gored, draped skirt with an inset panel effect down the front and the back, completes the costume. Collar and cuffs may be of satin in a plain color, or of a figured silk. A wide folded girdle of figured silk crepe would lend a dressy appearance.

To make this dress in size 36, it requires 5¼ yards of 36 inch material.

The pattern is cut in 5 sizes; 34 to 42.

This Is a Perfect Pattern.

Be sure to give right size, measuring over the fullest part of the bust for dimensions.

It may be obtained by filling out the coupon and enclosing 15 cents in stamps or coin, to the Pattern Department of this paper.

THE PLAINFIELD THEATRE

More than fifty thousand workmen were used to build the Panama Canal. This great army fought more than a ten years' battle with what many noted engineers and the great authorities of Europe declared to be the impossible. Upon the ruins of the former French attempt, Uncle Sam's determined and better directed efforts have reared another world wonder, connecting two oceans and bringing the two sides of the earth together. Lyman H. Howe shared the confidence of Col. Goethal's, the canal's wonderful master builder. He began the making of an animated record of the construction when the mighty ditch took its first crude shape. It required the same kind of patience to follow each step in the building of the canal for more than a decade as has characterized the making of the other remarkable features which Mr. Howe has always brought here in his Travel Festivals. The exhibitor undertook to present to his audiences the living history of the great locks as they were slowly molded into their present completeness. These reproductions are included in the program coming to the Plainfield theatre on Friday and Saturday, March 20 and 21.

The Bouffant Tunic Spring's Style Note

PARIS couturiers have sent forth their programme for another season of styles, featuring modifications and evolutions of the tunic drapery, suggesting paniers to some extent, and indicating a revival of Empire modes of the Louis XV. period for formal evening attire. So far as most of us are concerned, who want to keep abreast of the styles, and yet not depart from cherished ideals of what is becoming and suitable for the well bred woman of to-day, it is gratifying to learn that skirts are growing fuller, that plaited ones are coming to some extent, and that draperies and ruffles, peculiarly feminine, will be more in evidence and more graceful than in the long past.

A fanciful trend, presumably for evening costuming, is in the direction of the crinoline skirt, of which report has come from Premet's opening a few weeks ago in Paris. Some crinoline skirts were shown, quite short, and revealing organdie pantalette effects about the ankles, as in the modes of 1830.

The new silhouette takes on a curve inward at the waistline, and a basque bodice with rounded or pointed bottom is a feature. The bouffant effects are dominant in silks, notably taffeta, chiffons, laces, and some woolen materials.

All this indicates tendencies in style, rather than decided departures which will route all that has been, and make up suddenly change every garment we possess, or else be out of the "running," so to speak. The openings disclose almost a certain lack on the part of designers to produce any decided novelties; and a groping around for what has not yet become a definite new inspiration to excite the jaded fashion appetite.

For practical street suits and serviceable dresses, the latest conceits show a plentiful use of serge, and gabardine, combined with plaid silks and gay Roman stripes, as sashes, girdles, facings, linings, etc. Three-piece suits have related blouses of chiffon. Where taffeta is used in combination it appears, as for instance, in a Bernard model, in the form of a sash, long in the back, and draped in bouffant effect, with a bow in the front.

Sashes are a conspicuous factor, and may be looped, twisted twice around the body, and tied in front. This way is instanced in the attractive model on the upper right side of the page (8077). This is a gown of heliotrope chiffon hung over light gray satin charmeuse. The sides hang straight, in a way that is becoming to short or rather stout figures; and the draper suggestion only, is given by the arrangement of a wide ribbon velvet scarf, in a darker shade of heliotrope, tied in front, under the drapery. The chiffon pieces are gathered in at the foot with bands of gray beaver fur; and the same borders the edge of the long sleeves in the simple blouse, made over net. The pattern is 15 cents.

A Sash Alone Suggests Drapery

A WAVE of tunics and draperies, evolved therefrom, is spreading over the fashion world. Everywhere one goes, they are seen in one guise or another; and have been in fashionable centres since early winter. They are going to be equally smart for summer silks and washable materials, and are especially adaptable to the season of filmy fabrics and laces. Women, who adore the simply tailored suit, are taking very kindly to the fancy frocks and furbelows. Manufacturers claim that they cannot make them up fast enough to supply the orders from all quarters of the United States; and they deplore the difficulty in getting enough wide chiffon taffetas to answer the call, which has come so insistently for bouffant gowns.

Women of Paris have been wearing wonderfully fascinating costumes for day and for evening, with the drapery standing out, puffed, tiered, and even arranged in a modified panier form. It is whispered that the imperial waist may be combined with the drapery idea to revive, sooner or later, the olden time polonaise. Of immediate interest to many, is the task of making up summer dresses, of which many are needed; and count for more than the expensive quality of one or two elaborate costumes, such as winter needs require, if one is dressed as she knows she should be. The figure at the lower left corner of the page (blouse 8136, skirt 8151) has on a rich gown of cream color Egyptian silk crêpe, a silk material, with a crinkled effect, strong, serviceable, but not readily soiled. It comes in wide widths and in many light and dark shades, at about $3 per yard. Only two and one-half yards of this would cut the short tunic and the overbodice. The foundation skirt is of black satin, matching the underblouse. Cream lace forms a ruffle under the tunic, which is setoff with a fringe of gold balls. The idea of this costume is one adaptable for many combinations of dark or light materials; and it will be found equally as suggestive and practical for making over a dress of last season. The ease with which many summer dresses can be made, aided by the accurate patterns of the variety of models which the department stores will bring to notice from now on, will interest those who do their own sewing to the point of beginning the task at once.

A dainty flowered cotton crêpe is the material of the gown on the left at the top of this page (blouse 7967, skirt 8237). This skirt is one of the latest designs. It appears only as a plain foundation; but in reality has a box-plaited panel back. The circular tunic extends only to it, and is bordered with a frill of black plaited net.

The waist and the skirt pattern of the numbers given are 15 cents each.

THE bustle has re-entered into fashions of the hour, not in the conspicuous stiffened hump that was in vogue almost a generation ago, but in a more subtle puff so to speak, or the arrangement of a sash in outstanding loops, to which many of us will take kindly for one dainty frock or another in the spring wardrobe. Shopkeepers have taken advantage of the innovation as an excuse to sell adjustable bustle pads, for which there has been slight call already.

Imported model gowns, and a few manufactured silk dresses, the earliest of their kind to be shown, are truly fascinating in the novel arrangement of overdress drapery, similating a bustle.

One of many equally attractive frocks, which might have been chosen from the latest importations is that in the lower right corner of this page (waist 8176, skirt 8151). In the first place it is made in the black and white combination being featured very strongly at the moment for very young girls as well as for older women.

The material is a satin striped voile, resembling grenadine of a few years ago, out of which the model could be suitably reproduced. It is hung over a narrow skirt of white taffeta, and a blouse lining of white net. The two tunics are scarcely other than ruffles of black chiffon taffeta. The girdle is a crushed one of the taffeta having sash ends finished like ribbon with a hemstitched picot. It is adjusted in three loops, each under one longer than the one above it, and stood out in the bustle, effect which is really fascinating, as well as novel. Many features will make this model appeal to the woman who is inclined to be conservative in her dress; and moreover, she can copy it with ease. Each pattern is 15 cents.

14540 Embroidered Pin Cushion Cover.

14528 New Monogram.

A very dainty set of afternoon tea doilies may be made from squares of linen having the narrowest possible hem, over which a tiny border is crocheted, taking six single crochets into the linen, and making a picot, then six more of the former, and another picot. The block, monogram is embroidered in one corner.

14528 Block Initials.

Household Hints

BLOCK letters for initials and for monograms on personal or household belongings are particularly fashionable just now. They serve the primary purpose of a mark for identification without being unduly ornate. More than this they are simple to embroider, and may be done quickly. Two new block letter arrangements are shown on this page (14528), being a part of the group of 375 transfers of a single letter in a variety of styles and sizes. For three letter monograms, three patterns are needed. The block letters are frequently arranged in the form of a diamond, when used on dinner or tea napkins, and on pocket handkerchiefs. The price of the pattern is 15 cents

EMBROIDERED pin cushions are a fashionable furnishing of bureaus and dressing tables. They are made to button or tie over the cushion, making it easy to launder them, and keep them immaculate. The above design, 14540, is a very dainty one for a cushion, 9½ by 18 inches. The decoration is done in a combination of solid stitch and eyelets in French embroidery and the edge is scalloped. The pattern includes transfers for top and bottom. A stuffed cushion, 5 inches wide and 13 long, can be used; and the covers may be laced together over it, by means of a ribbon run through, buttonholes. 10 cents.

Care of Oriental Rugs

Oriental rugs will last an ordinary lifetime, when handled with care, but they will grow soiled and unsightly unless properly cleaned. They can and should be scrubbed and scoured. The process, which professional cleaners use, is plain scrubbing with soap, water and a brush, and thorough drying in the open air, after rinsing. In the case of small rugs, they may be scrubbed at home in a tub, and rinsed with a hose. The process of professional rug renovators begins with removing the dust by the vacuum method. The rug is turned face down and scrubbed; then rinsed, rolled and dried.

FROM a caterer, who introduced a novel way of serving apple sauce in apple cups, to accompany a boar's head feast of Elizabethan origin, there comes a suggestion for the home table. Cut out the stem and a little fruit around it, like a cork, from as many apples as there will be persons to serve. Remove the core, and scoop out the inside, leaving a bright red shell, in which to put apple sauce. Replace the top and chill the fruit before serving with a course of roast pork or duck. Glossy red apples add to the effect of this dish upon the eye.

French Egg Toast

A pleasing and wholesome dish for a home luncheon is French egg toast. To make it, take half a dozen slices of bread and toast them a delicate brown. Chop or slice thinly the whites of three hard boiled eggs and mix them in a sauce made of a pint of milk, one teaspoonful of flour, one tablespoonful of butter, salt and pepper. Pour this when hot, over the slices of toast; and grate the yolks of the eggs over each portion. Add a garnish of parsley and serve very hot.

FINAL GAME WON BY HIGH SCHOOL

League Hostilities Ended Yesterday Afternoon When Leal Met Defeat.

ROUGHHOUSE FEATURED

Poor Exhibition From a Spectator's Point of View—Teams Fought for Blood During the Time the Encounter Lasted.

The final game of the Interscholastic Basketball League was decided yesterday afternoon in the Y. M. C. A., when the Plainfield High School team defeated Leal School team by the score of 44 to 2.

The first scoring of the game came soon after the whistle blew, when Leal was penalized a point for fouling a man while shooting. Peacock missed the foul shot and Stewart promptly dropped the ball in for a goal putting Leal in the lead. This was the only time the private school boys led, however, for a goal by Hetfield soon put Plainfield in front and they led for the rest of the struggle. The battling then became fast and hard, both sides playing their best. Many fouls were called on the teams, but the schools broke even on the points scored from these. Neither team let up in the pace set at the earlier part of the game until the whistle blew for the end of the first half, when the score stood at 23 to 13 in Plainfield High School's favor.

With the beginning of the second half, Leal's made some changes in the lineup. Schneider took VanDeventer's place at center, and he replaced Dickerson at forward, while Dickerson went in at right guard in place of Harrington. This change did not have much effect on holding Plainfield, and the High School players continued to roll up the score. In the last few minutes of play Hirsch, Oleary and Coudray were given a chance to show their mettle against Leal's.

BORO FRESHMAN PLAYERS TRIMMED MT. ARARAT FIVE

Basketball hostilities were again opened between North Plainfield and Westfield High Schools, when the borough freshmen team played the Westfield Cubs, an aggregation composed of high school players in Saengerbund Hall, yesterday afternoon. The final score was 42 to 15 in favor of the home team. The first half ended 23 to 7.

Captain Force led his team in scoring, making ten field goals and one foul and Denny was second with thirteen points. For the visitors Harkrader was the main point getter while Pierce put up a good game at guard.

"Sportdom Tips"

The efforts of certain members of the Union County Athletic League, in which the Plainfield High School is affiliated, to eliminate the Rahway High School athletic teams from the league through the process of reorganization, has been the cause of much adverse criticism in athletic circles, and may result in the stirring up of some hard feeling between the Central New Jersey scholastic players. For the past three years Rahway teams have had everything their own way, but it seems like poor sportsmanship to bar them from the organization because of their superiority. In doing this the other teams in the league practically acknowledge that Rahway is a leader of every branch of sport in Union county and this in itself is a boost for the Rahway teams. Rahway has annexed the title in baseball, basketball and football. Excluding Rahway from the league the other contenders would be Plainfield, Westfield, Roselle, Roselle Park, Battin and Cranford High Schools.

A grand finale will be put on the basketball season in the borough tonight, when the athletic teams of North Plainfield High School will be the guests at a banquet and reception prepared by mothers of borough students actively engaged in athletic work. The affair will take the form of a testimonial for the remarkable work done by the school's basketball teams on the court during the season just closed. The boys' team annexed the interscholastic championship and the feminine quintet came within an ace of duplicating the male team's stunt in trimming Plainfield High School.

Further evidence of the bitter feeling that has been brought to the surface through the Interscholastic Basketball League hostilities, was evidenced yesterday afternoon, when the Plainfield High School and Leal School quintets met on the Y. M. C. A. court. When players on opposing sides fight with fists clenched, the game has passed the stage of good sportsmanship and is little more than a fight for blood between two teams of beasts. While the deplorable exhibition was confined to individuals it showed up conspicuously.

Jack Martin's old jinx is again on the job. If the local favorite is ever able to shake this hoodoo he will one day become a regular leaguer.

Willie Keeler says that baseball is not work and that it's a shame to take money for performing on the ball field—and yet we never heard of Willie returning his check for $1,000 a month.

When Keeler played in Plainfield he had a good deal harder time of it than he has at the present time in fast company. Those were the happy days when he used to wear out his trousers warming a bench.

An authority on baseball states that Christy Mathewson will be in baseball fifteen years hence. We are led to suspect that the Matty of 1929 will have a "junior" affixed to his name.

Having won the interscholastic championship, those Plainfield High School girls, just for spite, are going to play some basketball.

COUNTRY CLUB ELECTS.

Flemington, March 12.—The Flemington Country Club, at the annual meeting Monday night, elected the following officers: President, Raymond H. Britton; vice-president, Harry Anderson; secretary, George R. Parker; treasurer, Augustus H. VanMarter; directors, Thomas Bloomer, George H. Bloom, George H. Dean, Howard H. Brown, Raymond H. Britton, Harry Anderson, George R. Parker and Augustus H. VanMorter; manager, Avery W. Parker; assistant manager, Llody Fisher. The report of the treasurer showed a balance of $149.50. Considerable money was spent during the past season upon the grounds, but the receipts of the game were sufficient to meet all expenses, besides adding a small amount to the funds of the treasurer. It is expected that the baseball season this year will open much earlier than in former years. A series of games is to be played with teams at Hopewell, Clinton, Somerville, Milford, Frenchtown and Lambertville.

SHAFER'S SILVER THREADS.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 12—"While playing with the Giants in New York I aged ten years and my hair is turning gray," said Arthur Shafer, yesterday, discussing the strain of a baseball season. "Nothing would induce me to return to the game, and that is what I wired McGraw, Tuesday, in reply to a telegram asking if my decision to quit was final."

BOSTON LOSES SWEENEY.

Chicago, March 12—W. J. Sweeney will come to the Chicago Nationals, and Hub Perdue will remain with Boston. This solution of the controversy over the players involved in the Evers sale, was telephoned yesterday by C. P. Taft, owner of the Cubs, to C. W. Murphy here, former president of the Cubs, who is still acting for the club.

EVERS GETS BIG BONUS.

Macon, Ga., March 12—Johnny Evers, deposed manager of the Chicago National League baseball team, yesterday received a check for $25,000 as a bonus for signing a contract with the Boston Nationals. The check was given Evers by James E. Gaffney, owner of the Boston club, shortly after his arrival here.

ELKS' BEEFSTEAK DINNER.

Members of the local Elks' bowling team and a big crowd of rooters, will go to Jersey City tonight where the annual beefsteak dinner of the league will be held. At that time the prizes for the past season will be awarded to the winners.

JACK MARTIN AGAIN A VICTIM OF JINX

Plainfield Boy Injured in a Practise Game in Macon Yesterday Afternoon.

Word was received today from the Boston National League Club's training camp at Macon, Ga., bringing the information that Jack Martin had been injured in a practice game played on Southern soil, yesterday. Jack sprained his ankle while sliding into second base.

The injury, while not serious, will undoubtedly hinder Martin in his efforts to land a regular berth on the big league club. The accident comes at a most inopportune time as Manager Stallings has been greatly elated over the Plainfield youngster's work and he was traveling in the best of form.

The local ball player has been followed by a jinx ever since he started on his big league career and the hoodoo has once more made its appearance. While with the Yankees he was "beaned" by Walter Johnson's "smoke ball" and shortly after recovering from this accident he came within an ace of having one of his toes severed.

SPRINGFIELD TEAM HAS GREAT PROGRAM

Plainfield Audience Will Be Treated to a Novel Exhibit in Y. M. C. A. Gym.

One of the best programs of local interest arranged to be given in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium this season has been completed for next Saturday night, and will be presented under the auspices of the Springfield Training School's gymnastic team, assisted by the tumblers of the local association. This trained crew of gymnasts, representing a school that turns out men who make a specialty in the line of Y. M. C. A. endeavor, will give an excellent program of difficult moves and calisthenics and the affair will be even larger than the one given here two years ago by representatives of the same institution.

The previous appearance of the team was featured by the work of Charles H. Line, formerly assistant physical director of the local Y. M. C. A., and although he will be present at Saturday night's exhibition, he will take no active part in the demonstration. The Plainfield Y. M. C. A. gym team composed of Messrs. Hansen, Englund and VanNorden, will give an independent exhibition at that time.

The program will consist of free hand drills, horse and ring moves, Hungarian Scardas dance, corrective gymnastic exercises, vocal selections by a trio, horizontal bar work, pyrotechnic club swinging, parallel bar pyramids, parallel bar heavy gymnastic, wand drill and athletic fest.

Prior to the exhibition the members of the women's auxiliary of the association will entertain the members of the team at a dinner given in the Y. M. C. A. parlors.

BECKER WILL COACH.

Fred Becker, a former North Plainfield High School athlete, has been engaged as coach for the North Plainfield High School baseball team for the coming season.

COLUMBUS LEAGUE GAME.

The Brandywine team of the Columbus Club Bowling League, will meet the Yorktown aggregation on the club alleys tonight.

Queries, Comment and Answers

Sporting Editor:

Query—How many more weeks do we owe the groundhog?—H. K. Y.

Answer—The old proverb says six weeks from February 2. This brings the date up to March 16.

Sporting Editor:

Query—I was born March 7, 1851. Please tell me what day of the week it was?—N. F. J.

Answer—March 7, 1851, fell on Thursday.

Sporting Editor:

Query—To whom should I apply for a position as conductor or motorman on the local trolley cars? What are the qualifications and what references are necessary?—G. L.

Answer—To Superintendent Geo. Luhr at the Dunellen car barns. He will furnish you with complete information.

Sporting Editor:

Query—Will you kindly decide this foolish bet in your query columns. A says that Columbus, the discoverer of America, was an Italian; B claims he was a Jew. Who wins?—J. I.

Answer—Columbus was a Genoese, born in Genoa, Italy. B is dead wrong.

Sporting Editor:

Query—Where can I get some substance for a debate on the subject, "Women should have the right to vote"?—K. D.

Answer—Look up the material in the Public Library.

Sporting Editor:

Query—What is the average salary of big league ball players?—J. G. T.

Answer—The salaries differ greatly and as the terms of a majority of the bigger contracts are not made known, it would be impossible to strike a happy medium. If you can play ball, however, and can get into the big leagues, you can keep from starving.

AFTER BRITISH GOLF HONORS.

New York, March 12.—Jerome D. Travers, holder of the United States amateur golf championship, was among the passengers sailing for England today on the Baltic. The object of his visit to the other side is to compete for the British championship title. After arriving in England he will have about six weeks in which to practise for the tournament, which will be held on the Sandwich links in May.

NAPS LOSE A PLAYER.

Athens, Ga., March 12—Ray Chapman, Nap shortstop, broke a bone in his right ankle while sliding into third base in practice at the Cleveland American League camp here yesterday afternoon. He will be laid up five weeks, and may be kept from the regular lineup for half the season.

PRELIMINARY GAME.

As a preliminary game to the High School girls' team in the P. H. S. gym tomorrow afternoon, the Stillman School girls' basketball five will play the team from the freshman class of the North Plainfield High School. The previous meeting of these two teams resulted in a victory for the grammar school girls.

FULL LINE OF DRAPERIES.

Charles E. Christiansen, of 139 West Second street, upholsterer and interior decorator, is taking many orders these days for draperies and curtains in anticipation of spring and summer. Mr. Christiansen makes a specialty of designing slip coverings, furniture and window cushions. He also makes and re-makes mattresses and repairs and refinishes antique furniture. At Mr. Christiansen's shop there is now displayed a full sample line of this season's cretonnes, damasks, velours and tapestries, as well as a full line of sunfast fabrics, suitable for summer draperies and porch chair cushions. Estimates will be furnished by Mr. Christiansen for porch furniture and white enameled furniture. Only first-class material is used in all of the work done at his shop and the service is prompt and the workmanship of a high grade.

WITNESS AGAINST POLICE IN SUMMIT IS MISSING

Summit, March 12—One of the material witnesses for the prosecution tonight of Patrolman John J. Gannon and William J. George, who are to be tried on charges of incapacity, is missing. He is Russell Bland, colored, chauffeur for G. Edward Edgar.

George was kidnapped by a suspected highwayman, now believed to be "Big Ed" Farley, who is under arrest in New York awaiting extradition proceedings, and Bland at the point of a pistol was forced to drive the two into the country, where the desperado tied them in an abandoned mill and left them. Gannon, who was with George at the time the man was accosted by the pair, was driven off by the same weapon.

City Solicitor Corra N. Williams, who is to conduct the prosecution, said that nothing could be learned of Bland at the address he gave in New York when he left Summit, and that it was doubtful if he would be present at the trial.

"LOOK OUT FOR THE CARS."

Chicago, Ill., March 12.—A plan for uniformity in railroad crossing signs throughout the country is one of the principal matters to be considered at the fifteenth annual convention of the American Railway Engineering Association, which began in this city today with an attendance representing the leading railroads of the United States and Canada. Advocates of the plan for uniform crossing signs contend that it will result in greater safety and economy.

WILL COMMEMORATE THE BIRTH OF GROVER CLEVELAND

Preliminary to refitting and refurnishing the house where former President Grover Cleveland was born, members of the Grover Cleveland Memorial Association, will attend the exercises in commemoration of Cleveland's birth, which are to be held Sunday evening in the Presbyterian church at Caldwell.

An address will be made by St. Clair McKelway, editor of the Brooklyn Eagle. Dr. John H. Finley, Commissioner of Education, of New York, will preside at the meeting. Former U. S. Minister to Turkey Oscar S. Straus is also expected to be one of the speakers.

WOULD HAVE CHURCH BELLS SOUND IN RAHWAY ALARMS

Rahway, March 12.—Mayor Thomas A. Fyffe, in a communication to the president of the Common Council, David H. Trembly, urges that a new fire alarm system be installed and suggests that the church bells be used to sound warnings.

The Mayor says that from a personal investigation of the crippled condition of the fire alarm system, he believes the entire system will have to be reconstructed. The present alarm whistle, he says, is seldom heard all over the city, and often not heard at all, and he calls attention to the suggestion made in his annual message that an automatic system be installed that would sound simultaneously from the bells of the First Presbyterian and St. Paul's Second Presbyterian churches and Grand Street chapel.

The recent storm put the entire alarm service completely out of commission, so that it has been necessary for each fire company to keep a number of men at the different company houses to give prompt service in case of fire.

MAY HAVE DEMONSTRATOR.

Elizabeth, March 12—The W. F. Houston, of Harrison, N. Y., may eventually be superintendent of farm demonstration work in Union county, is evident from a letter of Alva Agee, State superintendent of farm demonstration work, who wrote Freeholder Peter Meisel, Tuesday, that additional petitions would be secured from farmers, asking for the appointment of a demonstrator. Mr. Agee declared that he did not want to burden the county with a demonstrator if it didn't want one, but that he was confident the sentiment was the opposite. He said the appointment of Mr. Houston would be temporarily withdrawn. Mr. Meisel is chairman of a committee investigating the matter.

SIX NURSES RECEIVE DIPLOMAS.

New Brunswick, March 12.—Six nurses received their diplomas at the graduation exercises of the training school for nurses connected with St. Peter's General Hospital, which were held last night in Columbia Hall. Dr. Frank M. Donohue, president of the medical staff, presided and gave the address. Dr. J. Warren Rice presented the class to Monsignor John A. O'Grady, who awarded the diplomas. The graduates are Miss Anna Sweeney, of this city; Miss Pauline Isenhardt of Elizabeth; Miss McKenzie, of New York; Miss Mabel O'Hara, of Perth Amboy; Miss Barbara McNabb, of Boston, and Miss Alice Hurley, of Cambridge, Mass.

H. H. HERBERT 80 YEARS OLD.

Washington, D. C., March 12.—Hilary A. Herbert who was Secretary of the Navy during President Cleveland's second term and for many years previous a member of Congress from Alabama, celebrated his eightieth birthday anniversary today. Since his retirement from public life in 1897 Mr. Herbert has made his residence in this city.

ANNIVERSARY OF '88 BLIZZARD

Twenty-six Years Ago Today City Experienced Worst Storm in Half Century.

LASTED FOR 48 HOURS

For More Than Three Days All Communication and Means of Travel Was Cut Off—Experiences of Plainfielders.

Today is the anniversary of the great blizzard of March 12, 1888. Plainfield, twenty-six years ago, was isolated and cut off from all communication with the outside world. It was the worst snowstorm recorded in half a century. Business was brought to a standstill. Telegraph and telephone wires were down. Service of all public utilities was disrupted and for days. During the forty-eight hours that the storm raged but one train reached Jersey City over the New Jersey Central road. The big blizzard was preceded by a heavy rain after which snow fell for forty-eight hours.

Incidents of the big storm are of particular interest just now when Plainfield and the surrounding country is just recovering from the effects of the last great storm. In respect to the amount of damage done the recent storm was, it is said, far more disastrous than was the storm of twenty-six years ago. That was of the nature of a North Dakota blizzard. The wind was high and violent. There were snowdrifts in Plainfield streets fifteen and twenty feet deep. Huge trees were blown down. Electric light, telegraph and telephone poles and wires were carried away by the storm.

Passenger trains were snowed in all along the railroad between here and New York. In some cases nothing but the smoke stacks of engines were visible above the snowdrifts. Passengers en route to Philadelphia and other points west were marooned in the railroad station. Many were obliged to remain in Plainfield all of the next night. Out of the 140 telephones in use in the city at that time only ten were in working order six hours after the storm started. Butchers and grocers could send out no delivery wagons. Many were obliged to close down entirely as the high winds blew down chimneys, making it exceedingly hazardous to remain in the stores with a fire in the stoves. The local public schools were closed and Chief Waters, of the fire department, issued precautions against fire and loss of life.

At that time the amount of suffering and damage to the outside world could not be estimated. One hundred yards west of the Fanwood cut a train was snowed under and firmly embedded in a snowdrift twenty feet deep. The passengers succeeded in reaching the Fanwood station and a few of them walked back to this city arriving here almost exhausted, after several hours. The train crew was obliged to remain in the derelict car all night and had nothing to eat for sixteen hours.

Many novel feats of pedestrianism were accomplished. Harry Brokaw, son of former Assessor Isaac Brokaw of the borough, and Frank McConaughty, of Somerville, walked from Elizabeth to Plainfield, covering the twelve miles in five hours. The late Peter Emmons, of North Plainfield, walked to his home in this city from Jersey City, and the late F. H. Pittis, of Central avenue, father of Dr. Albert Pittis, walked from Elizabeth. Large forces of men were organized and detailed to dig out the stranded trains on the Central Railroad and everyone united in clearing some kind of a path in front of his premises.

A bitter cold accompanied the blizzard and the blinding snow made walking a difficult undertaking. Although business in other lines was at a standstill, the Plainfield Daily Press, then in its infancy, published a regulation sized newspaper with all of its usual details.

Raritan

Sisser Brothers' large auto van has been stuck in a snow bank between New Brunswick and South River since the blizzard of last week.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Reformed church will hold its annual rally on Sunday evening. There will be music and an exhibition of what is done by the society. A special address will be delivered by an official of the State Union.

Mrs. John Rimer died at her home on Canal street yesterday morning after a long illness. She recently underwent an operation at a Newark hospital and was getting along nicely until she sustained a fall on the ice a few days ago. Her husband survives her.

Frank Purcell and Miss Margaret Talbot, both of this place, were married on February 28 last, the announcement just being made. They will reside shortly in Somerville.

FESTIVAL OF PURIM IS BEING OBSERVED HERE

New York, March 12.—The Jewish congregations throughout the world today engage in their annual celebration of the holiday of Purim or the feast of lots, the story of which is told in the biblical book of Esther. The festival was established to commemorate the deliverance of the people of Israel from the machinations of Haman, the prime minister of King Ahasuerus of Persia, who sought to destroy the entire population of Jews in that kingdom through jealousy of Mordecai, who was a prominent and much-respected member of the Jewish community. The plans for the destruction of the Jews conceived by Haman were frustrated by Queen Esther, a Jewess, and the niece of Mordecai.

Purim has been called the Jewish carnival, and many of its features were adopted under the influence of the Roman and other carnivals which happened to be celebrated about the same season. Masquerading had a prominent place in the popular amusements. During the Middle Ages when ghetto walls enclosed the Jewish settlements, it was one of the rare occasions when the heavy gloom that weighed upon them was relieved by the historic lesson that Israel's enemies were always in the end defeated and punished. It is the most popular of all festivals among the Jews and for centuries held high prominence for the spirit of reveiry and boisterous merrymaking which attended it.

GENUINE TALKING PICTURES TO BE EXHIBITED HERE

Edison's genuine talking pictures will be exhibited in Y. M. C. A. Hall tomorrow afternoon and evening. The exhibition will be held under the direction of one of the officers of the Edison Kinetophone Company, and the pictures will be projected by trained mechanicians from the Edison laboratories at Orange. The rare skill of these operators and the perfection of the instruments which Mr. Edison has devised to make pictures talk combine to produce a novel and wonderful entertainment. After witnessing a demonstration in the Edison offices, at which many of the subjects to be used tomorrow, were shown, Secretary Parker declares this new invention to be little short of perfect.

A program of fourteen numbers will be shown. They will include the reproduction of an interview with the late Mayor Gaynor and former Street Commissioner Edwards, and a speech by Andrew Carnegie on "The Gospel of Wealth." The other numbers are: Lecture, "The Edison Kinetophone;" "The Merchant of Venice," "The Musical Blacksmith," "Edison Minstrels" in two parts, John J. McGraw, "Jack's Joke," "The Deaf Mute," "Jerry and Mandy," "Dixie Days," "Julius Caesar."

Entertainments will be given at 2 and 3:45 o'clock in the afternoon and at 7 and 8:45 o'clock in the evening.

N. P. H. S. NOTES.

The Sigma Gamma Kappa Club will hold a meeting tomorrow afternoon at the Y. W. C. A. The officers for the ensuing year will be elected at that time.

At a meeting of the Girls' Athletic Association yesterday it was decided to hold a cake and candy sale next week.

Miss Jessie Utter, instructor in singing, has selected the chorus that will represent the High School in the annual musical contest that is to take place in Somerville next month. There are about fifty voices and rehearsals are being held three times a week.

The members of the sophomore class held a meeting yesterday afternoon and after much debate it was decided to purchase a banner that would signify the winning of the class basketball championship this year. The following committee was appointed to look into the matter: Gladys Sullivan, Martin McDonough and Addison Newkirk.

The baseball season tickets will be put on sale tomorrow morning.

Principal Albert Earley and Miss Terry, instructor in history, will take a party of students to Trenton next Monday afternoon. They will visit places of interest in the afternoon and in the evening will go to the Capitol and witness the procedure of the Legislature, which will be in session at that time.

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Nobody Can Tell When You Darken Gray, Faded Hair With Sage Tea.

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy" you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, ready to use, for about 50 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and abundant.

SAFETY FIRST

In making a new banking connection, safety is the first consideration. The State Trust Company has a capital of One Hundred Thousand Dollars and a surplus of more than Fifty Thousand Dollars which constitutes a safety fund of approximately one to four in relation to deposits. In addition to this strong position, its funds are so invested that a large proportion of its assets can be converted into cash in twenty-four hours.

These facts are commended to the consideration of anyone contemplating a banking connection or a change in arrangements already existing.

GLASS OF SALTS CLEANS KIDNEYS

If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You, Drink Lots of Water.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness. Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.—Adv.

REGIONAL BANKS ARE DISCUSSED

Miss Janet Richards Reviews First Year of Wilson Administration.

BUSINESS MEN HOPEFUL

Speaker Believes that the Currency Law and New Tariff will Strengthen Industrial Conditions Generally in this Country.

Reviewing one year of the Wilson administration, Miss Janet Richards in addressing a large gathering of women at the Hartridge Auditorium, yesterday afternoon, declared that in the opinion of manufacturers and business men with whom she had talked, the great business interests of this country were hopeful of much good. The establishment of the system of great regional banks, provided for under the new Currency Law, will, it is believed, be of much benefit to the business interests, and especially to residents of the middle and far Western States. Loans will be easier to obtain, money more plentiful, it is said, and it is thought the regional banks will make for general prosperity and preclude money panics such as have occurred heretofore during periods of marked financial and business depression.

Not less than eight nor more than twelve of these government, or as they are more familiarly known, regional banks, will be established in various sections of the United States, Miss Richards said. The exact number and locations has not as yet been finally determined upon by the administration. The new banking institutions will be under governmental control at all times. There are today 25,000 banking institutions in the United States eligible to join the new regional banking system.

Throughtout the whole United States, according to Miss Richards, practically all of the banks are coming into the new regional system. Bankers pretty generally, it is said, are now declaring that the new idea is a good one, and say much in its favor, besides the fact that the establishment of such a system will unquestionably do away with money stringency and financial panics.

Each bank joining the new system is required to make an investment in stock, and must pay six per cent, of its capital and surplus for stock in the new undertaking. Belief exists that through the maintainence of the system of regional banks much of the gambling in Wall street will be done away with, and while there will be fluctuations in the market, it will be more normal than heretofore.

The reduction of the tariff, the passage of the income tax and the new Currency Law are all things which Miss Richards said, will redound greatly to the credit of President Woodrow Wilson. There is said to be a feeling in Europe, that uncertainty exists as to just how long the present tariff reductions will endure.

Should another Democratic President be returned at the next national election, it was held likely, Miss Richards said, that foreign manufacturers would enter the American field, seeking a continuation of the present tariff policy and being inspired to make larger investments in the way of increasing their facilities so as to permit of the enlargement of their products. Another reason assigned for the failure of foreign manufacturers to invade this field is that the workmen abroad, notably in England, have strong trade unions, and are demanding increased wages, owing to the belief that American trade will materially increase the revenues of such employers. The income tax, Miss Richards said, the people have pretty generally adjusted themselves to, notwithstanding that it has been difficult to determine just when and how such a tax shall be paid.

An extra lecture in the course is to be given Thursday, April 16, at which time Miss Richards will discuss "Foreign Affairs."

DISCUSS PLANS FOR LARGE BOND ISSUE

City Council Confers With Experts About Raising Funds for Sewer Work.

Questions pertaining to the proposed issue of bonds by the city in connection with the building of the joint trunk sewer, were discussed at some length in executive session by the Common Council, last night. It was announced that an adjourned meeting of the Council would be held, but as that body was not ready to pass on the bond issue, an adjournment was taken to Monday night, and then the members went into executive session.

Meeting with the Council was Albert A. Tilney, of the banking house of Harvey Fisk & Sons, and Willis West, representing a New York bond house. George W. Fuller, the sanitary engineer, who drafted the proposed sewage plans, was also present to give the Council any desired information. It is expected that when the Council meets Monday night everything will be in readiness to authorize the bond issue and advertise for bids.

There are certain technical points arising in connection with the proposed issue of bonds which necessitates a little more time before completing the transaction. It is the opinion of those who have the matter in charge that the city will not experience any difficulty in selling its bonds at a good figure. North Plainfield and Dunellen are both ready to sell their bonds in connection with the sewer work.

GRENFELL GUILD TO GIVE EXHIBITION

Mrs. Percy H. Stewart to Entertain Members of Plainfield Section March 31.

The annual tea and exhibition of articles of the Plainfield section of the Grenfell Needlework Guild, will be held at the home of the president, Mrs. Percy H. Stewart, 1107 Watchung avenue, Tuesday afternoon, March 31, at 3 o'clock. Miss Ethel G. Muir, of Briarcliff, who has spent several summers in volunteer work under Dr. Grenfell, in Labrador, will address the members of the Guild at 4 o'clock. Miss Muir spoke at the annual meeting last spring, and spent the following summer in Labrador, so that she comes to Plainfield with renewed interest and enthusiasm in Dr. Grenfell's work to tell the members of the Guild her experiences since she last met them.

The directors of the Plainfield section are Mrs. B. vanD. Hedges, Miss Eva Browne, Mrs. Richard Boardman, Miss Helen Harman, Miss Margaret Mead, Mrs. Maybury B. Mellor, Mrs. S. Durell Lounsbury, Mrs. Duncan W. Taylor, Mrs. William M. Wherry, Jr., Mrs. Francis deL. Hyde, Mrs. John S. Zelie, Mrs. Anna Stewart, Mrs. Daniel F. Ginna, Mrs. A. A. Tilney, Mrs. C. Boardman Tyler, Mrs. John P. Stevens, Mrs. William G. Cooke, Mrs. Alfred Streuli, Mrs. Ernest R. Ackerman, Mrs. Henry C. White, Mrs. W. A. Conner, Mrs. Frank W. French, Mrs. Thomas M. Day, Miss Katherine A. Sargent, Miss Helena Lowden and Mlle. Gobrielle Meyer, of New York city, and Mrs. Celia Y. Hilbrook, of Bound Brook.

Last year 1,000 articles of wearing apparel and hospital supplies were collected by the directors of the Plainfield section, and it is expected that the number this year will be considerably increased, as several new directors have joined the work of the Guild.

PLAYGROUND TEACHER DIES SUDDENLY IN CALIFORNIA

Miss Jeannette Sherwood, an instructor employed by the local Playground Commission during the summer of 1912, died yesterday in Los Angeles, Cal., where she has been teaching. While in Plainfield she had charge of the Franklin School playground, and was an unusually popular instructor, both with the children, who frequented the center and the parents of the recreation seekers.

Miss Sherwood was engaged in kindergarden work in the public schools of Los Angeles, and contracted a cold several days ago which developed into pneumonia and she died yesterday. She is survived by her mother, who lives in Brooklyn.

TO BE OR NOT TO BE AN HEIRESS?

That is the Question Now Regarding Miss Alma Johnson, of This City.

$25,000 LEGACY A MYTH

After Failure to Deny Story for a Week, Young Woman Now Says She Never Did Have Money Left to Her.

Shelock Holmes would have a busy time if he paid a visit to Plainfield just now and tackled the mystery of that $25,000 legacy which was reported to have been left to Miss Alma Johnson, a local domestic, by a rich uncle who died in Sweden. After letting the newspapers use her name for a week, and making no effort to deny that she had received the money, Miss Johnson yesterday took another tack and through one local paper, the only one in this section of the United States which did not see the news value of the story, she is reported to have denied that there ever was any legacy, and that everything that has appeared has been the result of a trick played upon her by some friend.

Last Saturday morning a young woman, purporting to be Miss Johnson, called at the Daily Press office and left a notice, all neatly written out, about the $25,000 legacy. Recognizing the news value of the fact that the story as handed in claimed that the young woman would have to marry within a year in order to get the money, the Daily Press featured the article and followed it up in subsequent issues, as did most of the New York papers, but no other local paper. On Monday it was exclusively announced that the young man in the case had been found by Miss Johnson and on Tuesday his name was made public, again exclusively in the Daily Press. He is Neils Pedersan, an employe of the local telephone company. That part of the tale is evidently true.

On Monday afternoon a photographer from the New York Mail called at the house where the young woman is employed, and tried to secure a picture of her. It was said that she was out, but the legacy was not denied. Then on Tuesday it was discovered that the young woman herself answered the door when the photographer called the day before, and had fooled him. That afternoon the Mail tried again, through another photographer. He met a member of the family where Miss Johnson is employed, and although he was not permitted to take the picture, the story still went undenied. Tuesday night, a person purporting to be Miss Johnson, called the Daily Press office on the 'phone, and requested that nothing more be said about the matter, but again the story was not denied. On Wednesday a reporter for a New York Sunday paper visited the house, and again came away without a story, but also without a denial of it.

In the meantime the Daily Press started an investigation, and was told by a local Swedish resident that the money was received but was not $25,000, being 25,000 crowns, Swedish money, a crown being equal to 26,8 cents of American money. Every effort to further substantiate the statements, which the young woman did not deny, brought forth information from people prominent in the local Swedish colony that they understood the legacy had been left.

Investigation this morning brings to light the fact that Miss Johnson's failure to immediately prove the yarn a canard has caused considerable trouble not only for her but for the family for whom she worked on Evergreen avenue, and after thinking that the joke had gone far enough, she yesterday made a statement that she had not received a legacy. In the meantime her personal affairs have achieved a prominence which the perpetrator of the joke evidently did not estimate when first sending the fake to the local papers.

CLAIMED TO HAVE COMMITTED MURDER

Thomas Rowe, of the Borough, Requests the New York Police to Lock Him Up.

A man giving his name as Thomas Rowe and stating that he was a resident of North Plainfield, walked into a New York police station late last night, and asked to be locked up, stating that he had murdered his wife and was a fugitive from justice in New Jersey. The stranger was locked in a cell pending an investigation and the New York authorities telephoned the Plainfield police regarding the matter. Chief Weiss, of North Plainfield, was in turn notified and found Rowe's wife alive and well in her home in the borough.

It later developed that Rowe had been in an intoxicated condition for several days and was probably "seeing things." He was released by the New York authorities this morning, following the result of the investigation.

NEW YORKER TRIES TO COMMIT SUICIDE

Jacob Bloomenthal Saved by the Police From Accomplishing His Purpose.

After having been refused a quantity of strychnine in a West Front street drug store, yesterday afternoon, because he did not know what he wanted it for, Jacob Bloomenthal, giving his address as 7 East 129th street, New York city, went to another druggist a few doors away and declared that he yanted a quantity of the drug with which he intended to commit suicide. The clerk in charge notified Patrolman O'Sullivan and the customer was lodged in a cell in police headquarters.

Shortly after 6 o'clock last night Sergeant Higgins heard groans issuing from the rear of the police station where the cells are located and upon investigation found Bloomenthal lying on the cement floor. City Physician Norman W. Currie was notified and after examining the prisoner ordered him removed to the hospital. At the latter institution it was found that he had swallowed a quantity of poison and was suffering intensely. A stomach pump was brought into use and after a general "cleaning out" the man was sent back to the police station apparently none the worse for his attempt at self-destruction.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE TO ADVOCATE NEW COUNTY

The monthly meeting of the Chamber of Commerce was held in the Babcock building, last night, and plans made to inaugurate an active campaign in behalf of the new county idea, locally. It is planned to stir up enthusiasm enough to warrant the holding of a public mass meeting sometime in the near future, when an open discussion on the subject will take place.

The body devoted a large portion of its time to the proposition last night, and while no definite action was taken in the matter as far as setting a definate day is concerned, much interest was displayed in the subject by the twenty members present. The garbage question was also taken up at the meeting in much the same way as has been the custom for sometime past, but as usual nothing important was done in this matter.

Hereafter the rooms of the Chamber of Commerce in the Babcock building will be open at all times for the accommodation of those seeking information. Someone will be in charge and printed matter will be distributed among those who wish it.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS ENJOY FESTIVAL OF SONG

A festival of song, consisting of hymns of the nations, folk-lore songs and stories, illustrated by several tableaux, was presented last night, by the Christian Endeavorers of Hope chapel, as a program, at its "imported" social. A large number of the friends of the society was in attendance.

The folk-lore readings were well rendered by Miss Elizabeth Doig, while those who took part in the song-fest were Miss Eunice Eckert, Miss Agnes Leighs, Miss Josephine Snyder and Miss Jessie Duncan. David Wardrop and Richard Schott presented the tableaux. The affair was arranged by the social committee.

'THE CELESTIAL ROSE' HIS THEME

Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring Gives Last Lecture on Dante's "Inferno."

GOD ETERNALLY HUMAN

"The Humanity of Christ is a Disclosure of What is Forever in God," Said the Speaker in Interesting Talk.

Speaking on the subject of "The Celestial Rose," in the third and last of a series of lectures on Dante's "Inferno," Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, held the close attention of and interested audience yesterday afternoon, in Vincent chapel of the First M. E. church.

"Dante rises after his purgatorial discipline," said Dr. Herring, 'into the lowest Heaven of Paradise. He tells us that the downward gravitation of earth was overcome by the upward gravitation of spiritual desire. He discovers that, when purified by suffering it was perfectly natural for a soul to rush to Paradise, as natural as for the torrent to rush down from the lofty mount to the valley below or the flame of fire to mount upward, and lose itself in its source. Everything in heaven and earth tends to proceed to its source. Dante moves on through the various heavens until he reaches the heaven of heavens far above all moving worlds. In the ninth heaven he saw a point of intensest light. That point represented the power of God. All nature was controlled by this ray of light. All the heavens revolved about it, but above this was the heaven of heavens. It is here that Dante reaches final bliss. He is gazing into a great and glorious river. Sparks are emitted from the river which sink into flowers on its banks. He drinks of it and bathes his eyes and the flowers blend into a rose which is the symbol of the invisible church. On this rose descend the angels and they bring with them the sweet influences of God.

"In the petals of the rose he sees the redeemed, he saw in the lower heavens. They appeared to him there to reveal the degree of their happiness, but here is their abiding place rank above rank in the petals of the celestial rose. In the depths of the rose, Dante sees the leaves of the universe, and he notes that all things are bound together here in one great volume of love.

"The rose symbolizes the beautiful and perfect harmony of heaven, the perfect divine society. 'Here every saint unites with his fellows to produce the aggregate social result.'

"In the center of the rose is a lake and from it there arises one who has the appearance of a man, evidencing this fact that in the perfect harmony of heaven there is Christ. God in the mind of Dante is 'eternally human.' The humanity of Christ is a disclosure of what is forever in God.

"Dante wrote the Paradiso when nearing the end of his life. He had seen the depths of sin. He struggled for the higher life until in seraphic vision, he caught a sight of the humanity of God. God to him was not the 'Inscrutable Something,' the 'Unfathomable Mystery,' about which we can know nothing, not the 'Power that makes for righteousness,' God was as Christ revealed Him."

MRS. C. R. HERRON LEAVES ESTATE VALUED AT $200,000

The will of Mrs. Carrie Rand Herron, wife of Prof. George D. Herron, a writer and lecturer on Socialism, who until recently lived in Metuchen, was filed for probate yesterday. Mrs. Herron, who died in Italy, January 11, left an estate valued at $200,000. She left her estate entirely to her husband.

The couple were married in New York by a most unusual ceremony and came to Metuchen to live. There Mrs. Herron bought a large tract of land and announced that she was about to start a Socialist colony. The people of that village, however, insisted that it was to be a free-love community and protested with the result that the Herrons a short time ago moved out and went to Italy.

NO RELIEF FOR PROPERTY OWNERS

Corporation Counsel Can Find No Law Allowing City to Clean Cesspools.

Corporation Counsel Charles A. Reed has given Councilman Charles C. Graves, an opinion that he can find no law which would permit the city to clean cesspools for those who do not have the advantages of the city's sewage system. Mr. Reed cites the fact that a tax is levied on everyone for school purposes, whether they have children in school or not, and the same is true of the tax for the maintenance of the fire department, though one may never have any need of the department.

Mr. Reed further states that the fact that the city has a sewage system is a valuable asset to the municipality, but he says that he can find no law that would allow such a thing as proposed by Mr. Graves.

Mr. Graves took the matter up because there is a large territory in the West End not touched by the city's sewers and probably will not be for some time, and yet the property-owners are assessed to maintain the system, although they derive no benefit, being obliged to stand the expense of cleaning their own cesspools. There are now plans underway for extending the sewer system in certain parts of the West End which will afford some relief.

RECITAL AND CONCERT ARTISTIC SUCCESS

Affair Under Auspices of Public Recreation Committee is Largely Attended.

That there is a large music loving public in Plainfield was conclusively demonstrated last night, when the first organ recital and concert under the auspices of the Public Recreation Committee was held in Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church before a cosmopolitan audience which filled every available seat. The program, artistic from every point of view, apparently met with the full approval of all present. The artists were Dr. E. Mettier Davis, organist of Crescent Avenue church; G. Stevenson, organist; Miss Lililian Vernon Watt, soprano and Miss Grace J. Carroll, contralto.

Miss Watt and Miss Carroll were especially pleasing in their duet, "Inis est homo" from Stabat Mater by Rossini, although the latter's singing of the favorite "Annie Laurie," and Miss Watt's rendition of another popular old air, "The Last Rose of Summer," were splendid. At the organ the duet by Dr. Davis and Mr. Stevenson, and the lively "Gavotta" and "Giga" by Corelli, rendered by Dr. Davis, were well received. At the conclusion of the program the audience rose and sang the "Star Spangled Banner."

Prior to the concert, G. Stuart Simons, on behalf of the Recreation Committee, extended thanks to the soloists for their services. The program follows:

Organ duetto, Scherzo, Wiegenlied, Reigen, Jensen, Dr. Davis and Mr. Stevenson; songs, Minstrel Boys (Irish, 1809), Little Red Fox (Old Irish), Annie Laurie ((Scotch, 1847), Miss Carroll; organ solo, Gavotta, Giga, Corelli; songs, Mussi denn (German, 1825), Over Fields (Scandinavian), Last Rose of Summer (Irish, 1806), Miss Watt; organ solo, Bouree, Bach; Cradle Song, Traditional Hebrew; Gavotte, Bach; duet, inis est homo (Stabat Mater), Rossini, Miss Watt and Miss Carroll; concerto for organ in G Minor, Handel, Adagio, Allegro, Adagio, Allegro.

JOHN E. ORCHARD SEEKS SEPARATION FROM WIFE

John E. Orchard, said to be a resident of Plainfield, and superintendent of a New York insurance company is suing his wife, Emma E. Orchard, of 20 Sidney place, Brooklyn, for a divorce. He testified yesterday before Vice-Chancellor Lewis, in the Jersey City Chancery Chambers, that his wife had told him she would either cut his throat or shoot him unless he stopped working nights at home, playing the piano and reading novels.

Orchard's wife who left him in the summer of 1910, with her twenty-year-old daughter, denied that she had ever threatened his life. She swore she had left him because of his failure to provide for her properly, and also because of his cruel treatment. The case is still on. Orchard is not known in Plainfield so far as could be learned today.

WOULD ASSESS MT. ST. MARY'S

North Plainfield Township Committee Believe College Should Be Taxed.

ADOPTED A RESOLUTION

Current Rumor Questions the Motive of Committee's Action Institution Exempt from Tax, it is Claimed by County Tax Board.

Decision of the Township Committee of North Plainfield, that Mount St. Mary College, on Mountain avenue, is subject to taxation and to try to force the placing of that property upon the assessment roll, has already occasioned considerable comment in the community. Last year Francis E. Bodin, assessor, of North Plainfield township, was instructed, through the passage of a similar resolution, to place the property mentioned on the assessment rolls at a valuation of $25,000. The rate is $2.26.

Discovery that Mount St. Mary College had never been taxed, was made by former Assemblyman William de La R. Anderson. It was he who prepared the resolution, ordering the placing of the school property upon the tax list, which was passed yesterday. There are those who declare that Assessor Bodin is not at all inclined to follow such instruction on the part of the Township Committee, believing that the college is clearly in the exempt class.

Current rumor has it that former Assemblyman Anderson, who is very active politically in the township, and who is said by his friends to have cast covetous eyes at the Congressional nomination, may have been actuated by some motive other than that of public spiritedness, in forcing the passage of the resolution ordering the placing of the school property upon the tax list. It is is known that Assessor Frank E. Bodin is a prospective candidate for the Assembly nomination on the Democratic ticket. His failure to place Mount St. Mary College upon the tax list last year might, it is said, be a shrewd political move to try to show that he had been derelict in his duties as a township official.

Declaration that Mount. St. Mary College is exempt from taxation has long since been made by the County Board of Taxation. Under the provisions of Chapter 208 of the 1903 tax law, in paragraph 4, it is specified that "all buildings actually and exclusively used for colleges, schools, academies and seminaries, and which are not conducted for profit, are exempt." While students at Mount St. Mary College pay a tuition fee, the sisters who act as instructors, give their services gratuitously. Question is raised by those who favor the exemption of the college as to whether the mere charging for tuition is equivalent to saying that the institution is conducted for profit. It is said the tuition fees alone would not provide sufficient money for the maintenance of the institution, and that no profits could possibly accrue. It is an interesting legal point that may be raised. Mount St. Mary College is well known. The buildings are fine, are surrounded with a five-acre estate, and cost about $250,000.

"Churches, free public schools and graveyards are non assessable," declared former Assemblyman Anderson today. "Everything else is assessable. If Mount St. Mary College is not taxed then why not exempt Dr. Groszmann's National Association for the Education and Study of the Exceptional Child, and that is an eleemosynary institution."

Andrew E. Kenney, a member of the County Board of Taxation, said today:

"The matter of whether Mount St. Mary College should be taxed came up before the county board at a meeting held last year, and it was decided that the property was exempt from taxation as it was a religious educational institution."

Assessor Francis E. Bodin, speaking of the matter, said:

"When a similar resolution was passed last year I sought advice in the matter and was told by the County Tax Board, and others, that Mount St. Mary College should not be assessed at that time. By that I mean that the college buildings and the five acres of ground immediately surrounding them, should not be assessed. Since then David T. Kenney has given the institution additional acreage. This will be assessed.

"It has been intimated that Mr. Anderson is playing politics in this matter, as I have been talked of as a candidate for the Assembly this fall. This may be an effort to belittle my chances by endeavoring to show that I do not do my duty."

Asked whether or not he would run for the Assembly, Mr. Bodin said the matter had not yet been definitely decided, but he thought it likely that he would be a candidate.

CORSET COMFORT IS NOT A MATTER OF TYPE, BUT ONE OF GOOD FIT

The bodily ease permitted by a corset is a thing that no manufacturer of a standard type can impart. This is distinctly a matter of fitting you properly—readjusting the corset you select to the peculiarities of the individual figure. We do this thing to perfection. Your figure is painstakingly and personally studied and the corset expertly fitted accordingly to what the figure suggests. This is the only logical method, and one that should not be entrusted to the inexperienced.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES

A new millinery class will start at the Y. W. C. A. on Monday evening. This class will meet twice a week, on Monday and Thursday evenings, for three weeks, in order that the work done in the class may be ready for early spring wear.

On Tuesday evening the girls of the G. Y. M. basketball team will go to Trenton to play the Trenton Association. The first game of the winter between these teams was a victory for the Plainfield girls, and they are hoping to bring the laurels home again.

Beginning Monday noon, the supper committee will serve simple refreshments. Many of the employes in the stores come to the association building with their lunches, and it is proposed to serve all of those who desire it with cocoa, soup, or tea, thus adding to the palatableness and nourishment of the cold lunch. The cocoa and soup will be served at cost price.

On Thursdays, from 12 to 12:30 at noon, a short Bible class will be conducted by Miss Smith, the general secretary. This will be called a "Lenten Course" and will deal with the women of the Bibie. Any who are interested are most cordially welcome at this class.

Mrs. Mead, the president of the association, will start in April for a journey around the world, and the Monday supper on March 30 will be a farewell to her and her two daughters. It is requested that all who can be present at this supper leave their names at the association office.

The song service on Sunday will be in charge of Miss Cadoo. On the two last Sundays of this month, March 22 and 29, Mrs. Robert Lowry will read aloud to the girls. These informal services are at 4 o'clock, and tea is served at 5. All women and girls are cordially invited to be present.

CURRENCY BILL DISCUSSED.

Chicago, Ill., March 13—The Western Economic Society, which was formed some time ago to aid in the creation and expression of public opinion on important social and economic questions, held a conference in this city, today, for a discussion of the new currency bill. Director of the Mint George E. Roberts and other will-known economic and financial experts presented papers dealing with the effect of the act on bank investments, its probable effects upon wage earners and various other phases of the subject.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN DEHART OBSERVE GOLDEN WEDDING

New Brunswick, March 13.—At their home at 99 Bayard street, almost directly opposite the house at 98 Bayard street, in which they started housekeeping Mr. and Mrs. John S. De Hart will celebrate their fiftieth wedding anniversary Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. De Hart were married in Addison, Steuben county, N. Y., in 1864, by the late Rev. Charles S. Fox. Mrs. De Hart was Miss Martha J. Curran. The couple had become acquainted here, Mrs. De Hart having taught a Bible class in the First Methodist Episcopal church prior to the Curran family departure to New York State.

Mr. De Hart was connected with the Prudential Life Insurance Company for thirty years, being located in Newark, Baltimore, Philadelphia and Reading, prior to becoming superintendent of the local branch.

Mr. and Mrs. De Hart have two sons, William G. and Anson W. De Hart. There are also four grandchildren, sons and daughters of William De Hart, two of whom make their home with their grandparents. Mr. De Hart has a brother, W. Edward De Hart, and a nephew, William G. Suydam.

PAY YOUR HOSPITAL PLEDGES.

Eight thousand dollars of the money which the people of Plainfield and nearby towns pledged to Muhlenberg Hospital during the campaign of two years ago has not been paid. That is over six per cent. of the amount promised, and shows that there are entirely too many people in this vicinity who take obligations of this kind too lightly, as in similar campaigns in other places the uncollected amount has not been three per cent.

It is a grave injustice to the board of governors of Muhlenberg Hospital for those who signed the pledges to neglect the moral obligation which they thus created. The promise of this money prompted the governors to make contracts for buildings and furnishing to facilitate caring for the sick of Plainfield. No pressure has been brought to bear upon the contributors, and the long period of time arranged for payment certainly prevented the pledges from becoming burdens. When the honor roll was published last summer, giving the names of every one who promised to contribute the board of governors took it for granted that all would pay what they had pledged. In view of this it is hard to believe that any Plainfield citizen would want to be put in the false light of having been credited with giving to the hospital and then not making good on his promise. It is sincerely to be hoped that every dollar pledged will be promptly forthcoming.

MENDHAM AGAIN.

Comment has been made in these columns on the new principle of publicity which has recently been adopted by the Mendham Board of Education, in which the public of that little community is taken into the confidence of the Board, with the idea of bettering the schools. We have told how the public was asked, on a return post card, to make any comment or criticism which they wished in order to give the school authorities an idea as to what the people realy wanted to see in their schools. Since that time other post cards sent out by this progressive body of public servants have been received by the Daily Press, each one carefully numbered as a "Help-Your-Own-School Bulletin."

No. 6 is a six sided post card, with the heading "Why our school needs more money next year," and before going into a lengthy and enlightening review of its needs four questions are asked to emphasize the explanation later made regarding school matters. These questions are "Have you felt the cost of living going up? Do you pay more for beef now than you did ten years ago? Do you pay more for butter than you did ten years ago? Does it cost you more to run your household than it used to?" Having put these thoughts in the mind of the taxpayer, the Board of Education proceeds to show that "the price of teachers has gone up too;" how Mendham salaries are below the average paid throughout the State; the possibility of State aid being withdrawn from the schools because of non-compliance with the requirements of the State Board of Education rules; the need of a supervising principal; the need of additions to the course of study; and last but by no means least, just exactly how much more taxes will have to be paid if all these things are brought about. The whole argument concludes with the question "Do you want to stay ashamed of Mendham's school when it can be made one of the best in the county?"

Bulletin No. 7 follows closely with an invitation to attend an entertainment and discussion at the borough hall tonight, at which moving pictures will be shown, the card saying "We want you to ask questions and give the Board the benefit of your suggestions about Mendham schools."

The treatment of the question which is agitating this little Morris county town at the present time, is the most enlightening one that has probably ever been attempted by any public body in the history of the State. The Board of Education is after the men and women who pay the bills, and by giving the widest publicity is making certain of school improvement which cannot be opposed for any sane reason. Virtually shaming the people of the community into making improvements which are obviously needed, the open-handed method adopted has made it impossible for knockers and kickers to criticise the schools, for the Board clearly demonstrate that it is through no fault of theirs that Mendham is not up to other places in the State. They show the way; it is up to the man who pays the bills to see that the funds are provided to bring about the improvements.

As has been pointed out, the Mendham example is one which might well be followed by Boards of Education everywhere. Taking the public into confidence strengthens every body, whether it be City Council, Board of Education, Board of Health, or any other group of city employes. The action of the Mendham Board of Education warrants copying.

The movement started by the New Jersey State Federation of Women's Clubs to raise $100,000 for the erection of a woman's building in connection with the State college at Rutgers is a commendable one. As was pointed out in the column in last night's Daily Press conducted by the local Mothers' Association, no one doubts that were such a building provided the New Jersey Legislature would make provision for the education of the young women who might be sent to such an institution. To be one of only four States which does not provide college education for the young women within its borders is no proud distinction for New Jersey. It seems to us that the women of the State could soon raise the sum desired in one dollar contributions, as is proposed, and every one of the 100,000 women who so contribute would feel that she had a part in the creation of this needed educational institution.

Borough school problems being of more than passing interest, we have asked Mrs. Matthew H. Ewart to prepare the contributed editorial for tomorrow's Press. Mrs. Ewart has taken a very active interest in the schools of North Plainfield, and what she has to say will be well worth reading.

THE FORUM.

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

Permit me in behalf of the small taxpayer of this city, the workman, who owns a little home and finds taxes ever increasing till for some of us they almost mean confiscation, to protest against paying the fictitious price $36,000 for the Darling farm. I am not unmindful of the fact that when the public wants anything for a special purpose, they have to pay a special price, but I happen to know something of this farm and the value that the owner placed upon it before there was any talk of the city acquiring it. One-half of $36,000 was then probably beyond his wildest dreams, not to mention that even this sum would have been 100% more than its value as a farm. Why have we taxpayers got to be so unmercifully fleeced?

REPORTED ENGAGED.

Miss Eleanor Wilson and Secretary William G. McAdoo.

Miss Eleanor Randolph Wilson, youngest daughter of the president, is reported engaged to Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, and there is no denial of the report Secretary McAdoo, who is the builder of the Hudson tunnels, said that it would be indelicate for him to comment on the story in any way. Official Washington accepts the story, which says that the wedding will take place at the White House in June, after the adjournment of congress. If so it will be the second White House wedding during the administration, Miss Jennie Wilson having been married to Francis Bowes Sayre last year.

M'ADOO IS ENGAGED TO ELEANOR WILSON

Unofficial Report Brings Forth No Denial.

Washington, March 13.—The rumor of the engagement of Miss Eleanor Wilson, youngest daughter of the president, to Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, which has been current both in the capital and elsewhere, is again in circulation. This time there was no denial of the report, and official Washington accepted the version which put the date of the wedding in June after the adjournment of congress.

When Secretary McAdoo was questioned regarding the report he said simply that it would be indelicate for him to comment on it in any way.

If the report is true the wedding will be the second in the White House in this administration Miss Jessie Wilson and Francis Bowes Sayre were married there last November.

There was no announcement concerning the story from the White House today, although the report had wide publicity. When persons close to the president had their attention drawn to it they refrained from either denying or affirming it.

Secretary McAdoo's friends were not surprised at the report, for in the last year he has been one of the most frequent social visitors at the White House.

Mr. McAdoo is fifty years old and a widower with six children. He is also a grandfather through the recent birth of a son to his eldest daughter, now in Arionza. His second son, Francis H. McAdoo, was married last spring in Baltimore.

Miss Wilson is twenty-four years old She was educated in private schools in Princeton, N. J. Like her mother, she is an artist of considerable ability and devoted to the study of painting.

ELIAS H. BONNELL IS SERIOUSLY ILL

Elias Herbert Bonnell, whose wife Mrs. Mary B. Bonnell, died at the family home, at Short Hills, on Wednesday night, is seriously ill, his condition having been aggravated by the nervous shock of his wife's death. The funeral of the late Mrs. Bonnell will be held on Sunday afternoon at the family residence. Rev. Dr. George A. Liggett, pastor of the Springfield Presbyterian church, will conduct the service. He will be assisted by Rev. William Hoppaugh, a former pastor of that church, and Rev. Dr. Charles Townsend, pastor of the First church, of Orange. Mrs Bonnell was born in Plainfield and lived here until shortly after her marriage.

TALKING PICTURES.

This afternoon and evening there will be a showing of the famous Edison talking pictures at the Y. M. C. A. It will be the first time these pictures have been shown in this city since Edison, the inventor, succeeded in perfect the idea which is highly novel and is destined, it is believed, to revolutionize the moving picture business.

The Salvation Army will conduct services at the Rescue Mission tonight at 8 o'clock.

MRS. ROBERT S. MANNING DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Mrs. Robert S. Manning died this morning, after a long illness, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Richard Henry Depew, on Hillside avenue. Mrs. Manning had been a resident of Plainfield for many years and was an active member of the Crescent Avenue church.

She is survived by her two daughters, Mrs. David F. Manning, of Brooklyn, and Mrs. Richard Henry Depew, of Plainfield, and a son, J. Harry Manning, also of Plainfield, former general secretary of the Y. M. C. A.

MISSIONARY SOCIETY'S ACTIVITIES REVIEWED

The Woman's Missionary Society of Hope chapel held its annual rally, yesterday afternoon, at which time the various aspects of home missions were discussed, the subjects being ably presented by Miss Abbie Upham and Miss Josephine Petrie, both of whom are members of the Presbyterian Board of Home Missions. Mrs. G. Herbert Condict, president of the society, also spoke of the work being accomplished through the activities of the church on the mission field.

At the close of the session refreshments were served. The committee of arrangements consisted of Mrs. F. L. Greene, Mrs. F. L. Dencklau, Mrs James Heron, Mrs. Thomas Brown Mrs. Frank Rimmer, Mrs. Thomas Hendry and Mrs. Donald McInnis.

SUCCESSFUL SUPPER AT MT. ZION A. M. E. CHURCH

A successful turkey supper was held last night at Mt. Zion A. M. E. church, under the auspices of the Strangers' Club, at which time eighty-two people were served. During the evening a program of instrumental and vocal music was given under the direction of Miss Iola Hicks and Thomas Hill. Addresses were made by the Rev. J. W. Bailey, Rev. M. W Vaughn, Rev. F. D. Tildon and Rev. M. A. Alexander.

The committee of arrangements consisted of Mrs. Ida Britton, Mrs. A. J. Maynard, Mrs. Margaret Wood. Miss Anna Brown, Mrs. Ruth Watson, Mrs. Agnes Conway and Mrs. J. A. Hendrickson.

DISCONTINUANCE OF SERVICE CAUSE FOR COMPLAINT

Considerable dissatisfaction and annoyance has resulted through the discontinuance of the auto bus service between this city and Metuchen and New Brunswick. The vehicles, which previously have made five round trips a day, have ceased running since the storm of March 1, but absolutely no information has, it is said, been given the local public as to such discontinuance. Almost every day persons congregate at the starting point of the auto buses, expecting to take passage to either one of the points named. They have all been disappointed and there has been much grumbling.

While the company has made no statement as to when the regular running schedule will be resumed it is understood that many of the roads in the outlying districts are still in an almost impassable condition. A narrow track has, of course, been broken, but difficulty is experienced in passing other vehicles. It will probably be some days before the trips of the Metuchen-New Brunswick buses can be resumed.

WILL DISCUSS ADVERTISING.

A meeting of the executive committee of the Business Men's Association was held in the store of Sam Rothberg, on West Front street, this morning, when it was decided to hold a special session of the organization at the headquarters of the association Monday night. At that time plans will be fully discussed in reference to advertising Plainfield and the Business Men's Association.

PHYSICIAN TO LOCATE HERE.

Dr. Ellis Campers, of New York, has leased the Dreier property at Front and New streets, and will take possession on April 15. Dr. Campers has been practicing medicine and surgery in the metropolis for several years, but has frequently been called to Plainfield professionally. He is a nephew of Morris Abrams, of Grove street.

ANOTHER BURGLARY.

Sometime last night thieves entered the store occupied by the Boise Stationery Company in the Babcock building and took $25 in money besides a quantity of supplies. Entrance was gained through a back window and there is no clue to the miscreant.

GOES ON WESTERN TRIP.

Frank Schuck, of Vine street, left this afternoon for St. Paul, Minn., where he will erect a large color press for the Walter Scott Company. Later, he will go to Milwaukee and Chicago for the same purpose. He will be away three months in all.

NO DECISION REACHED IN ORACLE BOARD'S ELECTION

An election for the business manager of the Plainfield High School Oracle board has been called for next Monday, no majority having been reached for a candidate in the first balloting. The three nominees for the position, Herbert Peacock, Daniel F. McNamee and and Morris Mann, will be voted on again at that time.

The following juniors were elected as reporters: Harold Davis, Randolph Stelle, Roger Cockburn and Muriel Cockburn. The junior and freshman representatives have not been decided upon as yet.

—John Giles and John Bremble, who have been ill at Muhlenberg hospital, have been discharged from that institution.

Women's Spring Clothes At Moderate Prices

Special Preparations Made for this Week-End—Smart Taffeta Dresses, $16.50 to $18.75—New, Interesting Suits at $25

A new dress worn now means that one gets twice as much enjoyment and wear out of it than if one waited until later on.

And as March came in like a lion, it will go out like a lamb, and then Spring will be here in real earnest.

Women's Gray Salons present a thousand new things—among them these three large collections, new and fresh and altogether interesting:

Fifty Taffeta Dresses at $16.50

From a manufacturer who operates so largely that he can get even a silk as scarce as taffeta at his own price.

They are in the pretty styles of the moment—puffs or ruffled plain tunics, and every dress has the new high collars. Practically every color, including black.

Fifty Taffeta Dresses at $18.75

Nine models just out of the boxes. One charming model has bodice and picturesque paniers of printed crepe, another has the five-tier skirt, majority have touches of lace—indeed almost every fashionable note of the season may be seen in these attractive frocks. Desirable colors—all sizes.

Ten Good Styles of Spring Suits at $25

This is the best collection of tailored suits we can recall presenting at this moderate price.

Considerable individuality is expressed in each suit. The models are decidedly varied—either conservative or adapted from the later French suits, and every suit is well made. Gabardine, wool crepe, wool with serge, wool moire, taffeta, silk moire. All sizes in every suit except those of silk moire, and orders will be taken for the silk moire in any regular size and color at the same low price of $25.

Blue, tan, green, black.

Exhibition of Spring Millinery at Wanamaker's

What tiny hats.

Who made them? Who ever thought of them?

Rabajoi, the Paris artist.

Rabajoi made the sketches in Paris one sunny winter morning.

He made fashion sketches and decided it would be amusing to crown them with hats such as men wore fifty years ago. Suzanne Talbot, the great Paris milliner saw his sketches, and in almost no time those clever sketches became even cleverer hats of straw and ribbon.

They are the dernier cri de Paris.

Every Parisienne of the beau monde is wearing them.

They are being shown in the Wanamaker Formal Exhibition of Spring and Summer millinery direct from Paris.

Rabajoi, the celebrated Paris fantasiist and caricaturist, who has his studio in the Wanamaker Store, New York, during his three weeks' stay in America, has seen the hats here. He has approved of their chic. They add a wonderfully interesting note to the silhouette of the Spring.

Besides these, there is an extraordinary variety of hats this year. Becoming hats. Artistic hats. Hats of every size and shape and color. Hats with flowers, with feathers, with ribbon.

Marcelle Demay, who shows her hats only at Wanamaker's in all America, has sent to her patrons her latest exclusive originalities, including the picturesque models le Marquiset, le Sphinx, le Lajinska, le Micois, le Pompeii, le Rendervous, le Canaba, le Raphael.

Georgette introduces a large leghorn hat with a quantity of fruit and grapes and two loops of dark blue taffeta ribbon laid down flat in the back.

Valentine About presents a feminine and youthful hat of printed cotton crepe with roses and forget-me-nots in the back.

Evelyn Varon presents a beautiful hat of leghorn, with blue ostrich and roses, an exact copy of a painting in the Louvre Museum—a hat that almost any woman can wear well.

Paul Poiret, Groult, Madeline, Lewis, Maria Guy, Jeanne Lanvin and many other celebrated Paris milliners are represented in the notable collection of Paris hats at Wanamaker's.

They are individual hats, which will make a woman look even more beautiful if she wears them properly. Her hair must be perfectly coiffed, her hat must be worn at exactly the right angle, its color must blend with her gown and the style of her hat should carry out the character of her gown.

If her gown is of the Merveilleuse period her hat should be Merveillouse to correspond.

If her gown is Louis XV period her hat should be Louis XV.

If her gown is 1830, her hat also should be 1830.

The Wanamaker Millinery Salons are fully ready to provide hats of every period. In addition there are French people in charge of the work rooms and Salons, who understand the type of hats suited to every type of woman.

If a hat needs adjusting, it is adjusted perfectly. If a hat must be designed, it is made just as a perfect gown is made to measure.

There is no need to wear a hat that is unbecoming if you seek your Spring bonnet at Wanamaker's.

GREATEST SEASON OF BASKETBALL FOR CITY AND COUNTY CHAMPIONS

The North Plainfield High School basketball team has just finished one of the finest seasons that has ever been completed in the history of the school along that line of athletics. In many ways the team this year has excelled those of past years. Three members of the team played for their first year on the varsity, while the other two have had two years of experience previously. The final average of the team is .85, over two hundred points above that of last season.

At the beginning of the season the team made a fine record by winning the first thirteen games that were played. The initial reverse came when the Passaic High School team took a decisive contest at that place. Four straight then went to North Plainfield's side and then Morristown broke in and took a close one. Two of the defeats came in the last week of the season when the Y. M. C. A. and Rutgers each took one. Plainfield High School was the other lucky team.

Individual records have been made and smashed during the course of the year and at the finish, the one man high score mark for a team was a tie between two of the members of the team. Fourteen baskets is the year's record and is held by Van Mater and Dunning. Conroy, the little substitute, came within two of this mark with an even dozen, and Love has scored ten in forty minutes. Captain Ashley Burner has established a unique record in that he has played for 1,075 minutes, which is just five minutes out of the game for the entire season. He is one of the two men who have taken part in every game. All of the subs have taken part in at least ten games and all have contributed to the score while playing. Not until the latter part of last month was the team beaten on its home court and then Plainfield took the first game and the Y. M. C. A. the second, which makes the majority of the defeats on strange courts. Four times the team has been behind at the end of the initial period and by hard and fast work has pulled to the front in the last few minutes of play.

The highest point getter on the team was Dunning, who rolled in 170 baskets in the 27 games for a total of 340 points. This gives the centre an average of 6.3 goals per game. Van Mater is second in field goals with 97 to his credit and with nine fouls he has an average of 7.8 points a game. Burner and Abrams at guard, have contributed 94 and 34 points respectively.

For the first time since basketball has been an acknowledged sport in the borough school the Plainfield team was held to less than ten points. The team averaged 149 pounds in weight. Paul Collier, who coached the team all season, is to be given a large amount of the credit for the great success of the team.

The boroughites fared exceedingly well in the city scholastic league and only lost one game against five victories, which gives the team a league per cent. of .833. Three of the men of the first team were picked for the All-Star team by the Daily Press and two others were on the second squad, giving the champions five out of the ten players. The Somerset county title was won easily.

The complete summary follows:

GEO. SUTTON HALF CENTURY.

New York, March 13—The hoodoo combination of a birthday on Friday the thirteenth, may account for George Sutton's recent defeats in his billiard contests with Willie Hoppe. It was fifty years ago today that Sutton was born in the town of Waverly, N. Y. He took to the cue game very early in life and has long been looked upon as one of the veterans of the green table sport, notwithstanding the fact that he is still a comparatively young man so far as years are concerned. In his time Sutton has held both the 18.1 and 18.2 championships. At delicate work he excels all others of the noted experts. When conditions are favorable and the ivories respond to his nip draw strokes and gentle close work, he makes some extraordinary runs and averages. His average of 100 in 500, made against Hoppe in an 18.2 championship tournament, in Madison Square Garden in 1906, stood for years as the best on record.

DOG SHOW IN ROCHESTER.

Rochester, N. Y., March 13.—With an entry lise exceeding the most sanguine expectations of the promoters, the initial bench show of the new Genessee Valley Kennel Club, was opened here today and will be continued over tomorrow. Many of the best known kennels of the Eastern States and Canada have sent their prize-winning dogs to the exhibition.

"Sportdom Tips"

There is little telling to what extremes the present baseball war will develop before it comes to some sort of a definite ending. The way things have been going the last two weeks augurs poorly for the success of the Federal League movement. Their most bitter disappointment of all came when the unsigned world's tourists—with the single exception of Mike Doolan—refused to go over to the new organization and instead, put their signatures on contract of the clubs they had played with last year. But that is only part of their worries.

Even the weather seems to have been in connivance with organized baseball to thwart the plans of the outlaw promoters. The big snowstorms that struck the eastern part of the country at a time when the Feds had reason to believe the weather was about to become mild hit a hard blow at one end of their scheme. The big snowfall means that the eastern teams of the circuit that have to build new grand stands—Brooklyn and Buffalo—will be unable to open their season at home until along in June, whereas the original intention was to have the stands built and games played in the new parks by the middle of May at the latest. It now is an utter impossibility for these parks to be ready until at least a month later.

The agents of organized baseball have circumvented the Feds in a number of other ways. Recently Bill Bradley, representing Brooklyn, gumshoed into Hot Springs bent on signing up some of the players of various big league teams training there, but he left empty handed. Vean Gregg, although already under contract with the Cleveland Naps, was the man most sought after. Bradley's visit there followed the sweeping declaration of war by the Feds to the effect that they would use the major leaguers' tactics and go after all the men they could find, regardless of whether they were signed to contracts or not. Gregg, it is learned, was the first man approached under this new order. But Owner Somers, of the Naps, kept Gregg in line, offering to increase the amount of money his contract called for.

It now seems likely that, whenever a case like Gregg's arises, the organized ball magnates will raise the ante again. If they do this, the Feds will have to pay prohibitive prices to get any more players. The war seems to be resolving itself into a proposition of bigger figures every day.

It is to be hoped, however, that the strife will not become so acute as to reach the state where one side will attempt to burn down the opposition's stands. Let us have all the other weapons of warfare, but bar fire.

The athletics and Cubs will move over to Jacksonville, Fla., Monday, to renew hostilities in that series, the first half of which wound up today with the game in Tampa. These games are providing an unusually early morsel of real action for the fans who read reports of doings from the southland. There are three games left to play in the series, the finale being staged Wednesday, unless it should result in a tie, in which case a deciding contest may be arranged for the following day.

The next inter-league series of note on the boards will begin March 26, with the Washington Senators and Phillies as contenders. This also will be of three games duration, winding up Saturday, March 28.

Exactly one month from tomorrow the two old major leagues begin their 1914 hostilities. The day is April 14, a Tuesday. This ordinarily would be stock-taking time, when every self-styled expert in the land would be penning volumes stating exactly which teams will win the pennants and where every other club will finish in the two leagues. Not so this time, however. There are too many possibilities in this baseball war time. The Feds may break any team by luring away two or three stars, so that the opening lineups cannot be predicted with any degree of certainty. However, just to see how much developments between now and opening time will change the outlook, here goes for an early wild guess at the final standings of the clubs in the two leagues:

American—Philadelphia Athletics, first; Chicago White Sox, second; Washington Senators, third; Cleveland Naps, fourth; New York Yankees, fifth; Boston Red Sox, sixth; Detroit Tigers, seventh; St. Louis Browns, last.

National—New York Giants, first; Pittsburgh Pirates, second; Boston Braves, third; Philadelphia Phillies, fourth; Chicago Cubs, fifth; Brooklyn Dodgers, sixth; Cincinnati, seventh; St. Louis Cardinals, last.

Several big changes are noted in this order over the finish of last season, due largely to the activity of the Federal League in snaring various regulars of the different teams.

Oh yes, the Federal League is going to stage a pennant race. So a blind shy at its ultimate standing might be considered in order too, although in some cases only a few players are known to belong to a team. Here goes

Chicago, first; Baltimore, second; Brooklyn, third; St. Louis, fourth; Indianapolis, fifth; Kansas City, sixth; Buffalo, seventh; Pittsburgh, last.

Branch Rickey's bright idea to abolish cigarette smoking in the ranks of the St. Louis Browns through giving away two-for-a-quarter cigars, suggests still another scheme. Why not servie free beer after each game to break up the whiskey habit?

Old Hans Wagner is about to enter upon his eighteenth season as a big leaguer. All this time he has been working for one club owner, Barney Dreyfuss, who had the Louisville team on which Honus played before he moved to Pittsburgh. Even a Federal Leaguer cannot but wish the veteran another successful season.

It will be recalled that, before the world's tour of the Giants and White Sox began, Comiskey and McGraw had a hard time lining up enough players for the party. Hardly any wanted to go, and yet it looked to laymen like the chance of a lifetime—to get a free trip around the globe, and as heroes too. Bet Ping Bodie, Rube Marquard and Nick Altrock are sorry now they didn't go, when they think of all the banquets the tourists inflicted their appetites upon.

Recent happenings make it appear as if Johnny McGraw's managerial talent may have to be called upon more extensively this year than seemed likely awhile ago. As it looks now, the Giants will have the same strong pitching staff and a remarkable group of outfield talent. But his catching staff has been curtailed by the departure of Hartley, who was traded to Cincinnati, and Wilson, who jumped to the Federals, and his infield has suffered by the breaking of Fletcher's finger and the trade of Herzog to Cincinnati, to say nothing of the possibility that Shafer may decide not to play this year. Thus, McGraw's pitching corps is the same as last year, the outfield is quite a bit stronger as the result of Bescher's acquisition in the Cincinnati trade and the improvement of Thorpe on the world's tour, as well as the addition of Dave Robertson, the Southern League slugger. But McGraw's outfield was so strong last year that even the greatest possible increase of power in this department could not help the team very much. His infield was the one part of the team that showed any considerable uncertainty, and that is the department that is hurt by the recent developments. Thus the National League pennant race may be more of a real contest for the Giants than many imagine. If Fletcher is out of the game very long and if Shafer refuses to play, the Giants' infield is likely to be made up of Eddie Grant at shortstop, Milton Stock, the youngster, at third, and the two regulars, Merkle and Doyle, at first and second respectively. But the Giants carry so much pitching and batting power that they may be able to offset any weakness caused by the possible gap on the left side of the infield

Last fall Hank O'Day said "Vindicated!" when the Reds, which had finished fourth under him the previous year, landed in seventh place under Joe Tinker. Will Johnny Evers say "Vidicated!" when he sees what the Cubs do in the coming campaign? If he does, Evers must remember that Johnny Evers was playing second base when Evers managed the Cubs and that Evers was a better man than any second baseman O'Day has to fill Evers' vacancy.

Ed Walsh will be the center of much interest this year. If the big iron man can come back after his disappointing season last year, when he "threw his arm out" early, the White Sox are likely to give the Athletics some kind of a battle for the pennant. Outside of Walter Johnson, the Washington paragon, Rebel Russell and Death Valley Jim Scott were about the hardest pitchers to face in the American League last year. With Walsh back in shape, it will be possible for the White Sox to have a real star in the box practically every day. Farmer Benz is not such a dub either, and could fill in every fourth day. Such a steady rotation—Walsh, Scott, Russell and Benz—with the added possibility that some youngster of worth may be developed this spring, would make the Sox the choice of all dopesters for second place in the league race, almost entirely regardless of how the rest of the team may shape up. If Hal Chase at first base and Hary Lord at third should come back to their old sensational form, the Athletics would face a team in the White Sox capable of giving them a run right to the home stretch.

Mike Donlin is going to attempt a comeback as pinch hitter for the Giants. It will be a great season for the Polo Grounds bleacherites if they get a chance to kid with Mike again. Ty Cobb has robbed Mike of some of his kidding laurels since the former National League batting leader has been in retirement, and jealousy may spur Donlin on to pull more stuff this year than ever before.

Joe Wood is the tough luck pitcher of modern times. After putting in a bad year last year due to a sore shoulder, the smokey one has had to undergo an operation for appendicitis. Latest reports indicate his recovery from the operation, but it is extremely doubtful whether he will be able to do his share of the work for the Red Sox at all this year. If he pitches at all, it is certain he will not be able to get in harness until along in June. Jack Coombs, of the Athletics, who was out of it through illness last year, is another man who will attempt a comeback.

JOHNSON "HISSED" OUT.

Stockholm, March 13.—"Jack" Johnson, the American negro pugilist, who was to have engaged in wrestling matches with Jess Pedersen and others in Gothenberg, has been forced to leave Sweden owing to the hostile demonstrations against him. Johnson was hissed in the streets, and, as in England, could get no hall to stage the matches.

Query—Why is the city closed up tight by city officials on Sunday? Consider the working man who toils six days a week and is not able to enjoy his one day off because of restrictions. Why don't they leave the saloons open on Sunday?—K. D. T.

Answer—Our city fathers evidently have some good reasons to clamping the lid on tight and we will have to leave the matter up to them. However, there are lots of other places besides saloon where a man can get enjoyment, even though he is an honest laborer.

MELON CUTTING A BIG AFFAIR

LOCAL TOASTMASTER

Queen City Pinner Presents Leading Prizes to the Winners—Newark Bowlers Figure Prominently in the Proceedings.

Plainfield was well represented at the annual dinner of the Elks' Bowling League, held in the Jersey City Elks' Hall, last night, the affair taking the form of a beefsteak spread with all the fixin's. Johnny Campbell, of Bound Brook, secretary of the league, served in the capacity of toastmaster, and handled his subjects in an efficient and interesting manner. While the Queen City was not much in the limelight during the distribution of prizes, the delegates from this city took an active part in the social side of the evening and before the festivities were concluded it was a well known fact that Plainfield was represented.

The gathering numbered 250 and the affair was a marked success in every way. A cabaret performance was in progress during the dinner and a number of the lodges supplied their representatives with various noise making implements.

The Newark bowlers and their friends were present in large numbers, and to them went the trophy emblematic of the team championship. Howard Williams, Alec Hinton, Fred Clark, Billy Weingarth and Dick Erler made up the champion team. The Perlmutter trophy, donated by Joseph and Henry Perlmutter, of the Jersey City Elks, went to the Newarkers. It was presented by Johnny Campbell, and accepted by Exalted Ruler Daniel F. Gaven, of Newark. A check for $70 also went to the Newark team. The New Brunswicks took the second prize of $50, third prize went to Paterson, fourth to Jersey City and fifth to Hoboken.

The Radel trophy, donated by Edward Radel, of New Brunswick, to the team scoring the highest average during the season, went to the Elizabeth Elks, who had a mark of 917-10. This, too, was presented by Toastmaster Johnny Campbell, and it was accepted by Exalted Ruler George Otto, of Elizabeth. A gold medal, donated by Hugh McGuire, was awarded to the veteran Charlie Starr, of New York, for having the high individual score of 268. Starr, however, was not present to accept his prize. The first individual average prize of $20 went to Henry Clauss, of Elizabeth, who had a mark of 191-20. Second individual average prize of $15 went to Timothy Coyne, of New Brunswick, who had 189-31, and the third individual average prize of $10 went to Charley Greenewald, of New Brunswick, who had 187. Fourth prize of $8 went to Walter Burton, of New Brunswick, with 184-39; fifth, $5, to Harry Taylor, of Paterson, 184-6, and sixth, $2.50, to Thomas Corydon, of Jersey City, 185-36.

The committee from the Jersey City Elks in charge of the affair consisted of Joseph Perlmutter, Thomas F. Rooney, Archibald Miller, Hugh McGuire, Walter Burton and Patricius McCartney.

SPRINTERS TO COMPETE.

St. Louis, Mo., March 13—Star sprinters representing colleges and clubs throughout a large sectoon of the country are headed toward the Coliseum in this city, where the second annual indoor relay carnival of the Missouri Athletic Club, will take place tomorrow night under conditions that promise the most notable event of its kind ever pulled off in St. Louis. The big event of the program will be a fifty-yard dash, with some of the fastest runners of the Eastern and Western universities as the contestants. Those announced to take part are Oliver Reller, of Cornell University, the junior national A. A. U. champion; J. Murray, University of Illinois; T. O' Neil, University of Kansas; J. E. Patterson, University of Pennsylvania; Irving Delote, Chicago Athletic Association, and C. O. Parker, Illinois A. C., holder of the Western conference championship for 100 yards.

JUNIOR LEAGUE WILL BE FORMED BY ELKS

Opinion Expressed Last Night Assures Formation of Such a Circuit for Next Year.

Opinions expressed by speakers at the annual reception of the Elks' Bowling League held in the Jersey City clubhouse, last night, indicate that a junior Elks' Bowling League will be one of the features of this organization next season. In an address following the dinner George Hetzel, of New Brunswick, advocated such a body and his remarks met with universal acceptance.

Several times during the past season efforts have been made to launch such a league but the late start made the formation impossible for this year. It is planned to begin work on the new project at once and when the senior league gets under way next fall a junior organization will also be ready to engage in a series of contests. Several lodges already in the league have expressed a desire to place a junior quintet in the minor league and it seems probable that an eight team circuit will be the outcome.

Plainfield is one of the towns that will be included on the circuit and the club tournament now in progress is doing much toward bringing to the surface the available material for a junior five man team. Other towns that have already been heard from on the subject are Jersey City Newark New Brunswick and Rahway.

CHAMPION RITCHIE VICTOR OVER CHALLENGER WOLGAST

Milwaukee, Wis., March 13.—Willie Ritchie, the lightweight champion outpointed Ad Wolgast, from whom he took the title more than a year ago, in a ten-round bout here last night.

The boys went at a fast pace all the way, but Ritchie's superiority was in evidence at every stage. Wolgast tried to carry the fight to his conqueror, but the latter was a more clever boxer and he took full advantage of the opportunities that Wolgast offered him when he tried to force matters.

RUTGERS COLLEGE PLANNING FOR A BANNER TRACK YEAR

Indoor work in preparation for the track season at Rutgers College has already begun. Captain Arthur Mershon, of Rahway, issued his call Wednesday, about thirty men responding. All of last year's team are eligible except Silvers and Johnson, who were lost by graduation. Among the new men who are expected to gain places are Robert Nash, shot put, David Abt quarter mile, and George Bower sprinter. The schedule, just announced by Manager Elliott, is one of the hardest in recent years and includes dual meets with Stevens, Swarthmore, Lafayette and New York University. The complete schedule follows:

April 15—Penn relays at Philadelphia.

May 1—Stevens at New Brunswick.

May 9—Swarthmore at Swarthmore.

May 13—Lafayette at New Brunswick.

May 23—New York University at New York.

May 26—Interstate championships at Franklin and Marshall.

June 6—Intercollegate championships at Cambridge.

June 6—Interscholastic championships at New Brunswick.

McGRAW GETS $30,000 PER.

Marlin, Tex., March 13.—Manager John J. McGraw is the highest salaried man in baseball. The reputed salaries of Tris Speaker, Ty Cobb, Joe Tinker and other well paid "slaves" are mere piker stipends to the annual amount of coin handed over to the Giants' manager from the Metropolitan Exhibition Company's strong box. Last year McGraw received $30,000 as salary from the New York Club and will get the same amount this year and for three more, for the new contract he signed last winter at that yearly salary has four more years to run.

ALUMNI GAME OFF.

The basketball game originally scheduled for tonight on the Saengerbund Hall court with the Plainfield and North Plainfield High School feminine Alumni teams as opponents has been called off by mutual consent of the two managers.

FINE TESTIMONIAL TO BORO TEAMS

DANCE AFTER BANQUET

Mothers of Victorious Athletes Arrange Fitting Celebration as a Finale to a Season of Successful Competition—Speeches by Guests.

The girls' and boys' basketball teams of the North Plainfield High School were honored for their fine season's records, last night, in the manual training rooms of the Somerset School, when twelve of the mothers of the borough gave a supper and dance. The entertainment surpassed anything that has ever been given in the borough institution in the way of a testimonial and was made even more interesting by the fine speeches and presentations that took place after the repast.

Forty-eight persons sat down to the tables which were very artistically arranged about the room. The decorations were simple, but attractive, everything being made up in the school colors, maroon and black High School pennants were hung about the room and red carnations adorned each table. In the centre of the room was the honored guests table in the middle of which was placed the coveted Abrams' trophy, which was won by the boys. This table was occupied by Principal Albert Earley, Supervising Principal and Mrs. A. B. Vossler and Jacob Abrams, donor of the interscholastic trophy. The place cards were hand painted and represented the High School seal with streamers of maroon and black. The favors were little baskets of these colors, which were filled with dainty sweets.

The supper, served in five courses, was of a progressive style. During the first course each fellow was with his partner, but after that he took his napkin, toothpick and glass of water, and progressed to another table, while his partner remained seated. In this way every one met everybody else during the course of the meal.

After the dinner, Mrs. Oliver Ewart introduced Principal Earley as toastmaster. He called upon Ashley Burner to toast Mr. and Mrs. Vossler, and the basketball captain returned in fine style. By request of the toastmaster, Duncan VanMater toasted the girls along athletic lines and then, amidst great shouting and cheering, Mr. Abrams presented the trophy to the school. Captain Burner made a speech of thanks on behalf of his school.

Coach Paul Collier was then called upon for a few words and he commended the spirit of the fellows, of the team and of the student body also the girls. Before he finished Mr. Collier presented to the school a large maroon and black banner.

The greatest surprise of the evening came to Lester Chandler, who has coached the girls' team all this season, when he was presented with a sweater by the Girls' Athletic Association. The gift was presented by Miss Edna Green, president of the association, and was made in the form of a poem. The last presentation of the evening was made by Miss Elsie Debble, captain of the girls team, and Miss Helen K. Ray, was the one to be called this time. This gift was also from the Girls' Athletic Association and was given in appreciation of Miss Ray's work as chaperon of the team. She received a large High School pillow of maroon and black.

Principal Earley then called upon Mr. Vossler for a speech and the latter talked very interestingly about the North Plainfield High School spirit.

Mrs. Ewart was the last one to speak. Following this part of the evening's entertainment the party went to Saengerbund Hall, where dancing was enjoyed until midnight. This part of the program was open to the public and about two hundred persons were present. Punch and cake were served between dances.

The receiving committee was composed of Mrs. Andrew E. Kenney and Mrs. E. A. Lowe. The following mothers were the hostesses: Mrs James Love, Mrs. James Bailey, Mrs Andrew E. Kenney, Mrs. E. A. Lowe Mrs. Frank Rowley, Mrs. William Smalley, Mrs. John Brizzie, Mrs. Arthur Canon, Mrs. Oliver Ewart, Mrs W. O. Taylor and Mrs. Fred Burner. Many of the other women of the borough contributed liberally to the "feed." Stephen Haff, manager of the Ritz, donated all of the ice cream, napkins and nuts that were used.

APGAR STANDS THIRD.

Neaf Apgar, Plainfield's representative in the professional sharpshooters' championship tournament being run in connection with the Grand Central Palace Sportsman's and Travel Show, finished second in yesterday's round, breaking forty-four out of a possible fifty clay pigeons. Apgar now stands in third place, having broken 252 out of a possible 300. J. M. Hawkins is first with 265 to his credit.

RUBBER GAME WENT TO QUINTET NO. 8

John Cose and His Youngsters Blew in First With Six Pins to Spare.

John Cose's Elk pinners won the rubber match of their series with Hary VanEmburgh's colts on the club alleys, last night, by a margin of six pins. After winning the initial combat with thirty-nine pins to spare the Cose crew dropped the second encounter by twenty-two pins.

The only double century score of the series came in the third game when Captain VanEmburgh toppled over 223 of the wooden images and set up a high water mark for the evening. Cose's team set up the high team score in the last game with a mark of 813.

RIVAL SCHOOL TEAMS WILL BE BANQUETED

Plainfield and North Plainfield to Be Brought Together Next Week.

Those interested in Plainfield and North Plainfield athletics have suggested a gathering of the two basketball teams sometime during the coming week, the affair to take the form of a reception and dance. Rumor of a bitter feeling that is said to exist between the two forces has been going the rounds and such a gathering would probably serve to smooth matters over. Something should be done prior to the opening of the baseball season with a competition between the same two schools scheduled and it now seems probable that the forces will be brought together at some kind of a social gathering next week.

Parents of the various players have become interested in the movement and the marked success of the reception tendered the North Plainfield athletes, last night, could no doubt be duplicated with the rival teams as guests. The gathering would not only serve to wipe out any bitter feeling but would also tend to produce a more friendly spirit of athletic rivalry for competition that will come in the future.

BRANDYWINE PINNERS TOOK TWO OUT OF THE SERIES

After dropping the initial contest of the series in the Columbus Club Bowling League schedule, last night the Brandywine team came back and netted two contests in easy style from the Yorktown quintet. Frank McInerney set up the high score of the evening with an even double century in the third game.

THREE P. H. S. ATHLETES ARE AWARDED INSIGNIAS

A business meeting of the Plainfield High School Boys' Athletic Association was held in the school rooms, yesterday afternoon, and a number of business matters that have accumulated throughout the past year were disposed of at that time. Alfred Day, the leader of the school track team was awarded the school insignia, having captured fourth place in the mile run at the Central High School's annual field and track meet last month.

David Fitch and Craig Blair, members of the hockey team, were also awarded their insignia for playing in five and four games respectively. Cortland Fleming, in view of the fact that he has been chosen for the leading part in the Plainfield High School senior class annual play, resigned from the office of business manager of the minstrel show, and his place was filled by the election of William Peacock. Daniel McNamee was elected to assist Peacock.

PEACOCK SACRIFICES BASEBALL FOR STAGE

Plainfield High School Star Will Devote His Time to Producing Minstrels.

Plainfield High School baseball prospects were treated to a big jolt yesterday afternoon when William Peacock announced that he would not be a candidate for the nine this season. Peacock has been looked upon as a promising candidate to step into the backstop berth this season, and if he carries out his present intentions, Captain Rosenson will have to do some hustling in order to pick a backstop. Several candidates are now available, but none were considered as rivals to Peacock.

Peacock's action comes as the result of numerous attempts to get the annual Plainfield High School minstrel entertainment under way and his election as business manager of the show, which took place yesterday afternoon, necessitates his retirement from the diamond sport. It is the rule of the school that those interested in sports cannot divide their time with the minstrels.

The money in the athletic association's treasury is now at a low ebb and unless the minstrel show is staged as in other years it now seems probable that all athletics will have to be abandoned. Rather than see this state of affairs produced, Peacock has decided to sacrifice baseball and turn his attention to the minstrel show which will be given the latter part of next month.

P. H. S. VE. GLEN RIDGE.

The Plainfield High School basketball team will play the Glen Ridge High School representatives on the Y. M. C. A. court tomorrow afternoon.

BAPTIST MEN HOLD GET-TOGETHER FEAST

Members of Bible Classes Enjoy Fine Program of Music and Speeches.

Men representing the Bible classes of the Baptist churches of this city, South Plainfield, Scotch Plains and New Market, were entertained, last night, by the Men's Conference Bible class and the Dr. Norman H. Probasco Bible class of the First Baptist church, the affair being the nature of a "get-together" of the Baptist men in this city and vicinity.

The program of the evening was purely informal and a feature was a musical program furnished by Dr. Jervey Buchanan's orchestra known as "The Bunch," the selections being of a popular order.

John G. MacLaughlin acted as the toastmaster. Among the speakers were Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, Rev. Evarts C. Conover, Rev. J. J. Allen pastor of the South Plainfield Baptist church; Dr. Norman H. Probasco, I. V. Randolph, J. Henry Crane, Arthur M. Harris, John G. MacLaughlin and William L. Platt.

All of the speeches were pertinent to the activities of the "Organized Bible Class Movement," which is extending throughout the country, and many helpful suggestions were made which will be of a direct value to those at last night's affair.

At the conclusion of the speeches and musical program, there was a social hour and refreshments were served. The committee in charge of the arrangements comprised Wilbur Randolph, Charles E. Conover and J. L. Pierson. The committee was assisted by some of the wives of members of the class.

LINE PROGRAM FOR ANNUAL MINSTREL SHOW

The annual minstrel show and vaudeville entertainment under the auspices of the Netherwood Residents Association, will be held at the hall at the corner of Woodland and South avenues, tonight. The entertainment committee, of which Charles L. Lewis is chairman, has aranged an unusually fine program and all those who are to take part in the production have worked earnestly to perfect themselves in their respective parts. Music will be furnished by the orchestra of the Plainfield High School, under the leadership of Mrs. J. C. Evans. The interlocutor of the minstrel troupe which will be the feature of the first part of tonight's program will be Charles L. Lewis. The second part, the olio, and the tragic cantata are expected to be pleasing.

Miss Annie Russell has been engaged to act as a star and director of a reportoire company which will make its home at the Little Theatre, in Philadelphia, the management of which is soon to be taken over by Lawrence A. Anhalt.

BOARD OF TRADE AT SOUTH PLAINFIELD

Patrick F. Kaine Chosen President of Newly Organized Civic Body.

Citizens of South Plainfield interested in the civic work of that community effected the organization of a Board of Trade in the town hall, last night, with the assistance of President William Jeffery, of the local board, who traveled the intervening three miles between here and South Plainfield on foot in order that he might keep his scheduled appointment. Mr. Jeffery outlined the need for such a organization in the village and discussed the purposes of the body and the work that has been accomplished here.

The following officers were elected to the new civic body: President, Patrick F. Kaine; vice president W. E. Smith; secretary, C. H. Brantingham, treasurer, John Pickering. William E. Smith delivered an address on the probabilities of having the trolley company extend its service to South Plainfield. A petition was filed with the Public Utilities Commission and it is probable that a hearing will be granted a committee representing the new body in the near future.

The Plainfield Board of Trade through its trolley committee, of which A. E. Force is chairman, will co-operate in every way with the newly formed organization in bringing about the desired improvement. Although the local body has maintained a neutral understanding with the Public Service Corporation during its existence President Jeffery announced this morning that a determined fight would be put up to aid the South Plainfield Board in the work proposed.

"JIMMY" PENNY PROVES HIMSELF A WISE SEXTON

"One Saturday morning, after a good hard snow storm, our efficient sexton, Jim Penny," says the Crescent Avenue Church Messenger, "engaged two men to shovel the walks around the church. These men were to get twenty cents an hour. After they had been at work a little while a third can came along and he was put to work also. When he discovered that he was to be paid at the rate of twenty cents an hour he rebelled, declaring that he never worked for less than twenty-five. 'All right,' Penny said, 'go ahead'."

"As soon as the first two workers learned that this new man was getting more than they, they struck for higher wages. There threatened to be trouble until Penny said to them, 'Now look here; don't get hot; wait till you see what I am going to do. I'm going to bring you fellows a good lunch, while he's going to pay for his; that's where you get the extra quarter'."

CONNAUGHTS 35 YEARS WEDDED

Ottawa, Ont., March 13—Many messages of greeting from Canada and from across the Atlantic were received at Rideau Hall, today, to remind their royal Highnesses, the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, of their thirty-fifth wedding anniversary. The marriage of the Duke of Connaught and Princess Louis Margaret, daughter of Prince Frederick Charles, of Prussia, was celebrated in St. George's chapel, Windsor, March 13, 1879, in the presence of Queen Victoria and numerous other representatives of the imperial family of Germany. The Duke was then twenty-nine years of age and the bride was nineteen.

NEW AERIAL TERROR.

Paris, March 13—Successful experiments have just been carried out here with fire arrows which are intended for use by aeroplanes against dirigibles. The arrows, which are the invention of a Lyons mechanic, are about 15 inches long, and are furnished with small cylinders containig gunpowder and inflammable oil. Two of these were thrown from the Eiffel tower on to some straw, which was ignited. Further experiments are to be made from on board an aeroplane. If they are equally successful the new invention is expected to prove a highly dangerous weapon.

400 PAIRS WOMEN'S GLOVES AT 55c.

Tomorrow we offer another lot of women's sample gloves, some taken from our own high-grade stock and others that have been mended. The mere fact that we class them as "mended" in no way impairs their wearing qualities, for gloves sent out by makers to dealers often become a bit soiled or a thread comes loose. In such cases the gloves are returned to the factory and made perfect. Such are the gloves offered here. They may be had in sizes from 5½ to 8, in tan, white and black. Very special at.....55c

ITALIANS RAID SOCIAL EXHIBIT

Destroy Pictures Depicting Scenes of Their Homes.

POLICE TAKE ONE PRISONER

After Mutilating Objectionable Photographs Morristown Mob Demands School Superintendent to Retract Statement Credited to Him.

Morristown, N. J., March 13.—A mob of 400 Italians visited the exhibit of what is called the Social Survey and destroyed all photographs depicting scenes in the Italian settlement here.

The Social Survey was organized by six local churches, the object being to make an investigation of conditions in the city with a view to general betterment. As a result of the inquiry charts and photographs were placed on exhibition in a store at 41 South street. The pictures of the Italian settlement were strongly objected to by the Italians, who declared that the photographs shown did not place them or their homes in a good light.

An organized attack was made on the exhibit by an excited crowd, and all the pictures relating to the Italian settlement were torn to pieces. Nothing else was touched. One of the pictures showed the wife and baby of Pelligrino Venito, and beneath the figures was written, "The foreign born must be taught how to care for their children." This picture is said to have been destroyed by Venito, and he was arrested on a charge of malicious mischief. He was held in $200 bail for the grand jury by Justice Bennell.

After destroying the objectionable pictures the mob proceeded to the Maple avenue public school, where they demanded that J. Burton Wiley, superintendent of schools, retract a statement credited to him by a local paper in which he was made to say things derogatory of the Italian residents. Dr. Wiley addressed the mob and assured the excited Italians that he never made the statement; that he had been misquoted.

GOT DRUNK IN CELLS.

Chief Solves Puzzle by Finding Brick Removed Beneath Window Sill.

Hackettstown, N. J., March 13.—For the past month prisoners in the local jail have been getting drunk in their cells every night. They were all right early in the evening, but when the jailer went to lock them in cells until morning he found them in a hopeless condition.

The puzzle was solved when Chief Huff, hearing from the cellroom the sound of breaking glass, ran in and found on the floor the fragments of a whiskey bottle. A prisoner was standing on a chair. A brick had been removed from beneath the window sill. Friends of prisoners had sneaked up back of the cell and pushed the nose of a bottle through the hole. Prisoners standing on the chair placed their mouths to the bottle and drank their full.

SAVED HER PET PIG.

Woman Rushes Into a Blazing House and Rescues the Porker.

Passaic, N. J., March 13.—A fire drove four families from a frame tenement on Summit avenue, Garfield, N. J. Among those who fled to the street was Mrs. Alexander Toth. As she stood in the street watching the flames lick the paint off the clapboards, the squeals of her pet pig reminded her that she had left him behind.

Mrs. Toth bowled several firemen out of her way and dashed back into the house and up the stairs. She emerged a few minutes later with her eyelashes and eyebrows abbreviated and a badly frightened and slightly scorched porker in her arms. It was several minutes before she could soothe the pig.

PROVED A YEGGMAN AT LAST.

Trenton, N. J., March 13.—Richard Flynn of Philadelphia, who was acquitted last year in the United States court of dynamiting the Shiloh postoffice safe, was convicted in the same court of dynamiting a postoffice safe at Belle Meade, Somerset county, N. J., on Dec. 18, 1911.

The government alleged that Joseph Coakley of Philadelphia and Jeremiah Allen of Camden aided Flynn in the Shiloh robbery and that Coakley alone was his accomplice at Belle Meade. Allen is now serving a three-year sentence for robbing the Shiloh postoffice, and Coakley pleaded guilty to both robberies, asserting that Flynn was present at both.

SCARLET FEVER KILLS 11.

Florence Epidemic Results In Another Death—Six Die In One Family.

Florence, N. J., March 13.—The scarlet fever epidemic resulted in another death, making a total of eleven deaths of the twenty-three persons afflicted by the disease disaster since January. The death was a ten-months-old baby of Mr. and Mrs. Alvair N. Carter. This makes a total of six carried off by scarlet fever in this family alone in the last few weeks.

A MAN'S GAME WHICH DELIGHTS WOMEN AND CHILDREN

By special arrangement with the publisher, the Daily Press will distribute to its readers the new, up-to-date and interesting game known as

CHANCE BASEBALL.

The game is a scientific arrangement of nearly fifty different plays in baseball. Practically every play arising in the National game including the famous "Squeeze Play" of the Champion Athletics, and the spectacular "Double Steal" of the New York Giants. It is so simple that a person with only a smattering of baseball knowledge can play it and the person who knows nothing about baseball can learn the game in a short time and in a practical manner.

THE WAY IT WORKS.

Walter Johnson is pitching. Ty Cobb at the bat. Ty hits for a single. Watch him steal second. Then down to third on a sacrifice. Now what do you think of that "dub?" He's out napping at third. The plays are all there and you're sure to make 'em.

GET IN THE GAME.

MAKE A HIT

With the folks by obtaining one. You'll make an error if you don't. It is as much fun for the grown-ups as it is for the youngsters. Get a grand stand seat for the price of a score-card and make rooters out of the entire family.

To get this miniature baseball game, which is superior to all others that have ever been offered, clip the coupon below and bring it to the Daily Press office, with 8 cents in stamps or money. If you want it mailed, add two cents more.

PLAINFIELD PRESS COMPANY.

Please accept this coupon and enclosed eight cents (ten cents if CHANCE BASEBALL is to be mailed) for which deliver to me one game "CHANCE BASEBALL."

SENATE WANTS PAGE'S SPEECH

Remarks on Monroe Doctrine Causes a Stir.

A RESOLUTION IS ADOPTED

Envoy's Speech on the Panama Canal Astounds Members — United States Ambassador to Great Britain Will Be Asked to Explain.

Washington, March 13.—A resolution was passed in the senate calling on the state department to forward without delay a copy of the speech made by Walter H. Page, ambassador to Great Britain, before the Associated Chambers of Commerce in London. Ambassador Page's new definition of the Monroe doctrine and his statement that Great Britain "would profit most" by the use of the Panama canal provoked action in the house, as well as in the senate.

Officials of the administration showed great interest in Ambassador Page's London speech, but they refrained from making any comment on it.

The resolution passed by the senate was introduced by Senator Chamberlain of Oregon, a Democrat, who is opposed to the repeal of the legislation granting free tolls to American coastwise shipping using the isthmian waterway.

A resolution was introduced in the house by Representative Murray of Alabama, a Democrat, calling upon the state department to "explain the amount of official authority for Ambassador Page's speech last night."

The Chamberlain resolution aroused great interest in the senate, but it was passed without opposition. The text of the resolution follows:

Whereas, There was published in the morning papers what purported to be a London cable giving an account of the annual dinner of the Associated Chambers of Commerce in London, in which the Hon. Walter Hines Page, the American ambassador to Great Britain, is reported to have said:

"That the Monroe doctrine simply meant this:

"That the United States would prefer that no European governments would gain more lands in the new world;" and

"Whereas, It is further stated that amid laughter Mr. Page declared that he could not say that the United States had constructed the Panama canal for Great Britain, but that it had added greatly to the pleasure of building that great work to know that the British would profit most by its use;" therefore be it

Resolved, That the secretary of state be requested to furnish to the senate without delay a copy of the speech made by the American ambassador, and particularly that part thereof giving his definition of the Monroe doctrine and that portion thereof in which he is alleged to have stated that the British would profit most by the use of the Panama canal and that he call upon the American ambassador to furnish forthwith for the use of the senate the evidence upon which that portion of his speech was based wherein he is alleged to have said that it added greatly to the pleasure of the people of the United States in the building of the Panama canal to know that the British would profit most by its use.

In the Murray resolution explanation of a number of expressions from the speech as reported in the press dispatches was demanded. The reference to the Monroe doctrine in which the ambassador said "the Monroe doctrine simply meant that the United States would prefer that no European governments should gain more land in this new world" worried Mr. Murray the most. He wanted to know also:

"Whether the utterances of the ambassador had any foundation of sanction in the state department's 'new policy,' and

"Whether it was the intention of the state department to abandon the Monroe doctrine altogether, and what Mr. Page meant by the 'great pleasure of building a canal, the chief beneficiary of which would be Great Britain.'"

PETITION FOR A MAN'S DEATH

Lynn (Mass.) Business Men Ask That Dorr Shall Die For Murder.

Lynn, Mass., March 13.—William A. Dorr of Stockton, who on April 12, 1912, murdered George E. Marsh in this city, was taken from the Essex county jail to the death house at the state prison. He is sentenced to die during the week of March 22.

The state parole board will make a report to Governor Walsh on the plea of Dorr's counsel to have the sentence commuted to life imprisonment. Fifty of the most prominent business men of Lynn sent a petition to the governor demanding that the sentence of death be carried out. It is not believed that the parole board will interfere with the sentence.

FIND 14 OF 30 BODIES IN RUINS

Searchers In St. Louis Recover Club's Register Also.

St. Louis, March 13.—Fourteen bodies have been recovered so far from the ruins of the Missouri Athletic club here.

Ten bodies have been identified, including those today of B. Henle, Little Wonder Matt Mills of Kansas City, Thomas J. Wright, auditor for the William J. Lemp Brewing company of this city, and Burt Crouch of St. Louis, sales manager for the Western Electric company.

The missing club register was found. Comparison with the list of missing showed that thirty persons lost their lives in the fire.

ELY'S CREAM BALM OPENS CLOGGED NOSTRILS AND HEAD---CATARRH GOES

Get a small bottle anyway, just to try it. Apply a little in the nostrils and instantly your clogged nose and stopped-up air passages of the head will open; you will breathe freely, dullness and headache disappear. By morning the catarrh, cold-in-head or catarrhal sore throat will be gone.

End such misery now! Get the small bottle of "Ely's Cream Balm" at any drug store. This sweet, fragrant balm dissolves by the heat of the nostrils; penetrates and heals the inflamed, swollen membrane which lines the nose, head and throat; clears the air passages; stops nasty discharges and a feeling of cleasing, soothing relief comes immediately.

Don't lay awake tonight struggling for breath, with head stuffed; nostrils closed, hawking and blowing. Catarrh or a cold, with its running nose, foul mucous dropping into the throat, and raw dryness is distressing but truly needless.

Put your faith—just once—in "Ely's Cream Balm" and your cold or catarrh will surely disappear. Adv.

WESTINGHOUSE, INVENTOR, DEAD

Expires After a Brief Illness In Home.

DEVELOPER OF AIR BRAKE

Lieutenants to Carry on His Thirty Industries Unchanged, Company Announces—Had Hard Work Getting a Hearing For Device That Made His Fortune.

New York, March 13.—George Westinghouse, inventor and financier, died in his apartments in the Langham, Central Park West and Seventy-third street. For fifteen months he had suffered from chronic myocarditis, an affection of the heart, and had withdrawn almost wholly from his business affairs.

His death had been expected for some days, for his ailment was getting worse. With him when death came was his wife and his only son, George, Jr., and his brother, Herman H. Westinghouse.

It was announced officially that Mr. Westinghouse's death will not cause any change of policy or operation in connection with any of the numerous enterprises which he founded and controlled. A plan had been worked out carefully in anticipation of his death, and the men who had worked under him for many years will take up immediately the direction of the enterprises.

Experts on the industrial development of this country have placed Westinghouse among the seven or eight men to whom credit must be given for opening the way for the upbuilding of the great wealth of the nation. To Sir Henry Bessemer and him the exploitation of the resources of the middle west is due. Sir Henry developed the steel rail, Westinghouse the air brake that now is in use on all the railroads throughout the world.

Had Hard Struggle.

George Westinghouse was born on Oct. 6, 1846, in the quaint, moss grown town of Central Bridge, Schoharie county, N. Y. Before he was sixteen he had invented an engine.

When Westinghouse first went into the field with his invention he could get no hearing. In vain he pleaded with railroad men that it was not alone a safety device, but a great detail in train operation and thus a money saver. No one listened.

It was several years before he managed to interest some of the officials of the Pennsylvania railroad in Pittsburgh and through them got the money to show what his invention might do.

A few years of trial made all the difference in the world. Then men who had aided him became millionaires and Westinghouse himself was rich and famous at twenty-five. Today the Westinghouse shops in East Pittsburgh and Wilmington are the very largest machine works in the world, and the private fortune of the inventor is said to be more than a score of millions. Half a dozen other fortunes of similar character resulted from the brake.

Mr. Westinghouse was the inventor of innumerable other devices, among them the only effective means of controlling the flow of natural gas and conveying it over long distances to factories and other consumers.

George Westinghouse was fifteen and still at school when the civil war began. He enlisted in the Twelfth New York infantry and served throughout the war.

When he was twenty years old he married Miss Margaret Erskine Walker of Brooklyn. He got a job with a Pittsburgh steel casting plant, offering the firm the right to make a rerailing device he had invented upon condition that they would make him a salesman.

APPROPRIATION BILL PASSED.

Approved by Assembly After Bitter Partisan Debate.

Albany, N. Y., March 13.—The annual appropriation bill, close cropped by the Republicans, but still carrying $31,200,000, passed the assembly after a fiercely partisan debate by a vote of 88 to 46. Seventy-six votes were needed to pass it.

For the first time in years the minority leader asked the minority to oppose the measure, and the Progressives were asked by their leader to vote with the Democrats. Nine of them broke away, however, and voted for the bill.

Assemblyman Ritz of Monroe was the only Democrat to vote for the bill and Assemblyman Knapp of Chemung the only Republican to oppose it. These Progressives voted for the bill—Bleecker, Dunlop, Findlator, Fish, Garrison, Karpen, McRoberts, Henschel, Weed and Sulzer.

NEEDLEWORK

By MARGARET LAWRENCE.

THIS IS THE TIME TO EMBROIDER YOUR LINGERIE GOWN FOR SUMMER

If you are planning to have an embroidered lingerie gown this summer, it is well to begin working on it now even if the embroidery is not to be elaborate. Such a frock as this which may be cut by dress pattern 8106 will be easy to make, becoming and appropriate for general wear. It is illustrated, made of crêpe voile with the sleeves of fine net. The girdle, the bindings of the tunic and the loose armholes are of soft old blue satin. Lace insertion and edging might be used in place of the satin for finishing the edges of the tunic and armholes if one prefers a washable dress. This pretty girlish frock, suitable for a graduation gown and for afternoon parties all summer, is embroidered with the butterflies from transfer pattern 14667, with white mercerized cotton. These butterflies, although large, are very delicate, and, worked in eyelets give a beautiful lacey effect. They are so conventionalized that they are appropriate for almost any type of gown. The transfer pattern includes two of the large size with flower sprays, measuring 10 by 12 inches each, and these may be placed on the front and back of the tunic or at the bottom of the skirt. There are also three smaller butterflies with flower sprays 6½ by 8 inches each, to be arranged on the blouse, either as illustrated or as the style of the garment may suggest. These designs, although prettiest when developed by doing the dots and flowers in eyelet work with the leaves and bodies of the butterflies in solid embroidery, are very effective on sheer materials such as net, crêpe voile, and batiste when carried out entirely in solid work.

Dress pattern 8106 and transfer pattern 14667 can be supplied to readers on receipt of price, 15 cents each.

Practical Fashion Hints

By Alice Gibson.

7668

Poplins are very strong for dress purposes this season and come in many of the most pleasing and newest colors. One shade that is very popular, is mahogany; it combines well with several darker shades and is generally becoming.

No. 7668 is an afternoon dress that would make up well in silk poplin. If intended for dressy use, the chemisette, collar and cuffs would be attractive of lace over chiffon, or of a figured silk crepe. An unusually effective crepe for this purpose has a raised design, giving the effect of wool embroidery; it is rich and will do much to make a plain little dress attractive.

Poplin is wide and may be purchased from 75 cents a yard and up.

The pattern is cut in 5 sizes: 34 to 42.

This Is a Perfect Pattern.

Be sure to give right size, measuring over the fullest part of the bust for dimensions.

It may be obtained by filling out the coupon and enclosing 15 cents in stamps or coin, to the Pattern Department of this paper.

WHEN the housewife can avail herself of a good quality of maple sugar she should do so as it makes one of the most wholesome of desserts. Some hints for sweets made of maple sugar are given here.

Made With Nut Meats.

Maple Cake.—Mix half a cupful of butter creamed with one cupful of broken and mashed maple sugar, half a cupful of sour milk, half a teaspoonful of soda, half a teaspoonful of cinnamon, one-fourth teaspoonful of nutmeg, two cupfuls of flour and one cupful of walnut meats. Bake in a moderate oven.

Maple Caramels.—Take two cupfuls of maple sugar, half a cupful of milk and one tablespoonful of butter. Boil until a firm ball will form between the fingers when tested in cold water. Take from fire, add one teaspoonful of vanilla and one cupful of chopped walnut meats. Turn into a buttered pan and when cool cut in squares.

Made Into Pastry.

Maple Rolls.—Take bread dough to make as many rolls as are needed. Roll one inch thick. Cream together warm butter and soft maple sugar. Spread on dough and roll as you would a roll jelly cake. Cut off slices one inch thick, lay in buttered pans, cover, let rise and bake.

Maple Sugar Pie.—Take one and a half cupfuls of milk and pour it into a double boiler. Add a cupful of maple sugar broken into small pieces. Let it boil until the sugar is dissolved; then pour some of the milk over a well beaten egg. Return to the boiler and stir in a dessertspoonful of cornstarch which has been dissolved in a little cold water. Stir and cook several minutes longer. Line a deep pie pan with good puff paste, turn in the mixture and bake. The yolks of two eggs can be used instead of one whole egg, and a meringue can be made of the whites. Add two spoonfuls of sugar to the stiffly beaten whites, spread on the pie after it is baked; then brown nicely in the oven.

"Aren't you flatterers!" laughed daddy.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

The Story of the Selfish Little Oyster Crabs.

"YOU know, I think oyster crabs are perhaps the most selfish of all the sea animals," began daddy as the children were waiting for their usual bedtime story.

"Why?" was, of course, Evelyn's first question.

"Well," said daddy, "they don't do anything for themselves. They just completely live off oysters."

"Oh," said Evelyn, "aren't they any connection or relation to the oysters? Why are they called oyster crabs?"

"First, I will answer the first question," said daddy, "and then the second one. The oyster crabs really belong to the crab family. They are called oyster crabs, however, because, above all things, they love the juice of an oyster and absolutely live on it. And what I am going to tell you about now is the way they get it.

"First of all, the oyster crab hovers around the oysters and then picks out a nice, fat juicy looking oyster, saying to himself: 'You look as if you could feed me well without any effort. I think I will crawl into your shell.' So then he crawls right inside the oyster's shell and proceeds to enjoy himself. He prefers just to sponge on others, and yet no one has ever heard of the oyster trying to live and thrive on the crab in that way.

"I think it's so much nicer when the birds, fishes and animals do things for themselves and have some pride. Now, take the birds, for instance. You can't imagine them not building their own nests. And they take such pride in their families and their homes. And the same is true of the animals and also of the fishes and other sea animals.

"Of course some animals have to live off others, which often seems cruel, but then it is their way, and they must live. But the oyster crab is just too lazy, and he is so selfish that all he can do is to crawl into another fish's shell and suck the juice he finds there."

"I think the oyster crab must be horrid," said Evelyn. "What do the little ones do?"

"Oh, they are trained and taught when they are ever so little to do just the same thing. In fact, they have been selfish so long that I don't suppose they could be anything else. It almost seems to be second nature with them."

"But it is very interesting to know all about the oyster crabs anyway," said Evelyn.

"And we couldn't be selfish because our daddy isn't selfish like the oyster crab's daddy is," added Jack.

"Aren't you the worst little flatterers!" laughed daddy. "You will have me such a spoiled child before long!"

The Abysmal Brute

By JACK LONDON

Copyright, 1913, by The Century Co.

CHAPTER VII.

SHE looked accusingly at Glendon, who immediately became awkward. To her it was delicious—a shy young man with the body of a giant who was one of the kings of bruisers and who read poetry and went to art exhibits and experimented with color photography!

Of a surety there was no abysmal brute here. His very shyness, she divined now, was due to sensitiveness and not stupidity. Shakespeare's "Sonnets!"

This was a phase that would bear investigation. But Stubener stole the opportunity away and was back chanting his everlasting statistics.

A few minutes later and most unwittingly she opened up the biggest lead of all. That first sharp attraction toward him had begun to stir again after the discovery of the "Sonnets."

The magnificent frame of his, the handsome face, the chaste lips, the clear looking eyes, the fine forehead which the short crop of blond hair did not hide, the aura of physical well being and cleanness which he seemed to emanate—all this and more that she sensed drew her as she had never been drawn by any man, and yet through her mind kept running the nasty rumors that she had heard only the day before at the Courier-Journal office.

"You were right," she said. "There is something more important to talk about. There is something in my mind I want you to reconcile for me. Do you mind?"

Pat shook his head.

"If I am frank—abominably frank? I've heard the men, sometimes, talking of particular fights and of the betting odds, and, while I gave no heed to it at the time, it seemed to me it was firmly agreed that there was a great deal of trickery and cheating connected with the sport. Now, when I look at you, for instance, I find it hard to understand how you can be a party to such cheating. I can understand your liking the sport for a sport, as well as for the money it brings you, but I can't understand"—

"There's nothing to understand," Stubener broke in, while Pat's lips were wreathed in a gentle, tolerant smile. "It's all fairy tales, this talk about faking, about fixed fights and all that rot. There's nothing to it, Miss Sangster, I assure you. And now let me tell you about how I discovered Mr. Glendon. It was a letter I got from his father"—

But Maud Sangster refused to be sidetracked, and addressed herself to Pat.

"Listen. I remember one case particularly. It was some fight that took place several months ago—I forget the contestants. One of the editors of the Courier-Journal told me he intended to make a good winning. He didn't hope; he said he intended. He said he was on the inside and was betting on the number of rounds. He told me the fight would end in the nineteenth. This was the night before.

"And the next day he triumphantly called my attention to the fact that it had ended in that very round. I didn't think anything of it one way or the other. I was not interested in prizefighting then. But I am now. At the time it seemed quite in accord with the vague conception I had about fighting. So you see it isn't all fairy tales, is it?"

"I know that fight," Glendon said. "It was Owen and Murgweather. And it did end in the nineteenth round, Sam. And she said she heard that round named the day before. How do you account for it, Sam?"

"How do you account for a man picking a lucky lottery ticket?" the manager evaded, while getting his wits together to answer. "That's the very point. Men who study form and condition and seconds and rules and such things often pick the number of rounds, just as men have been known to pick hundred to one shots in the races. And don't forget one thing, for every man that wins there's another that loses, there's another that didn't pick right. Miss Sangster, I assure you, on my honor, that faking and fixing in the fight game is—is nonexistent."

"What is your opinion, Mr. Glendon?" she asked.

"The same as mine," Stubener snatched the answer. "He knows what I say is true, every word of it. He's never fought anything but a straight fight in his life. Isn't that right, Pat?"

"Yes, it's right," Pat affirmed; and the peculiar thing to Maud Sangster was that she was convinced he spoke the truth.

She brushed her forehead with her hand, as if to rid herself of the bepuzzlement that clouded her brain.

"Listen," she said. "Last night the same editor told me that your forthcoming fight was arranged to the very round in which it would end."

Stubener was verging on a panic, but Pat's speech saved him from replying.

"Then the editor lies," Pat's voice boomed now for the first time.

"He did not lie before, about that other fight," she challenged.

"What round did he say my fight with Nat Powers would end in?"

Before she could answer the manager was into the thick of it.

"Oh, rats, Pat!" he cried. "Shut up. It's only the regular run of ring rumors. Let's get on with this interview."

He was ignored by Glendon, whose eyes, bent on hers, were no longer mildly blue, but harsh and imperative.

She was sure now that she had stumbled on something tremendous, something that would explain all that had baffled her.

At the same time she thrilled to the mastery of his voice and gaze. Here was a male man who would take hold of life and shake out of it what he wanted.

"What round did the editor say?" Glendon reiterated his demand.

"For the love of Mike, Pat, stop this foolishness," Stubener broke in.

"I wish you would give me a chance to answer," Maud Sangster said.

"I guess I'm able to talk with Miss Sangster," Glendon added. "You get out, Sam. Go off and take care of that photographer."

They looked at each other for a tense, silent moment, then the manager moved slowly to the door, opened it and turned his head to listen.

"And now what round did he say?"

"I hope I haven't made a mistake," she said tremulously, "but I am very sure that he said the sixteenth round."

She saw surprise and anger leap into Glendon's face, and the anger and accusation in the glance he cast at his manager, and she knew the blow had driven home.

And there was reason for his anger. He knew he had talked it over with Stubener, and they had reached a decision to give the audience a good run for its money without unnecessarily prolonging the fight and to end it in the sixteenth.

And here was a woman from a newspaper office naming the very round.

Stubener, in the doorway, looked limp and pale, and it was evident he was holding himself together by an effort.

"I'll see you later," Pat told him. "Shut the door behind you."

The door closed and the two were left alone. Glendon did not speak.

The expression on his face was frankly one of trouble and perplexity.

"Well?" she asked.

He got up and towered above her, then sat down again, moistening his lips with his tongue.

"I'll tell you one thing," he finally said. "The fight won't end in the sixteenth round."

She did not speak, but her unconvinced and quizzical smile hurt him.

"You wait and see, Miss Sangster, and you'll see that editor man is mistaken."

"You mean the program is to be changed?" she queried audaciously.

He quivered to the cut of her words.

"I am not accustomed to lying," he said stiffly, "even to women."

"Neither have you to me, nor have you denied the program is to be changed. Perhaps, Mr. Glendon, I am stupid, but I fail to see the difference in what number the final round occurs so long as it is predetermined and known."

"I'll tell you that round, and not another soul shall know."

She shrugged her shoulders and smiled.

"It sounds to me very much like a racing tip. They are always given that way, you know. Furthermore, I am not quite stupid, and I know there is something wrong here.

"Why were you made angry by my naming the round? Why were you angry with your manager? Why did you send him from the room?"

For reply Glendon walked over to the window as if to look out, where he changed his mind and partly turned, and she knew without seeing that he was studying her face. He came back and sat down.

"I am very sure that he said the sixteenth round."

"You've said I haven't lied to you, Miss Sangster, and you were right. I haven't."

He paused, groping painfully for a correct statement of the situation.

"Now, do you think you can believe what I am going to tell you? Will you take the word of a prizefighter?"

She nodded gravely, looking him straight in the eyes and certain that what he was about to tell was the truth.

"I've always fought straight and square. I've never touched a piece of dirty money in my life nor attempted a dirty trick. Now I can go on from that. You've shaken me up pretty badly by what you told me. I don't know what to make of it. I can't pass a snap judgment on it. I don't know. But it looks bad. That's what troubles me. For, you see, Stubener and I have talked this fight over, and it was understood between us that I would end the fight in the sixteenth round. Now you bring the same word. How did that editor know? Not from me. Stubener must have let it out—unless"—

He stopped to debate the problem.

—"unless that editor is a lucky guesser. I can't make up my mind about it. I'll have to keep my eyes open and wait and learn. Every word I've given you is straight, and there's my hand on it."

Again he towered out of his chair and over to her. Her small hand was gripped in his big one as she arose to meet him, and after a fair, straight look into the eyes between them both glanced unconsciously at the clasped hands.

She felt that she had never been more aware that she was a woman. The sex emphasis of those two hands—the soft and fragile feminine and the heavy, muscular masculine—was startling. Glendon was the first to speak.

"You could be hurt so easily," he said, and at the same time she felt the firmness of his grip almost caressingly relax.

She remembered the old Prussian king's love for giants and laughed at the incongruity of the thought association as she withdrew her hand.

"I am glad you came here today," he said, then hurried on awkwardly to make an explanation which the warm light of admiration in his eyes belied.

"You could be hurt so easily," he said.

"I mean because maybe you have opened my eyes to the crooked dealing that has been going on."

"You have surprised me," she urged. "It seemed to me that it is so generally understood that prizefighting is full of crookedness that I cannot understand how you, one of its chief exponents, could be ignorant of it. I thought as a matter of course that you would know all about it, and now you have convinced me that you never dreamed of it. You must be different from other fighters."

He nodded his head.

"That explains it, I guess. And that's what comes of keeping away from it—from the other fighters and promoters and sports. It was easy to pull the wool over my eyes. Yet it remains to be seen whether it has really been pulled over or not. You see, I am going to find out for myself."

"And change it?" she queried, rather breathlessly, convinced somehow that he could do anything he set out to accomplish.

"No; quit it," was his answer. "If it isn't straight I won't have anything more to do with it. And one thing is certain: this coming fight with Nat Powers won't end in the sixteenth round. If there is any truth in that editor's tip, they'll all be fooled. Instead of putting him out in the sixteenth, I'll let the fight run on into the twenties. You wait and see."

"And I'm not to tell the editor?"

She was on her feet now, preparing to go.

"Certainly not. If he is only guessing, let him take his chances. And if there's anything rotten about it he deserves to lose all he bets. This is to be a little secret between you and me. I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll name the round to you. I won't run it into the twenties. I'll stop Nat Powers in the eighteenth."

"And I'll not whisper it," she assured him.

"I'd like to ask you a favor," he said tentatively. "Maybe it's a big favor."

She showed her acquiescence in her face, as if it were already granted, and he went on:

"Of course I know you won't use this faking in the interview. But I want more than that. I don't want you to publish anything at all."

She gave him a quick look with her searching gray eyes, then surprised herself by her answer.

"Certainly," she said. "It will not be published. I won't write a line of it."

"I knew it," he said simply.

For the moment she was disappointed by the lack of thanks, and the next moment she was glad that he had not thanked her.

She sensed the different foundation he was building under this meeting of an hour with her, and she became daringly explorative.

"How did you know it?" she asked.

"I don't know." He shook his head. "I can't explain it. I knew it as a matter of course. Somehow it seems to me I know a lot about you and me."

"But why not publish the interview? As your manager says, it is good advertising."

"I know it," he answered slowly. "But I don't want to know you that way. I think it would hurt if you should publish it. I don't want to think that I knew you professionally. I'd like to remember our talk here as a talk between a man and a woman. I don't know whether you understand what I'm driving at. But it's the way I feel. I want to remember this just as a man and a woman."

MEAT CAUSE OF KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys if Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers.

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

TRAIN KILLS BRAKEMAN IN CENTRAL'S ELIZABETH YARDS

Elizabeth, March 13—Robert A. Gilfillan, a Central Railroad brakeman, whose permanent address was 56 Greenwood avenue, Madison, was killed by a train at the transfer yards of the Central Railroad at 12:45 o'clock yesterday morning. Both feet and his right arm were crushed and he died a few minutes after being struck. The body was taken to Martin's morgue.

Gilfillan had walked a few yards from a drill engine on which he was working to signal for freight cars which were to be attached to it. He did not return immediately and the crew made a search for him and found the body between the two tracks.

There are scores of tracks at this point of the railroad and it has been the scene of numerous fatalities. Neil Gallagher was the conductor of the drill engine and the engineer was Michael O'Hara.

Gilfillan, who was twenty-seven years old, married a Miss Oaks a month ago. He had been boarding at 591 Madison avenue, this city, and intended to make his permanent residence here. His mother lives at 8 Bank street, Morristown. He has been employed on the Central Railroad a year and a half.

BURNED IN ODD ACCIDENT, CHAUFFEUR IS IN HOSPITAL

New Providence, March 13—It will be six months before doctors can graft skin on the face of Albert Butterwick, who was badly burned about the face and hands as the result of an odd accident a week ago and who is now being treated at Overlook hospital, Summit.

From the right ear across the cheek to the mouth his face was burned a quarter of an inch deep and his left hand was burned and skinned.

The casualty can be laid to the recent blizzard. Butterwick is a chauffeur for Charles Hubert, of "Visitor Grange," Long Hill, Chatham township. The storm having blown down the wires providing "Visitor Grange" with power which pumped the water and provided light, Butterwick attempted to temporarily provide power with one of his automobile engines.

The chauffeur had the engine connected with the dynamo, when he was overcome by gas from the exhaust. He fell forward, with his face and hand on the engine cylinder, which was extremely hot. He lay there for some time. The engine was running. Only the curiosity of a neighbor, William Meile, saved him from death. Meile was passing the place, when he went to see how Butterwick was getting along with his attempt to provide "Visitor Grange" with light and power.

STATE BOARD'S RULE ON PASTURIZATION OF MILK

Trenton, March 13—The State Board of Health has adopted a rule governing pasteurization of milk. It provides as follows: "Milk shall be pasteurized by heating to a temperature of 145 degrees Farenheit for a period of thirty minutes, and thereafter immediately cooled to a temperature of fifty degrees Farenheit or below. Pasteurization apparatus shall be equipped with accurate and reliable temperature recording devices, and the temperature records shall be kept by the operators of the pasteurizers, and shall be open to inspection at all times to representatives of the Board of Health of the State of New Jersey."

MRS. ISRAEL MARKS TO MARRY AND WIN $200 OF FUND

New Brunswick, March 13.—The first bride to secure a share of the fund set aside by Mrs. Israel Marks in her will for the benefit of poor Jewish girls who wed Jewish young men of like circumstances will be Miss Ethel Fleischmann, who will wed Samuel Pincus, Saturday night. Her wedding gift from the fund will be $200. The wedding will be performed at the home of the sister of the bride, Mrs. Michael Bearman, of 12 Commercial avenue.

When the establishment of the Marks fund was announced, the young couple decided to seek a share of it. They have applied to the executors of the will and their case has been found to be a worthy one. The $200 will be paid immediately after the wedding.

TEACHERS WANT EQUAL PAY.

New Brunswick, March 13.—The Board of Education will receive a communication at its next meeting from the Public School Teachers Club requesting that equal pay be given male and female teachers and their salaries raised for next year. Members of the club have been corresponding of late and have found higher salaries are paid in other cities in the State to teachers for the same grades. They have also found that in all cities the teachers are allowed a certain number of days off without any reduction in salary. Perth Amboy giving ten days, which has been found to be the lowest. The local school board will be asked to give ten days to the local teachers hereafter.

PROMINENT SPEAKERS TO RESPOND TO TOASTS

Annual Dinner of Friendly Sons of St. Patrick to Be Brilliant Affair.

Arrangements are complete for the annual dinner of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, of Elizabeth, to be held at the Y. M. C. L. A. Club, Elizabeth, Tuesday evening, March 17. A number of Plainfield people are members of this society and will attend the dinner. More than one hundred members and guests will sit down to the dinner, which is to be served by a Newark caterer. Wetton's orchestra will furnish the music and the Friedberg Master Singers, under the direction of T. Arthur Baker, will entertain the guests during the evening with operatic and popular selections.

Dr. Stephen T. Quinn, of Elizabeth, will be the toastmaster, and the toasts and those who will respond are as follows:

"America, Our Country," George A. Viehmann; "The Celtic Spirit;" Prof. John D. Prince; "The Day We Celebrate," Rev. John A. Dillon; "New Jersey," United States Senator James E. Martine; "The Future of Ireland," Martin P. Devlin; "The Irish Immigrant," David Healy.

MISSING WESTFIELD FIREMAN IS FOUND DEAD IN HIS ROOM

Westfield, March 13.—Comrades of Frank Quinn, a member of the local fire department, became concerned over his failure to appear for work Wednesday and yesterday. Investigating the cause they found him lying dead in his room. He is believed to have been asphyxiated accidentally.

Quinn, who was a driver of one of the local pieces of apparatus, boarded at the home of Mrs. Amanda Miller, of 155 Miller street. His room was on the top floor. The firemen found him lying partly dressed on the floor. A small gas stove stood a few feet from the body. On the top of the stove was a pail of hot water and only three of the six jets were ignited.

It is believed that Quinn met his death Tuesday night trying to heat some water, and fell asleep on the bed while waiting for it to boil. The water boiled over, it is thought, and extinguished three of the flames. It is believed that, awaking later, Quinn started for the stove, noting the odor of gas, and collapsed.

Quinn was forty-eight years old. He had been a resident of this community since 1898. He is said to have a brother living in New York. His comrades in the department yesterday tried to locate the brother.

WILSON-BRYAN LEAGUE.

Marion, Ind., March 13—The Wilson-Bryan League of Indiana, which was formed recently to keep the Indiana Democracy in line with the policies of the national administration, has completed arrangements for a State-wide rally to be held in this city tomorrow. The morning will be devoted to the business of the organization, and the afternoon to a mass meeting in the city hall. In the evening there will be a banquet with addresses by several Democratic leaders of national prominence.

CARD OF THANKS.

To our friends and neighbors, we wish to extend our thanks for the kindness and sympathy show through the sickness and death of a beloved wife and mother.

SAFETY FIRST

PERSONAL SERVICE

In making a new banking connection, safety is the first consideration. The State Trust Company has a capital of One Hundred Thousand Dollars and a surplus of more than Fifty Thousand Dollars which constitutes a safety fund of approximately one to four in relation to deposits. In addition to this strong position, its funds are so invested that a large proportion of its assets can be converted into cash in twenty-four hours.

These facts are commended to the consideration of anyone contemplating a banking connection or a change in arrangements already existing.

GREAT NEED OF CONSOLIDATION

Mayor Robert Clark, Jr., Says It Would Lower Borough Tax Rate.

WOULD BE BENEFICIAL

Addressing the Men's Club in Warren Chapel Last Night North Plainfield's Executive Urges Need of Action on Project.

That the greater should always help the lesser municipality, and that consolidation is the tendency of the age, and makes towards a more efficient and economical municipal government, were statements made last night by Mayor Robert Clark, Jr., of North Plainfield, in an interesting address on the subject of annexation and consolidation, made before the Men's Club, of Warren chapel. Mayor Percy H. Stewart, who was expected to be present, at the last moment sent his regrets, stating that important committee meetings would prevent his attendance. It was expected that he and Mayor Clark would debate the question of consolidation. Introducing Mayor Clark, E. Gibson Smith, chairman of the entertainment committee, expressed his regret over the absence of Mayor Stewart and deplored the fact that so comparatively few members of the Men's Club were in attendance. Sixty were present. Mayor Clark was greeted with applause.

"With 1,200 voters in North Plainfield," said Mayor Clark, "fewer than one hundred are present at the various meetings which we hold from time to time, and there is a woeful lack of interest here as regards municipal affairs. I regret the absence of Mayor Stewart tonight, as I know that he is in favor of annexation and consolidation. He sometime since indicated to me, when I visited and talked with him on the subject, that he would join me in my efforts to accomplish such a result. Up to the present time, however, I have not been able to get him to fulfill his promise.

"Annexation and consolidation, let me say, is no new thing. It was first advocated and an agitation started as far back as 1903. The measure it was sought to have the voters pass for some reason aroused their suspicions and hence the attempt failed. This, I think, was largely due to the ly informed as to the proposition. fact that the public had not been ful- There should have been waged an active campaign of education before the matter was submitted to a vote. Had such a course been followed the result might have been different. Annexation and consolidation today is an imperative necessity.

"We pay at present something like $30,000 or $35,000 into the treasury of Somerset county every year. Because of this I have no doubt but that opposition would develop on the part of the county authorities to the annexation of the borough to Union county. Somerset county, which is one of the poorest counties in the State, being largely devoted to agricultural pursuits, would much dislike losing the revenue it now receives from North Plainfield. Somerset county is in need of all the money it can get. There would be great advantages accruing to the borough through consolidation. Dual officers of the municipal government would be abolished. There would be no urther need of a supervising principal of schools in the borough nor of a tax collector who is now paid a salary of $1,650 yearly, nor of a borough clerk, or a recorder or a fire chief. Elimination of these various offices would effect a yearly saving of probably $6,000.

"One must not lose sight of the fact in considering this matter of consolidation that there is a commercial aspect to every city. Usually newcomers to this locality choose Plainfield as a place of residence rather than North Plainfield, because of the fact that the tax rate is lower in that city, and because of the high ratables there are a host of improvements, such as a library, a Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., banks, theatres and many other things which the borough lacks. And this is so, even although with the mountains on the north and the beautiful Greenbrook valley, the borough has far more natural advantages and is a choicer residential center than is Plainfield. North Plainfield is cooler in the summer, too. But the borough has no steam railroad passing through it, has no factories and not as extensive a trolley system as has Plainfield.

"Because of these facts the ratables increase in Plainfield much faster than in the borough. Last year, if I remember correctly, the ratables in Plainfield increased $500,000. Plainfield's population, according to the figures of the 1910 census, was 20,500 while the population of North Plainfield was but 6,117. The larger

WIFE ADMITS SHE RECEIVED 'LOVE POEMS'

Interesting Developments in Divorce Proceedings of John E. Orchard.

Admission that she had received "love poems" from a Plainfield man was made by Mrs. Emma E. Orchard, of 20 Sydney place, Brooklyn, upon the witness stand in the Jersey City Chancery Chambers, yesterday, before Vice-Chancellor Lewis, in the suit which John E. Orchard, a Plainfield resident, has brought against her for a divorce.

Miss Nellie Orchard, twenty-one years old, the daughter of the couple, testified in her mother's behalf and said that the reason for her parents disagreements was her father's too pronounced fondness for women, and his refusal to properly provide for the support of her mother and herself. Orchard is prominent in church work in Brooklyn, it is said.

Testimony was given at yesterday's hearing that Orchard on several occasions gave dinner parties to fifteen young women in fashionable restaurants in Brooklyn, at which his stenographer, Miss Hortense Smith, of 26 Steuben street, Brooklyn, acted as hostess, and at which parties Orchard was the only man present.

That Orchard had been locked out of his home by his wife one midnight was not denied yesterday. Mrs. Orchard declared that she had warned him she would do so if he persisted in late homecoming and that she had lived up to her threat. The husband that night rested on a bench in the elevated railroad station. The case will be continued Monday.

CLASSIS DECIDES CHURCH MUST QUIT

Resolutions Adopted at Special Session Dissolving Relationship.

For the reason that Christ Reformed church, of Newark, refused to sever its relations with Rev. Percival R Barker, who has been acting as its pastor for some time, resolutions were adopted by the Classis of Newark, at its session in the North Reformed church, Newark, yesterday, directing that a committee be appointed to institute proceedings to dissolve such relations.

The resolutions provide that a committee of five be appointed to institute proceedings to disband the congregation of Christ Reformed church and sever it from all fellowship and relation with the Reformed church in America; also that the committee present a report to the classis at its spring meeting in April. These resolutions were offered by Robert Clark, Jr., who with Rev. J. Y. Broek, the pastor, represented Trinity Reformed church at yesterday's meeting.

The committee which now has the matter in charge is comprised of Rev. J. Y. Broek, of Trinity Reformed church; Rev. George D. Hulst, of Montclair; Rev. Dr. Charles H. Stewart, Elder H. E. Ogden and Elder J. S. Mundy, of Newark.

The failure of Mr. Barker to produce a license to preach was responsible for yesterday's action. The minister was unable to show credentials from the presbytery at Neosha, Kan., from which place he went to Newark. After considering the case of Mr. Barker, the presbytery declined to give him credentials, hence the action of the Classis of Newark. What will become of the congregation of Christ church is not known at present, but it is believed that it will stand by Mr. Barker and the minister will probably appeal to the general assembly of the Presbyterian church, which convenes in eight weeks.

MONROE AVENUE SERVICES.

The devotional service of the Epworth League, of the Monroe Avenue Methodist church, Sunday evening at 7:15 o'clock, will be under the leadership of the pastor, Rev. F. J. Hubach. As it will be the last service of this Conference year, it is expected there will be a larger attendance than usual. Tuesday evening next, March 17, the Epworth League will hold a St. Patrick's Day entertainment and social. Thursday evening, March 26, a group rally will be held at the church by the Elizabeth District Epworth League.

PLAY AND DANCE.

Members of the Nonpariel Club, a colored organization, are busy these days with rehearals for a short play which will be given Easter Monday night, April 13, which will be followed by a dance. The members of the committee of arrangements are Albert Schiply, chairman; Robert Stevens and William Mayse.

PLAN TO BUY NEW SCHOOL TRACT

Board of Education Completing Deal for Evergreen Avenue Property.

NO TRADE INVOLVED

Kensington Avenue Tract Will Be Bought by Property Owners Who Had No Knowledge of Purchase of Evergreen Avenue Property.

Within the next few days the Plainfield Board of Education expects to complete a transaction by which it will purchase a tract of property on Evergreen avenue, upon which a new grammar school will be erected to relieve the congested condition now existing in some of the lower grade schools in the city. The lot is about 200 feet deep, and touches Edgewood avenue on one side and Cedar Brook on the other. The deal has not been completed as yet, as was reported in a local paper, last night, and the Board of Education will not exchange the lot which it now owns on Kensington avenue for the Evergreen avenue tract, as has been reported.

The Kensington avenue property, which is near Prospect avenue, has been owned by the Board of Education for about three years, but when it became known to the people in that section that it was planned to erect a school there, such a protest went up that the board abandoned the idea, provided the property be taken off their hands. As a result a number of the property owners of the vicinity have been negotiating with the school body for a year or more to take over the Kensington avenue tract at a price much in excess of what was originally paid for it, thereby giving the Board of Education the funds with which to buy a more suitable site. The people living near the Kensington avenue tract had no intimation as to what property would be bought to take the place of the lot in which they were interested, and no exchange has been arranged, as has been reported.

One of the Kensington avenue property owners, who, with a former local official living on Hillside avenue, have been the leaders in the movement to buy the property from the Board of Education, said to a Daily Press reporter this morning that the title to the property had not been transferred from the Board of Education to the new group of owners, but that it probably would be within the next ten days, as an agreement has been signed to complete the deal. As soon as the Board of Education receives this money they will proceed with the work of purchasing the Evergreen avenue tract, provided no obstacles are put in their way by interested nearby property owners, in the meantime.

Dr. Henry M. Maxson, superintendent of schools, in speaking of the change in a site for the proposed new school, said that he believed the new location would be more advantageous in that it will relieve the present congestion not only in the Franklin and Bryant schools, but would do away with the present half-time work in these schools, besides making a shorter walk for the children to school.

"If a school had been built on Kensington avenue," said Dr. Maxson, "it would have meant that the children would have had a longer walk and I believe that the new location is even a more congested section so far as children are concerned. As to a report that our new site is restricted to certain kinds of buildings, Judge Gilbert Collins has given the board his opinion that such restrictions would not affect the plans for building a school. It is proposed to erect the new school within a year and in the meantime a part of the new addition of the High School will be used to accommodate children until the new building is completed."

"COMMISSION GOVERNMENT."

Another live question will be discussed at the third meeting of the "People's Forum," which will be held Tuesday evening at the Washington School. Judge Robert Carey, of Hudson county, one of the pioneer advocates of simplified city government, will speak on "Commission Government." An open parliament will follow.

POSTPONE CONFERENCE.

The Sunday-school Teachers' Conference planned for Monday evening at the Congregational church will be held on Friday evening, March 20. Rev. Milton S. Littlefield will conduct the conference, the principal speaker being Miss Margaret Slattery.

REV. FLETCHER TO SPEAK.

The speaker at the regular monthly meeting of the Dutch Arms, of Trinity Reformed church, on Monday evening, March 16, will be Rev. Frank Fletcher. Refreshments will be served.

DEATH CALL TO BELOVED BISHOP

HELD PLACE 39 YEARS

Eighty-three Years Old, He Remained Active in Church Work Until Recent Blizzard When He Was Stricken—His Career.

The Rt. Rev. John Scarborough, for thirty-nine years Protestant Episcopal Bishop of the Diocese of New Jersey, who has been ill with pleuro-pneumonia, died this morning at 10:55 o'clock, at his home in Trenton. He was nearly eighty-three years old. He contracted his last and fatal illness while engaged in making out of town visitations. He journeyed to Spotswood, in Middlesex county, on Sunday, March 1, in spite of the heavy snowstorm, and took part in a church service there. He was snowbound and was obliged to remain for several days at the home of a friend. Reaching home he seemed to be in his usual health. Last Sunday he took part in two services at Vineland and one at Millville. Last Monday, upon his return home, he suffered from a heavy cold from which pleuro-pneumonia developed His condition steadily grew worse His physician, Dr. William A. Clark was compelled to administer oxygen two days ago.

At Bishop Scarborough's bedside this morning when death came to him were his five daughters. They were Mrs. Edward J. Knight, Mrs. Charles E. Gummere and Miss Elizabeth Scarborough, all of Trenton; Mrs. Charles Q. Roberts, of Ridley Park, Pa., and Mrs. Charles E. Hewitt, of Meredith, N. H. Bishop Scarborough's wife died some years ago.

Bishop Scarborough was born at Castlewellan, Ireland, on April 25, 1831. He was a son of John and Anna Bella Hannah Scarborough. He received the degree of Bachelor of Arts from Trinity College, at Hartford, Connecticut, where he was a student, in 1854. That college, in 1872, conferred the degree of S. T. D. upon him. The General Theological Seminary, of New York, also conferred a degree, that of B. D. upon him, in 1857. Bishop Scarborough was ordained a Deacon of the Episcopal church in 1857 and a priest in 1858. From 1858 until 1860 he was the assistant rector of St. Paul's church, at Troy, N. Y. From 1860 until 1867, he was the rector of the Church of the Holy Comforter, at Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; was rector of Trinity church, at Pittsburgh, Pa. from 1867 until 1875, and on February 2, 1875, he was consecrated as Bishop of New Jersey.

When informed of the death of Bishop Scarborough this afternoon Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of Grace Episcopal church, said.

"The Church has lost a most faithful and devoted servant in the death of Bishop Scarborough. He sacrificed everything of personal interest for the advancement of the work of his Church. He leaves behind a memory which will remain for years to come with those who were privileged with his acquaintance."

Expression of sympathy over Bishop Scarborough's death was made this afternoon by Rev. Cortland H. Mallery, rector of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, who said:

"It was with deep feelings of sorrow that I learned of the death of our beloved Bishop. I am sure that the Diocese of New Jersey and the whole Church, throughout the country, will mourn the loss of one who was not only a pious and most Godly Bishop but also a Christian gentleman in all the relations of life. It will be almost impossible to find a successor to Bishop Scarborough endowed with all of the splendid qualities which he possessed."

DONATION AT WARRENVILLE.

The members of the Coontown church gave a donation party for the pastor, Rev. George Bower, at the home of John C. Cooper, in Warrenville, last night. The attendance numbered sixty in all, many of whom went from Plainfield. The young people enjoyed dancing until an early hour this morning, and there were also games and music at intervals. An old-fashioned Warren township supper was served at midnight. The Ladies' Aid Society of the church arranged and had charge of the affair and extends its thanks to all who helped make it a success. About $50 was realized for the pastor.

FUNERAL OF MRS. MANNING.

The funeral of Mrs. Arabella McKissack Manning, widow of the late Robert S. Manning, will be held tomorrow afternoon, at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Richard Henry Depew, at 1,019 Hillside avenue, at 3 o'clock, instead of at 2:30 o'clock as was previously announced. The burial will be private.

VACUUM CONCERN IN BANKRUPTCY

George J. Tobin and Other Plainfield Men Financially Interested.

MAY REORGANIZE LATER

Company Did Not Manufacture Under David T. Kenney Patents—Failure to Collect Outstanding Accounts Caused Failure 'Tis Said.

Through the lack of sufficient working capital, attributed to the slowness of collections, the Vacuum Engineering Company, which manufactured vacuum cleaning machines, with offices at 25 Madison avenue, New York, has been thrown into bankruptcy by its creditors. George J. Tobin, the local contractor, is president of the company. He, with the late Frank O. Briggs, formerly United States Senator from New Jersey, held a majority of stock. Their holdings amounted to 66 per cent. of the total capitalization. Besides Mr. Tobin several other Plainfield men hold stock in the corporation, although the amount of such individual holdings is said to be comparatively small.

President Tobin, when see today, said that it was likely the Vacuum Engineering Company would be reorganized as soon as its affairs had been passed upon and adjudicated by the bankruptcy court. The company, he declared, was indebted to himself and to the estate of the late Senator Briggs on notes to the amount of probably $70,000. The death of Mr. Briggs, who was vice president of the company, which occurred last May, plunged the corporation into financial difficulties arising out of the settlement of his estate. Rather than show preference to any of the company's numerous creditors. President Tobin said it had been decided by himself and his associates on the board of directors not to oppose bankruptcy proceedings. In fact, he said, the company was itself largely instrumental in forcing such action on the part of some of its smaller creditors, in the belief that by such action the affairs of the corporation could be most advantageously settled and within the shortest time.

The company, Mr. Tobin said, did a big business, but it was found however, to be impossible to collect outstanding bills. This resulted in a shrinkage of the necessary working capital. Involuntary bankruptcy resulted.

The petitioning creditors and the amount of their several claims are: B. F. Goodrich Company, $1,705, Wagner Electric Manufacturing Company, $1,472, and Frederick Fastenau, $100. Allegation is made in the petition, which was filed in the U. S District Court for the Southern district of New York yesterday, that the company had made preferential transfers of property to some of its creditors.

The business was organized in June, 1907, as the Dunn Locke Vacuum Cleaning Company. Its capital stock was $1,000,000. There was a reorganization in January, 1908, at which time the name was changed to the Vacuum Engineering Company.

This company did not manufacture under the David T. Kenney patents. It is believed there may have been some difficulty experienced on that account.

MANY ENJOYED DANCE OF IMPROVEMENT SOCIETY

Under the auspices of the North Plainfield Township Improvement Society, an enjoyable dance was given in the society's hall at Watchung, last night. The hall was decorated in green, appropriate to St. Patrick's Day. The dances were for the most part old-fashioned and were much enjayed by the participants. There were about one hundred and fifty guests. Supper was served during the evening. Those in charge of the affair were Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Snowden, Miss Nora Kuhne, Mrs. Margaret Griffith, William Demler and William deLa R. Anderson.

BIRTHDAY PARTY.

John Causebrook entertained a few friends at his home in the Netherwood section, last night, in honor of his fifteenth birthday anniversary. Games and music were enjoyed, after which refreshments were served. Among those present were the Misses Catherine MacClymont, Vera Flynn, Blanche Stout, Gladys Sherwin, Marjorie Henwood, and Charles Rice, John and George Potterman, Stockton Burr and John Causebrook.

ENGINE TRIED OUT.

The official trial for the new Nott auto apparatus was held this afternoon on the Elm street bridge. The test will be followed by a diner tonight in the Waldorf, when the firemen will be the guests of United States Senator James E. Martine.

ACQUITTAL IN POISON PEN CASE

Mrs. Nelson L. Pollard is Freed of Charge in Union County Court.

Elizabeth, March 14.—That no scurrilous letters were sent by Mrs. Nelson L. Pollard to Mrs. Charles F. Jones, her next door neighbor, and that she was the victim of a conspiracy to ruin her character, was the decision of the jury that tried her on the charge, after five hours of deliberation. Mrs. Pollard was arrested on May 31 of last year. Scurrilous letters had been received by prominent persons living in Elizabeth for several years. The Jones family received several such letters and investigated. In consequence they caused the arrest of Mrs. Pollard. Her indictment followed, on the charge of having sent a scurrilous letter to Mrs. Charles F. Jones. The Federal authorities also indicted her for sending a letter to Dr. Charles Schlichter. It is likely that since she has been exonerated in the State courts the Federal proceedings against her will be dropped.

When the jury returned yesterday with a verdict of not guilty, Mrs. Pollard was not in court. Told of the verdict and of her complete exoneration, she said: "I am very thankful of course, but it is only what was due me." The Jones family refused to discuss the verdict.

Civil suit for money damages will, it was said today, in all likelihood be brought by Mrs. Pollard against Mrs Charles F. Jones, the complaining witness in the prosecution.

Up to the time the jurymen went to supper the vote is said to have stood eight for acquittal and four for conviction. That was at 6 o'clock last night. At 7:30 o'clock, when the verdict was announced, the four recalcitrant jurors were won over, it is said, by the statement that if the two sets of letters written were typed on the same machine Mrs. Pollard could not have written them. Judge Connolly, in his charge, declared that the evidence adduced at the trial was purely circumstantial, that there was nothing to show that Mrs. Pollard and Mrs. Jones were not on speaking terms, and directed that in order to convict the defendant on the charge the jury must establish a motive for her alleged act.

GIVEN A RECEPTION PRIOR TO EUROPEAN TRIP

Councilman and Mrs. U. G. Tingley, of Grove street, gave a reception and "500" party at their home, last night, in honor of J. Alexander Wilson, of Grove street, who leaves on March 25 for a three months' trip to Europe. Twenty-five guests were in attendance and, besides the cards, enjoyed music and games. Refreshments were served in conclusion.

Mr. Wilson will sail on the Cunard liner, Carmania, in company with his aunt, Mrs. J. P. Truitt, of Tunlaw. They will visit England, Scotland, Ireland, France, Germany and Italy before returning, stopping in the principal sities.

POLICE INTERESTED IN SENATE SALARY BILL

Members of the local police force are watching with interest the progress of a bill introduced recently into the New Jersey Senate, which provides for bigger salaries for policemen in cities of the second class, which includes Plainfield. The bill has been passed in the Senate and House and the referendum will be submitted to the people for a vote, probably at next fall's election.

The provision calls for the following wage scale: Inspectors, not less than $2,000 a year; captains, not less than $2,000 a year; captain of detectives, not less than $1,800 per year; lieutenants, not less than $1,700 a year; detective sergeants, not less than $1,600 a year; roundsmen, not less than $1,500 a year; and patrolmen, not less than $900 the first year, $1,000 the second year; $1,100 the third yard, and $1,300 the fourth year and thereafter.

EDISON TALKING PICTURES PLEASED CAPACITY AUDIENCE

Owing to the great success of the Edison talking pictures, which were demonstrated at the Y. M. C. A., yesterday afternoon and evening, for the first time in this city, General Secretary Herbert E. Parker has arranged for another exhibition Friday and Saturday, April 3 and 4. At yesterday's exhibitions there was a capacity audience, both afternoon and evening and everyone appeared to be delighted with the unique performance. At the net exhibition all new pictures will be shown.

TUTTLE WANTS ANOTHER TERM

Fifth Congressional Representative Says He Will Seek Re-election.

ACKERMAN WILL RUN

Senator Pierce May Be Opposed By Mayor P. H. Stewart—County Registrar F. H. Smith Will Seek Renomination.

The formal announcement that Congressman William E. Tuttle will seek a re-election next fall, has started a discussion among the political gossips of other parties regarding the various candidates for office this fall. Probably nothing is of more interest to Plainfield than the fact that former Senator Ernest R. Ackerman will run for Congress, opposing Mr. Tuttle, whom it is conceded will be renominated, although Thomas J. Pierson, of Elizabeth, expects to oppose him. Mr. Ackerman has not made formal announcement of his candidacy as yet, but it has been learned that he has decided to do as his friends ask, and seek the nomination in the Republican party. He has not an inconsiderable support among Progressives, and it may be that the platform which he will put forth will be so satisfactory that the new party will not present a candidate against the former Senator.

Another bit of political gossip which will be a surprise to many Plainfielders is that County Registrar Frank H. Smith will in all probability be a candidate for re-election. It had been expected that Mr. Smith would retire but his friends have urged him to get in the race again, and the chances are now strong that he will. While some opposition may develop to Mr. Smith, it is pointed out that he has always conducted the office in a business-like manner, and although some people oppose him for political activity, no one disputes that as an officeholder he has done his full duty. As yet no one has come forward in the Democratic ranks to seek the office, but it is said that Charles A. Trimbie, of Elizabeth, is hankering for the job on the Progressive ticket.

Plainfield is also interested in the senatorship. Mayor Percy H. Stewart is said to be looked upon with favor by a large number of the leaders in the party now in power, and it is more than likely that he will be made its candidate at the September primaries. He will undoubtedly be opposed by the present incumbent, Carlton B. Pierce, of Cranford, and there is some talk that if Pierce is nominated without opposition in the Republican party, he may receive the endorsement of the Progressives. Mr. Pierce has a record which is thoroughly in keeping with the principles of the Progressive party, and it is pointed out by his friends that the only way in which he differs from every member of the new party is in the fact that he remained within the Republican ranks.

With three men from this city seeking nomination on various tickets there is liable to be plenty of interest in the primary campaign of this fall.

To quiet beliefs that he would not be a candidate for re-election this year, Congressman William E. Tuttle has declared himself. The direct cause of this action was "the harmless guess of an Elizabeth newspaper" that the Congressman would retire at the end of his term and join the ranks of aspirants for Senator James E. Martine's seat. In stating his own position, the Congressman says some handsome things about his friend, Mr. Martine, and opines that he will be unbeatable in the Democratic Senatorial primary of 1916. In part Mr. Tuttle says:

"To be 'mentioned' for the Senatorship has come to be the rule, rather than the exception and I am treating it seriously only because it offers the opportunity to make an authoritative statement to a constituency that has perhaps honored me beyond my deserts.

"It is hardly necessary to say that the Senatorship has not brightened or clouded my political horizon, or that my personal loyalty to and friendship for my old friend, Senator Martine, has not abated in the slightest degree. His was the personality around which the fight to establish the popular choice of United States Senators revolved in New Jersey. He has been true to every obligation of his high place in the national council; he is, in my opinion, stronger with the masses of the people of our State than ever before, and he will be unbeatable in the open primary of our party for renomination.

"My own position can be more briefly stated. I shall be a candidate for renomination for Congress in the coming fall primary of the Democratic party with no other excuse or platform than my record of service."

WANTS PUBLIC AUDIT OF COLLEGE BOOKS

W. de LaR. Anderson in Interview Discusses Question of Taxing Institution.

As the result of the decision of the North Plainfield Township Committee to subject property owned by the trustees of Mt. St. Mary College to taxation and to place it on the assessment books of Somerset county considerable feeling has been aroused between the two factions and as a result the matter will probably be taken before the County Board of Taxation.

Assessor Bodin, of North Plainfield Township, is inclined to believe that the property is free from taxation and maintains that he will forfeit his position rather than act under the instructions of the committee in this matter. Former Assemblyman William de LaR. Anderson prepared the motion in question and when seen by a Plainfield Press reporter this morning he said:

"The resolution passed regarding the assessment on Mt. St. Mary College so far as it related to college buildings was passed on the belief by the Township Committee that the institution was one whisch was run for profit. If the authorities of the institution will allow the township to have a public accountant audit their books and the township authorities take testimony they will be glad to rectify or change the resolution which has been passed according to the public accountant's report. As to the statements in the Plainfield Press of yesterday that I personally opposed Francis Bodin's running for Assembly, I would like to say that if Somerset county can afford the luxury of sending a Democrat to the Legislature for another term there is no other Democrat who I would rather see have it than Francis Bodin. I would go so far as to say that he would be a far superior man in unselfish service to the county than our present assemblyman. As to his statement that I have taken this action against Mt. St. Mary for political motives I would say that everything that I have ever done or have attempted to do for the public good the same accusation has been made against me. I would say that people who work for political advancement never take a decided stand one way or the other. My position is always a decided one, right or wrong."

MINSTREL SHOW MADE A BIG HIT

Netherwood Residents' Association Affair Enjoyed by a Large Crowd.

An audience that packed the limited quarters of the Netherwood Hall, attended the first annual minstrel show presented under the auspices of the Netherwood Residents' Association, last night, and the black-faced comedians furnished an excellent program of minstrelsy. Rapturous applause from the enthusiastic gathering was the best evidence of the manner in which the affair was received. Each number was accorded a fine reception and in every instance the soloists were forced to respond to encores.

Visiting talent assisted the local artists in their presentation and the affair was all of the success anticipated. Topical hits and humorous stories particularly adaptable to civic enterprise in the Netherwood section kept the audience in a constant roar of laughter during the two hours it took to disperse of the wit.

Assisting the Netherwood cork face performers were Master Charles Pablucia and Ward C. Hawley, of New York city, who gave a creditable imitation of Harry Lauder. The latter number was the hit of the evening, and put a fitting finale on the show as a whole. As each guest entered the hall he was given a check with a number on it and these tags were thrown into a large basket for the country store feature that was held at the conclusion of the entertainment. As the drawings were made the holders of the lucky pasteboards were called to the stage and presented with country store products such as butter, poultry and vegetables.

The Plainfield High School orchestra, under the leadership of Mrs. J. C. Evans, furnished music for the occasion, and rendered several overtures that were well received. Those in the cast were Charles L. Lewis, interlocutor; A. L. Seidler, "Bones," Sewell Ulrich, "Sambo;" and a chorus composed of Messrs. Thiers, Smith, Cutting, Wagner, Hadley, Tebbs, Chace, Gunnison, Poucher, Buner, Meeker and Uhler. Charles Leonard Lewis, Jr., acted as accompanist.

The program included the following numbers: Overture, "A la Tango," A. L. Seidler and Sewell Ulrich; opening chorus, by the company; ballad, "When the Twilight Comes to Kiss the Rose Good-night," by Mr. Thiers; ballad, "In the Garden of My Heart," by Mr. Smith; ballad, "Moonlight Bay," by Mr. Wagner; instrumental selection, by the chorus; ballad, "Drink to Me Only with Thine Eyes," by a double quartet; coon song, "Mammy Jinny's Jubilee," by Mr. Ulrich; ballad, "When You Are the World to Me," by Mr. Cutting; coon song, "Let It Alone," by A. L. Seidler; closing chorus, "Stars and Stripes," by the company; overture by the Plainfield High School orchestra.

The entertainment committee was composed of Charles L. Lewis, chairman; A. Clinton Wilmerding, S. B. Joost, R. J. Poucher, Stanley E. Gunnison and Arthur L. Seidler.

If the kidneys are at fault

Set them working aright with Doan's Kidney Pills.

Here is Plainfield proof of their merit.

Mrs. O. C. Moore, 57 Manning avenue, Plainfield, N. J., says: "I endured much misery from backache, which was caused by my kidneys. Many nights I was unable to rest at all and in the morning, my limbs were so stiff and sore that I could hardly get out of bed. Whenever I caught the least cold, it settled on my kidneys and any strain on my back made the aches and pains worse. I was treated by physicians, but their medicine didn't help me and it was so until I got Doan's Kidney Pills at Randolph's drug store, last I had an hope of getting rid of the trouble. They made me feel like a different person and I have never had any serious trouble since."

JUNIOR ENDEAVORERS OBSERVE ANNIVERSARY

There was a large gathering of friends of the Junior Christian Endeavors, of Evona chapel, last evening, when the seventh anniversary of that organization was observed. The devotional exercises were conducted by Leonard Denick, while the address of welcome was delivered by Miss Maude Lancaster. Violin selections were given by Clarence Casemore.

Robert Love, superintendent of the chapel, gave a short talk covering the most interesting history of the society, telling of the various activities of the workers. Mrs. Lucie Rising also gave a helpful talk on the subject, "Workers for Christ."

WOMAN'S ASSOCIATION GIVE BIRTHDAY PARTY

A very successful birthday party and sale was held, last night, under the auspices of the Women's Association of the Congregational church. One of the unique features of the evening was the lighting of candles on a birthday cake especially prepared for those whose birthdays occurred in March. By a registry compiled of those present, it was ascertained that the greatest number were born in November.
